U. S. WOULD ABANDON SHIPS NEARLY COMPLETED

Under the Formula, America Agrees to Do Away With 30 Vessels of 843,740 Tons, Britain Would Scrap 19 of 583,375 Tons and Japan 17 of 448,928 Tonnage.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—America today at the opening of the International Conference on Armanent Reduction laid her cards face up on the table, for the assembled delegates and all the world to see and appraise.

Without the slightest advance notice, America proposed a program of ruthless battleship scrapping that dazed the delegates at the conference table and electrified the audience that packed the hall.

What was expected to be a session devoted only to the formalities of getting the conference under way, turned out to be a session rich in its promise of a new world era. Through her spokesman at the green table, Secretary of State Hughes, America, boldly showed the way toward an effective limitation of competitive naval armaments, by telling in concrete facts and figures exactly what she would do under an agreement with the two other great naval Powers, Great Britain and Japan. It is doubtful whether, in the whole history of diplomacy, there has been a bolder or a mose masterful stroke at any international assemblage of governmental representatives.

Hughes' Offer Like Lightning Flash.

President Harding had made a graceful speech of welcome and had been frequently applauded. Particularly had the audience risen to every reference to the horrors of modern warfare and every expression of hope that war might be ended. But there was no hope in the mind of the most optimistic that out of the session would come such a definite and sweeping plan as Hughes set forth. He had been expected to make a speech along the usual lines, touching on the work before the conference only in the most general way. The first part of his address was in this key. Some few of the audience even left the hall, under the impression that nothing of material consequence was to be done.

A rather heavy atmosphere of officialdom hung over the conference. Suddenly came the lightning flash, a bolt from the diplomatic blue. Thrill after thrill shot through the crowd as Secretary Hughes, veering away from generalities, disclosed the details of the American plan. Hughes had got out of the realm of mere diplomacy, into the realm of straightforward simplicity. It was plain that he was talking not alone to the representatives of the nine Powers at the green table, but to the American people and the peoples of the whole world.

Again and again, the crowd applauded as Hughes talked in simple language of the scrapping of this and that battleship, calling them by name; of the tonnage that would be sacrificed and the tonnage that would remain; of the definite agreement into which the nations would enter with regard to replacements. Here was talk in sharp contrast with the welter of words written and uttered about the problems and the special interests and all the collateral issues involved in the conference; here was talk that the average man could understand.

Nothing of It Known in Advance.

The foreign delegates were no better off than the rest of the audience. None knew in advance what was coming. Hughes had slipped away from the ceremonies at Arlington yesterday to return to the city and write his speech. It was not given to the printer until late last night, and no advance copies were distributed. Perhaps he had carefully calculated the psychological effect of bringing out the American proposal as an utter surprise.

The temper of the audience, which consisted in large part of members of Congress, was made manifest by the ringing applause which greeted the Secretary, when, after reviewing futile efforts of the past to bring about disarmament, he said in measured tones:

"The time has come, and this conference has been called, not for general resolutions or mutual advice, but for action."

It was the word "action" that set fire to the emotions of the crowd.

Fred Kassman Held Up in Front of 4226 College Avenue, Beaten and Forced Into Hallway.

The robbers obtained approximately $2250 in a holdup last night at 1:30 o'clock of Fred H. Kassmann, 38 years old, of 2848 Michigan avenue, a collector for the Kroger Baking and Grocery Co., in front of 4226 College avenue. They inflicted several scalp wounds on Kassmann with their revolver butts.

Kassmann had left the Kroger store at College and Carter avenues and was proceeding to another store at 2909 Lee avenue, when three men stepped from a hallway. One stepped in front of him, pointing a revolver into his abdomen: "Keep your mouth shut," the man said with an oath. The two other men stepped behind him and, pinioning his arms, forced him into a hallway between 4226 and 4230 College avenue.

The man in front of him struck him on his head and one of the men behind him struck him a second time. "Hit him again," said one of the men behind. "Aw, he's had enough," the man in front replied. They took a satchel in which Cassmann has been carrying his collections which he said he believed to have been about $2250 and $200 in checks.

Kassmann staggered into a nearby residence and the occupants called the police, who took Cassman to a hospital, where his wounds were dressed. Later he gave a detailed description of the man in front and was taken to his home.

Grocery Company's Office Held Up

The George-Gesellschap of 2212A Dodier street walked into the North Market Police Station at 9:10 p. m. and reported that as he was on his way home from a Kroger store at 2216 Dodier street, of which he is manager, three men had robbed him of $82, the store's receipts. The man, he said, stepped from an alley on Twenty-third street between Montgomery street and St. Louis avenue.

Two Men; $615 Taken.

Two robbers obtained approximately $615 from the office of the Marquette Baking Co. at 1202 North Broadway highway yesterday at 5:15 p. m.

Upon their entry they asked Miss Margaret Davin, who was in charge, if there was any chance for work. Following her to call the manager, John Schenkamp of 4263A Fair avenue,

Red caps, the universal sign of ushers in railroad stations throughout the country, are now being worn by the ushers at the Union Station for the first time. Since the Union Station was built the ushers there have worn gray caps to match their uniforms. This, according to a number of the ushers, had deprived them of many a tip, as travelers, accustomed to ushers wearing red caps, have not recognized them as ushers and have done without their services.

List of Ships U. S. Would Scrap and Their Status Now

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

UNDER the Hughes proposal the United States would scrap all the capital ships of the 1916 building program save one, the Maryland, which has been completed. This means that 15 capital ships, nine battleships and six cruisers in various stages of completion would go to the junk pile. Two of the 15—the Colorado and Washington—have already been launched, and a third, the West Virginia, is due to be launched next week. On the 15 the United States has already spent $332,000,000. Their tonnage when completed would be 61,000. The 15 capital ships, the places at which they are building and the percentages of completion on November are as follows:

Battleships.

TRAFFIC ORDER RESCINDED

Police Not to Enforce "Stop" Signal Law Until It Is Construed.

Chief of Police O'Brien announced yesterday he had rescinded his order of two weeks ago which at the time instructed policemen to begin tomorrow to make arrests of drivers of closed automobiles which had not been equipped with "stop" signals.

The Chief said that the new automobile law, which went into effect Nov. 2, was in such shape that enforcement of its provisions would be impossible at this time. He said he would await definite interpretation of the entire law from the Attorney-General before setting a time for the arrest of violators.

FIRST ARMAMENT SESSION NOTABLE AS PICTURE AND FOR CORDIAL SPIRIT

GALLERIES ADD TO WARMTH OF FEELING BY CALLING ON MANY NOTABLES TO SPEAK

Balfour Stirs Great Audience to Prolonged Applause at Opening in D. A. R. Memorial Hall.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Seldom has a conference of nations assembled in an atmosphere of greater cordiality than that which enveloped the opening session of the armament limitation conference today.

From the moment Secretary Hughes called the conference to order until the last delegate had filed out of the hall, the deference everywhere apparent was a notable feature of the proceedings. Even the astonishment of the delegates and spectators at the naval reduction proposal of the American Government failed to halt the exchange of courtesies or develop any manifestation of doubt that the negotiations would be crowned with success.

Arthur J. Balfour, head of the British delegation, was the first among the foreign delegates to strike the general note of harmony. He stirred the whole body of delegates and spectators to prolonged applause when he proposed that, as an extraordinary tribute to Secretary Hughes and the United States, the Secretary of State act as chairman by common consent and without a formal election.

Later, when the conference apparently had concluded its business, the galleries helped the spirit of good feeling along by calling for one after another of the distinguished foreign delegates until every head of a visiting delegation had made a speech.

Briand Impromptu Speaker.

Premier Briand of France was the first to be thus brought to his feet by the spectators. Then followed similar demands for Prince Tokugawa, head of the Japanese, and for representatives of Italy, China, Belgium, the Netherlands and Portugal. Members of the Senate and House took a leading part in the spontaneous demonstrations.

Premier Briand spoke in French, but with a warmth that moved many who could not understand him. He declared France was entering the conference "with all her will and with all her heart," and was ready to make any sacrifice for success provided only her own safety was kept secure.

"Here with our firm friends," continued the French Premier, "we shall speak heart to heart and looking into each other's eyes, and we shall tell you in what situation we find ourselves and we shall let you know all we can do."

Only a few sentences in English were spoken by Prince Tokugawa in declaring the readiness of the Japanese Government and people to enter wholeheartedly into the negotiations.

"All humanity," he said, "is interested in the great purpose for which this meeting has been called. We are here to compose difficulties, not to create them. We mean seriously to promote true and honest friendship among nations, not to impair it. We propose, not to prescribe terms or to dictate a constitution to a dubious world, but to carry out the plan dictates of common sense.

"The world needs peace. It calls for political and economic stability. And to co-operate with the Powers here so worthily represented for the accomplishment of such a lofty end, under the guidance of the distinguished presiding officer, will be for Japan a source of greatest pleasure."

Speaks for the Italians.

Senator Schanzer, speaking for the Italian delegation, assured the conference that Italy will be second to no other nation in working with faith and diligence to the end that the purpose which has inspired your President in calling us to this assembly may achieve a full triumph for the good of all mankind."

For the Belgians Baron de Cartier declared his country would work in the conference "with all her heart." Minister Sze, Jonker Van Karnebeck and Viscount D'Alte made similar pledges in the name of China, Netherlands and Portugal, respectively.

Fresh with memories of the soldier dead of yesterday's ceremony at Arlington, the conference met in its first session to seek "the rule under which reason and righteousness shall prevail." In Memorial Hall of the Daughters of the American Revolution statesmen and diplomats of five great Powers and representatives of four more gathered. The opening hour was set for 10:30, but notables began arriving soon after 10, to hear President Harding's opening address and to form their permanent organization with Secretary Hughes as chairman. The galleries allotted to representatives of official and diplomatic life contained many notable figures. The hall presented a colorful picture as the delegations and spectators began to arrive.

Conference Table Square U.

In the center of the big room was the conference table, shaped as a square U, its top covered with bright green felt. A gray desk blotted with a tray of pens and an inkwell lay before the chairman's place for each delegation.

The American delegation had chairs across the west end with the French on the right and the British on the left. To the right of the French were the places allotted to the Japanese, while the Italians had a corresponding position directly across.

At the foot of the table and at smaller ones were the Portuguese, Belgians, Dutch and Chinese. Advisers had chairs of gold and velour directly back of their delegations. Behind the American section were draped the flags of the nine nations. Senator Lodge was the first of the American delegation to arrive. He walked about the room meeting members of the American Advisory Committee, much as he talks with colleagues in the Senate Chamber.

In Full Dress Uniform.

Military and Naval attaches appeared in full dress uniforms, making a show of plumes and spangles such as Washington has not seen since the war. Almost all the others were in the conventional dress of the diplomatic service. Vice President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge and Speaker Gillett of the House and Mrs. Gillett occupied a box to the right rear of the American delegation. Mrs. George Maynard Minor of Connecticut, president-general of the D. A. R., had a seat of honor in a box with a party.

The first applause, hearty and generous, broke when Secretary Hughes and the entire American delegation took their seats at 10:25 o'clock.

Secretary Hughes sat in the center of the table, with a white slab of marble and a small gavel in front of him. At his right, in order were Senator Lodge, Elihu Root and Senator Underwood. On the Secretary's left was Lord Balfour.

The audience rose and cheered as Mrs. Harding took her place at the front of the box where the Vice President sat. The President came in at 10:33 o'clock and immediately Secretary Hughes called the conference to order.

Prayer was offered by the President's pastor, the Rev. W. S. Abernethy of Calvary Baptist Church.

Immediately on the conclusion of the prayer, President Harding rose and began delivery of his address.

The President had stood during the prayer, with bowed head, between Secretary Hughes and the pastor. At the conclusion of the prayer, Secretary Hughes, stepping forward and lifting his hand, had said:

"The President of the United States."

President Reads Slowly.

Mr. Harding read his speech slowly and deliberately from small printed pages which he held in the hollow of his left hand. With his right he punctuated his statements with driving gestures. The first applause came when the President declared that the conference must have a "signal influence" on the fortunes of the world.

There was more applause when Mr. Harding asked how civilization ever could justify the destruction caused by the last great war. Still again he was answered by loud clapping when he said war "should be outlawed" and the resources of the world turned into constructive channels.

There was silence as the President pronounced the keynote of the conference.

The delegates at the main table followed the reading, line by line, from copies they had.

The audience and some of the delegates came to their feet applauding when Mr. Harding declared America wanted "less of armament and none of war" and wanted to work to that end.

There was a minute of applause when the President concluded. The demonstration was ended by Mr. Harding's departure from the hall.

As the President went, Secretary Hughes announced that French and English would be the languages used. The President's speech had been printed in both.

Hughes Is Nominated.

Hughes' statement was repeated by an interpreter. Premier Briand replied in French, thanking him. The crowd came to its feet as Balfour, amidst a salvo of applause, nominated Hughes for chairman of the conference.

"The President of the United States," said Balfour, "in a most noble address, has given the conference a lead. He has provided it with a motto—simplicity, honesty, honor. We cannot carry out the plans outlined by the President unless we have a chairman.

"The nation which invites the conference and offers hospitality shall provide its chairman and presiding genius. I think the Secretary of State has not only these technical rights, but personal qualifications which enable him to carry out these duties."

Secretary Hughes, acclaimed by the conference as its permanent chairman, then delivered his address:

Hughes said the feeling "that we should meet the expectations of a watching world was the best augury of the success of the conference."

There was a sharp, quick round of applause when Hughes, speaking with great emphasis, declared the present was no time for mutual resolution or advice, but a time for action. Delegates on the floor and Senators in the galleries applauded again when he declared there should be a naval holiday and no naval construction for ten years.

At the end of Hughes' speech, the conference and spectators again arose and applauded and then a program of organization was quickly adopted.

John W. Garrett of Baltimore, Md., former Minister to the Netherlands, was unanimously elected Secretary-General at the suggestion of Hughes. Also at the chairman's suggestion, it was agreed that the heads of delegations should compose a committee on program for the conference.

Briand Makes Speech.

When Chairman Hughes suggested that a motion to adjourn until Tuesday would be in order, the galleries began shouting the name of the French Premier.

"Briand," they chorused until the distinguished head of the French delegation arose to his feet amid a thunder of applause to express his gratitude at the friendly spirit of Washington.

Briand made his speech from the end of the long, green table, and touched many of those unable to understand him. He thanked President Harding and paid tribute to him and to Secretary Hughes.

Before Briand's speech could be translated into English, members of the Senate and House sent up a demand for a speech from Japan.

Answering the applause, Prince Tokugara spoke briefly in English saying Japan was deeply concerned in the great purpose for which the conference was called.

Then came a cry for Italy. Senator Schanzer of the Italian delegation responded briefly in English.

There was applause as Senator Lodge was introduced, the crowd looking for a speech, but the Senator, smiling, turned the applause into laughter by briefly announcing "I move we adjourn."

That ended the first open session—at 12:22 o'clock, until 11 o'clock Tuesday.

Great Council Table at the Conference for the Limitation of Armaments

Lettering has been placed on the photograph to show where the delegates of the five great nations will sit. The representatives of the four smaller nations will sit at a separate table near the open end of the main council table.

Hughes' Proposals to Scrap Ships Stuns Delegates

The Congressional section of the gallery rose virtually en masse and cheered. Throughout the hall people got to their feet and joined in the demonstration. Back of the American delegation, the American advisory commission rose and made known their approval. General Pershing, one of the advisers, clapped his hands vigorously, as he had already done several times when the President or the Secretary of State made reference to the horrors of war and urged that the nations find the road to world peace. In the press section, William J. Bryan and William Allen White rose in an ecstacy of enthusiasm and shouted to one another.

"That's something real," ejaculated the Commoner, and the Kansas editor, his face beaming, called back, "Yes, yes, they mean business."

The demonstration was repeated several times, reaching a climax when Secretary of State Hughes, coming to the first concrete proposal on his program, urged that the nations declare a naval holiday for ten years. If the foreign delegates had had any doubts as to the attitude of the American people toward disarmament in the interest of world peace, they must have been removed by the spontaneity and the volume of the applause that followed the announcemnt. The crowd appeared to have been lifted to an emotional plane comparable to that on which yesterday's ceremonies for America's dead were conducted.

Submits Concrete Proposition.

"I am happy to say," proceeded the Secretary, "that I am at liberty to go beyond these general propositions and, on behalf of the American delegation, acting under the instructions of the President of the United States, to submit to you a concrete proposition for an agreement for the limitation of naval armament."

Again the enthusiasm of the crowd broke forth. Then with tense expectancy it leaned forward in the obvious desire to miss no word of the Secretary's statement. He spoke in a clear voice that could be heard throughout the hall. He used no flourish of oratory, but spoke with an emphasis betokening full realization of the momentous character of his words.

As yet, despite the proposal of a naval holiday double the length of that urged by Senator Borah, few in the audience dreamed of the extent to which the proposals would go. The announcement, therefore, that the United States, "in the interest of an immediate limitation of naval armament," was willing to scrap 15 ships now building, on which it had already spent $330,000,000 and 15 other capital ships—thirty ships of a total tonnage of 845,740—took the assemblage completely off its feet.

The full significance of what the United States proposes to do if Great Britain and Japan consent to the proportionate reduction contemplated by the American plan, sinks in when one realizes that the plan carries with it practically the entire abandonment of the 1916 capital ship building program, which was to have given this country the greatest navy in the world. Only one of the 16 great ships in the 1916 program has been completed. The United States offer to send to the junk pile all the rest of them, though work on several has reached an advanced stage. Two of the ships, in fact, have been launched, and other will be ready to slide down from the ways in a week. These, like all the others, would be scrapped.

In addition, the United States offers to junk 15 ships now in commission, having a total tonnage of 227,740.

Leaves U. S. and Britain Equal.

The proposed reductions would peg the American and the British navies on a virtual parity. The United States would have left 18 capital ships of a tonnage of 500,650—much less than half, that is, of the tonnage she would have without the proposed scrapping. Great Britain would be permitted to retain 22 ships of a total tonnage of 604,450. The advantage in number and tonnage on the side of Great Britain would be offset by the greater average of her ships. Japan would be definitely pegged in third place, with 10 ships of a total tonnage of 299,700.

The relative positions of the three navies would be maintained by the proviso that Great Britain be limited to a maximum replacement tonnage of 500,000, the United States to the same amount and Japan to 300,000.

The Powers would agree to lay down no replacement tonnage until 10 years after the date of the agreement; there would be, in other words, a "naval holiday" of that length. Furthermore, the three Powers would replace no capital ship till it was at least 20 years old, and finally, no ship of more than 35,000 tons would be built in replacement.

Advantage for America.

The presentation of the first definite plan gives America an advantage which she did not have at Paris. There, as frequently has been pointed out by commentators on the peace conference, it was always the British who wer ready with suggestions worked out on paper when a problem came up for a solution. Discussion then turned, naturally, upon the British proposal, and the scheme eventually accepted was likely to be based very largely on the British ideas. Here it is the American plan around which the negotiations must center.

It is too much to expect that the plan, even if accepted in its fundamentals, will be taken as it now is. Details will have to be worked out and adjustments made in conferences around the table. There is reasonable ground for expectation, however, that Great Britain and Japan will accept the main features.

With the whole world crying for disarmament, it is believed the foreign delegates would have difficulty in explaining to their peoples a refusal to meet an offer, in which the United States, on the face of the plan, goes more than half way.

There is solid satisfaction in Washington that Secretary of State Hughes at the outset took control of the conference and began to shape its proceedings on simple, workable lines. That the presiding officer of the conference, in his address of acceptance of the chairmanship, should have come forward with a definite program was not exactly according to diplomatic custom, but, if the applause which greeted Hughes' statement is any criterion, the innovation will be gratifying to the people both of this and of other nations.

Far Eastern Situation a Factor.

The first reaction to the Hughes statement in British quarters appeared to be decidedly favorable. The suggestion came from a responsible source, however, that success of the American plan may be contingent upon America's agreeing to take a minimum commitment in the Far East. In other words, it was said, America must show her willingness to work with Great Britain and Japan for the establishment of a responsible government in China, the irregular armies of China must be disarmed and the finances of the country must be placed under international control. Is America willing to enter such an engagement? The fact that this question is being asked indicates the ramification of the disarmament question into the Far Eastern field, and suggests the line that Great Britain and Japan may take in their reply to the Hughes proposals.

Like the British, the Japanese appeared to be favorably impressed but it is impossible, of course, to say now what their final attitude will be. Some of their unofficial spokesmen said the Hughes statement came as a complete surprise and would have to be studied by the Japanese military and naval experts before an opinion could be ventured.

SAVING OF $150,000,000 SEEN UNDER HUGHES' PROGRAM

Treasury Officials Believe Reduction of at Least This Amount in Naval Expense Is Possible if Proposals Are Adopted.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Treasury experts anticipate a "tremendous saving" to the Government under the Hughes proposal to abandon all capital ship-building programs. While officials of the department declined to set an exact figure, it was pointed out that capital ship construction is costing the Government this year $150,000,000, or $60,000,000 more than the figure placed on the expenditure by Chairman Kelley of the House Appropriations Subcommittee for the Navy.

The condition of the navy following the proposed reductions would be such that operating and upkeep expenses would be reduced substantially, treasury officials believe. This would mean not only a saving on expenditure but further reduction in naval appropriations all along the line. Although no specific figure was mentioned, experts of the department think the benefit to the taxpayers, if the Hughes program is adopted, will be something more than $150,000,000, the figure mentioned by Chairman Kelley. The $150,000,000 reduction from the current estimated expenditure of $475,000,000 would mean an annual cost of $225,000,000, which would be decreased by the trend of prices back to normal. The navy last year spent $550,000,000.

Numerous suggestions are being made as to what might be done with the money thus saved. Among these is the application to a soldier bonus. Such a policy, it was indicated today, would be frowned on by the Treasury. Officials pointed out that this would be among the less advisable uses at present.

Text of President's Address Opening Arms Conference

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.

The text of President Harding's address at the opening of the conference on limitation of armaments follows:

Mr. Secretary and Members of the Conference, Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is a great and happy privilege to bid the delegates to this conference a cordial welcome to the capital of the United States of America. It is not only a satisfaction to greet you because we were lately participants in a common cause, in which shared sacrifices and sorrows and triumphs brought our nations more closely together, but it is gratifying to address you as the spokesmen for nations whose convictions and attending actions have as much to do with the weal or woe of all mankind.

It is not possible to over-appraise the importance of such a conference. It is no unseemly boast, no disparagement of other nations, which, though not represented, are held in highest respect, to declare that the conclusions of this body will have a signal influence on all human progress—on the fortunes of the world.

Here is a meeting, I can well believe, which is an earnest of the awakened conscience of twentieth century civilization. It is not a convention of remorse, nor a session of sorrow. It is not the conference of victors to define terms of settlement. Nor is it a council of nations seeking to remake humankind. It is rather a coming together from all parts of the earth to apply the better attributes of mankind to minimize the faults in our international relationships.

Word of War-Wearied World

Speaking as official sponsor for the invitation, I think I may say the call is not of the United States of America alone, it is rather the spoken word of a war-wearied world, struggling for restoration, hungering and thirsting for better relationship; of humanity crying for relief and craving assurance of lasting peace.

It is easy to understand this world-wide aspiration. The glory of triumph, the rejoicing in achievement, the love of liberty, the devotion to country, the pangs of sorrow, the burdens of debt, the desolation of ruined industrials—all these are appraised alike in all lands. Here in the United States we are but freshly turned from the burial of an unknown American soldier, when a nation sorrowed while paying him tribute. Whether it was spoken or not, a hundred millions of our people were summarizing the inexcusable cause, the incalculable cost, the unspeakable sacrifices and the unutterable sorrows, and there was the ever-impelling question: How can humanity justify or God forgive?

Human hate demands no such toll; ambition and greed must be denied it. If misunderstanding must take the blame, then let us banish it and let understanding rule and make good will regnant everywhere.

Liberty and Justice.

All of us demand liberty and justice. There cannot be one without the other, and they must be held the unquestioned possession of all peoples. Inherent rights are of God and the tragedies of the world originate in their attempted denial. The world today is infringing their enjoyment by arming to defend or deny, when simple sanity calls for their recognition through common understanding.

Out of the cataclysm of the world war came new fellowships, new convictions, new aspirations. It is ours to make the most of them. A world staggering with debt needs its burden lifted. Humanity which has been shocked by wanton destruction would minimize the agencies of that destruction. Contemplating the measureless cost of war and the continuing burden of armament, all thoughtful peoples wish for real limitation of armament and would like war outlawed. In soberest reflection the world's hundreds of millions who pay in peace and die in war wish their statesmen would turn the expenditures for destruction into means of construction, aimed at a higher rate for those who live and the morrow after.

It is not alone that the world cannot readjust itself and set aside the excess burdens without relief from the leading men. War has grown progressively cruel and more destructive from the first recorded conflict to this pregnant day, the reverse order would become our boasted civilization.

A Welcome With Unselfish Hands.

Gentlemen of the world, the United States welcomes you with unselfish hands. We harbor no fears, we have no enemies to serve; we suspect no enemy; we contemplate no conquest. We are content with what we have, we covet nothing which is another's, we only wish to do with you the finer, nobler thing which nation can do alone.

We wish to sit with you at the table of international understanding and good will. In all conscience we are eager to serve you frankly and invite your offer co-operation. The world demands a sober contemplation of the existing order and the realization that there can be no return without sacrifice, not by one of us, but by all of us.

I do not mean surrender of rights, or narrowed freedom, or denied aspirations, or ignored national necessities. Our own public would no more ask for less than it would give. No one need be humbled, no nation submerged, but I would plead submergence of minds concerning all of us to less preparation for war and more enjoyment of unfortunate peace.

The higher hopes come of the spirit of our coming together. It is but just to recognize differing needs and peculiar positions. Nothing can be accomplished by disregard of national aspirations. Rather, we should come together to remove the cause of apprehension. This is not to be done in intrigue. Greater assurance is found in the open, changes of simple honesty and directness, among men resolved to accomplish as becomes leaders among nations, when the situation itself has come to its crucial test.

When Government Fails.

It is not to be challenged that Government fails when the success of its cost robs the people of the way to happiness and the opportunity to achieve. If the finer sentiments were not moving, the cold, hard facts of oppressive cost and the eloquence of economics would urge us to reduce our armaments. If the concept of a better order does not appeal, then let us ponder the burden and the blight of continued competition.

It is not to be denied that the world has swung along through the ages without heeding the call from the kindlier hearts of men. But the same world never before was so tragically brought to realization of the utter brutality of passion's sway, when reason and conscience and fellowship point a nobler way.

"Want None of War."

I can speak officially only for our United States. Our hundred millions frankly want less of armament and none of war. Wholly free from guile, and in our own minds that we harbor no unworthy designs, we ask credit the world with the same good intent. So I welcome you not alone in good will and high purpose, but with high faith.

We are met for a service to mankind. In all simplicity, in all honesty and all humility, may be written here the goals of a world conscience relieved by the consuming fires of war and made more sensitive by the anxious aftermath. I hope that understanding which will emphasize the guarantees of peace, and for commitments of less burdens and a better order which will tranquillize the world. In such an accomplishment there will be added glory to your flags and ours, and the rejoicing of mankind which will make the transcending music of all succeeding time.

SCHANZER PRAISES FRANKNESS OF U. S.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Senator Schanzer, head of the Italian delegation, said to the Associated Press:

"No other conference was ever started with so much courage, frankness and clearness. The precision with which Secretary of State Hughes outlined the American proposal on the limitation of naval armaments is most wonderful. I must manifest all my satisfaction for the sincerity and broad-mindedness with which America laid the cards on the table, has laid the question of limitation of naval armaments, not only before the conference, but before the public opinion of the entire world."

NAVY SECRETARY HOPES FOR APPROVAL

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The American armament plan outlined by Secretary Hughes to the Armament Conference today was characterized by Secretary of the Navy Denby "as the approved plan of the American administration."

"The Navy Department has been in co-operation with the American delegation in furnishing information and in the preparation of the plan," said Denby. "I cordially approve the American proposals. I hope they will be approved by the conference and meet the wishes of the peoples represented in Washington."

Wells Says America Sees in Funeral to Unknown Soldier a Warning Against Future Wars

Famous British Author Found It Deeply Impressive but Note of Sadness on Similar Occasions in England and France Was Missing.

By H. G. WELLS

Written for the Post-Dispatch, the New York World and the Chicago Tribune.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—I am writing this just after my return from the funeral, in the National Cemetery, of the American unknown soldier at Arlington, a very stately and moving ceremony, under the bright blue sky and the cold, keen air of a Virginia November day. The body had been lying in state at the Capitol and it was carried through Washington to the cemetery at the head of a great procession in which the Supreme Court, the Cabinet, Senators, members of the House of Representatives, war veterans and a multitude of societies marched on foot, a march of nearly two hours and a half duration.

Improved by Civil War Veterans.

Much of this gathering was of the substance of all such processions, but one or two of the contingents were rich with association and suggestion. There were 50 or 60, I should guess, very old men, bent, white headed—one with a conspicuously long white beard—veterans of a civil war that was fought out to an end before I was born. They came close to a contingent of men who had been specially decorated in the great war, erect and eager, still on the better side of the prime of life.

These elder men had fought in a great fight against a division, a separation, that today, thanks to their sacrifice, has become inconceivable. They had fought to seal the Federal union of what were the warring states. The young men who marched before them had fought in a war upon the greater stage of the whole world.

Some day the tale of those abundant heroes will have shrunken to the dimensions of that little band of pathetic and glorious old men. Will they live to as complete an assurance that their cause also has been won forever, the newer veterans of the greater action that has yet to come?

There are many points of contrast between the ceremony I have just witnessed in the graceful marble amphitheater in the beautiful Virginian open country and the burials that have taken place in the grey hearts of London, Paris and Rome. In the face of a common quantity of idea, they mark an essential difference in the nature of the occasion.

Yesterday I went to see the people who were filing past the flag-covered coffin. It was a crowd fairly representative, I thought, of the Washington population as one sees it on the streets; all classes were represented, but chiefly it consisted of that well-dressed, healthy-looking middle-class sort of people that predominate in the streets of most American cities. They came to honor a national hero, the personification of American courage and loyalty. Few, I think were actual mourners of a dead soldier. The couples and groups of people I saw swarming up the sloping paths to the entrance of the capitol, filing up the steps to the rotunda or dispersing on the other side were characterized by a sort of bright eagerness and approval.

British and American Crowds.

They contrasted very strongly with my memory of the great column of still and mournful people under the dark London sky, eight deep, stretching all up Whitehall and down Northumberland avenue and along the embankment for a great distance, a column which moved on slowly, step by step, and which faded away at night to be replaced by fresh mourners on the morrow to do honor to the unknown warrior in London. That crowd, with its wreaths and flowers, represented the families, the lovers, the sisters and friends of perhaps a quarter of a million of dead men from London and the south and center of England; the massed, mute tragedy of its loss was overwhelming. It reduced all the ceremony that had gathered into comparative unimportance.

But the remote distances of America forbade any such concentration of sorrow. There may have been the relations and friends of perhaps a thousand men upon the scene at Arlington. The loss of the District of Columbia itself was less than 600 killed. A group of wounded men in the amphitheater struck the most intimate note. The rest of the gathering at Arlington shared a less personal grief. They were sympathizers rather than sufferers.

Because of this emotional difference, the Arlington ceremony presented itself primarily as a ceremony. For most there it was a holiday, a fine and noble holiday, but a holiday. By it, America did not so much mourn the tragedy of war as seek to arouse itself to that tragedy. Everywhere the stars and stripes, the most decorative and exhilarating of national flags, waved and fluttered and an irresistible expression of America's private life and buoyant well-being mingled in the proceedings. For most of the gathering that coffin under the great flag held nothing they had ever touched personally; it was not America's lost treasure of youth, but rather a warning of the fate that may yet overtake the youth of America if war is not to end. At Arlington, throughout the length and breadth of America, when for two mintues at midday all work and movement stopped and America stood still, an innumerable host of fathers and mothers and wives and friends could whisper thanks to God in their hearts that their sons and their beloved remained alive.

Not in Sorrow but in Warning.

And I suppose it is largely because America is still so much less war stricken than any of the other belligerents of the great war that so much more powerful a sense of will was apparent in all these proceedings. The burial of the unknown soldier in America was not a thing in itself as it was in London, in Paris or Rome, it was a solemn prelude to action, the action of the great conference which is to seek peace and an enduring peace for all mankind. This note was struck even in the chaplain's opening invocation. He said:

"Facing the events of the morrow, when from the work bench of the world there will be taken an unusual task, we ask that Thou will accord exceptional judgment, foresight and tactfulness of approach to those who seek to bring about a better understanding among men and nations, to the end that discord, which provokes war, may disappear and there may be world tranquility."

And the very fine oration of President Harding, following closely upon this line.

I saw the President for the first time at Arlington. He is a very big, fine looking man and his voice is a wonderful instrument. He spoke slowly and very distinctly, his gestures admirably controlled. He is—how can I say it?—more statuesque than any of the American Presidents of recent times, but without a trace in his movements or appearance of posturing or vanity. Men say he is a sincerely modest man, determined to do the best that is in him and at once appalled and inspired by the world situation in which he finds himself among the most prominent figures. Not only in its main circumstances, but in many of its incidentals is the position of the President of the United States appalling.

Never Was Human Utterance So Magnified.

The President stood in the space to the right of the unknown soldier and to the other side of him was a black box upon a stand, a box perhaps two feet by one. This was the receiver that was to carry his voice, intensely amplified, to still greater gatherings in New York, in San Francisco and over the whole United States. Never was human utterance so magnified. Every syllable, every slip, was recorded. He slipped once at an antithesis and was obliged to repeat. From the Atlantic to the Pacific that slip was noted.

I have heard much detraction of the President both before I came to America and since I have been here, but here I have found a growing and spreading belief in him. And this address of his, rhetorical though it was in a simple and popular American way, was, nevertheless, a very dignified address and one inspired by a spirit that is undeniably great. Here is a fine saying:

"His patriotism was none the less if he craved more than triumph of country; rather, it was greater if he hoped for a victory for all human kind. Indeed, I revere that citizen whose confidence in the righteousness of his country inspired belief that its triumph is the victory of humanity.

"This American soldier went forth to battle with no hatred for any people in the world, but hating war and hating the purpose of every war for conquest."

We are to seek the rule under which reason and righteousness shall prevail. There is to be "The commanding voice of a conscious civilization against armed warfare." "A new and lasting era of peace on earth." And with a fine instinct for effect the President ended his oration with the Lord's Prayer, with its appeal for one universal law for mankind. "Thy kingdom come on earth."

Every other gossip tells you that President Harding comes from Main street and repeats the story of Mrs. Harding saying: "We're just folks." If President Harding is a fair sample of Main street, Sinclair Lewis has not told us the full story and Main street is destined to save the world.

Tomorrow the conference will begin.

HUGHES' OUTLINE OF WORK TO BE DONE AND COMMENT ON U. S. PROPOSAL

GREAT NATIONS MUST END NAVAL COMPETITION NOW, SECRETARY SAYS

Investigation, Statistics, Reports, Circumlocution, No Longer Can Be Tolerated, for Essential Facts Are Known, He Tells Conference.

RECALLS FAILURE OF FORMER EFFORTS

People of World Look to Meeting to Relieve Them of Burden of Armament, He Declares, Accepting Chairmanship.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Secretary Hughes in his address today accepting the permanent Chairmanship of the conference on limitation of armaments, spoke as follows:

"It is with deep sense of privilege and responsibility that I accept the honor you have conferred.

"Permit me to express the most cordial appreciation of the assurances of friendly co-operation, which have been generously expressed by the representatives of all the invited governments. The earnest desire and purpose, manifested in every step in the approach to this meeting, that we should meet the reasonable expectation of a watching world by effective action suited to the opportunity is the best augury for the success of the conference.

"The President invited the Governments of the British Empire, France, Italy and Japan to participate in a conference on the subject of limitation of armament, in connection with which Pacific and Far Eastern questions also would be discussed. It would have been most agreeable to the President to have invited all the Powers to take part in this conference but it was thought to be a time when other considerations should yield to the practical requirements of the existing exigency and to this view the invitation was extended to the group known as the principal allied and associated Powers, which, by reason of the conditions produced by the war, control in the main the armament of the world. The opportunity to limit armament lies within their grasp.

Invitation to Other Powers.

"It was recognized, however, that the interests of other Powers in the Far East made it appropriate that they should be invited to participate in the discussion of Pacific and Far Eastern problems, and, with the approval of the five Powers an invitation to take part in the discussion of those questions has been extended to Belgium, China, The Netherlands and Portugal.

"The inclusion of the proposal for the discussion of Pacific and Far Eastern questions was not for the purpose of embarrassing or delaying an agreement for limitation of armament, but rather to support that undertaking by availing ourselves of this meeting to endeavor to reach a common understanding as to the principles and policies to be followed in the Far East and thus greatly to diminish and, if possible, wholly to remove, discernable sources of controversy. It is believed that by interchanges of views at this opportune time the Governments represented here may find a basis of accord and thus give expression to their desire to assure enduring friendship.

Wants No Postponement.

"In the public discussions which have preceded the conference, there have been apparently two competing views; one, that the considerations of armament should await the result of the discussion of Far Eastern questions, and, another, that the latter discussion should be postponed until an agreement for limitation of armament has been reached. I am unable to find sufficient reason for adopting either of these extreme views. I think that it would be most unfortunate if we should disappoint the hopes which have attached to this meeting by a postponement of the consideration of the first subject.

"The world looks at this conference to relieve humanity of the crushing burden created by competition in armament, and it is the view of the American Government that we should meet that expectation without any unnecessary delay. It is therefore proposed that the conference should proceed at once to consider the question of the limitation of armament.

"This, however, does not mean we must postpone the examination of the Far Eastern questions. These questions of vast importance press for solution. It is hoped that immediate provision may be made to deal with them adequately, and it is suggested it may be found to be entirely practicable through the distribution of the work among designated committees to make progress to the ends sought to be achieved without either subject being treated as a hindrance to the proper consideration and disposition of the other.

Not New Proposal.

"The proposal to limit armament by agreement of the powers is not a new one, and we are admonished by the futility of earlier effort. It may be well to recall the noble aspirations which were voiced 23 years ago in the Imperial rescript of his Majesty, the Emperor of Russia. It was then pointed out with clarity and emphasis that the intellectual and physical strength of the nations, labor and capital are for the major part diverted from their natural application and unproductively consumed. Hundreds of millions are devoted to acquiring terrible engines of destruction, which, though today regarded as the last word of science are destined tomorrow to lose all value in consequence of some fresh discovery in the same field. National culture, economic progress, and the production of wealth are either paralyzed or checked in their development. Moreover, in proportion as the armaments of each power increase, so do they less and less fulfill the object which the governments have set before themselves.

"The economic crises, due in part to the system of armament and the continual danger which lies in this massing of war material, are transforming the armed peace of our days in a crushing burden, which the peoples have more and more difficulty in bearing. It appears evident, then, that if this state of things were prolonged it would inevitably lead to the calamity which it is desired to avert, and the horrors of which make every thinking man shudder at advance. To put an end to these incessant armaments and to seek the means of warding off the calamities which are threatening the whole world—such is the supreme duty which is today imposed on all states.

"It was with this sense of obligation that his majesty, the Emperor of Russia, proposed the conference which was to occupy itself with this grave problem and which met at The Hague in the year 1899.

"Important as were the deliberations and conclusions of that conference, especially with respect to the Pacific settlement of international disputes, its result in the specific matter of limitation of armament went no further than the adoption of a final resolution setting forth the opinion that the restriction of military charges, which are at present a heavy burden on the world, is extremely desirable for the increase of the material and moral welfare of mankind, and the utterance of the wish that the Governments may examine the possibility of an agreement as to the limitation of armed forces by land and sea, and of war budgets.

Words by Root.

"It was seven years later that the Secretary of State of the United States, Mr. Elihu Root, in answering a note of the Russian Ambassador suggesting in outline a program of the second peace conference said:

"'The Government of the United States, therefore feels it to be its duty to reserve for itself the liberty to propose to the second peace conference, as one of the subjects for consideration, the reduction or limitation of armaments, in the hope that, if nothing further can be accomplished, some slight advance may be made toward the realisation of the lofty conception which actuated the Emperor of Russia in calling the first conference.'

"It is significant that the imperial German Government expressed itself as 'absolutely opposed to the question of disarmament' and that the Emperor of Germany threatened to decline to send delegates if the subject of disarmament was to be discussed. In view, however, of the resolution which had been adopted at the first Hague conference, the delegates of the United States were instructed that the subject of limitation of armament should be regarded as unfinished business, and that the second conference should ascertain and give full consideration to the result of such examination as the governments may have given to the possibility of an agreement pursuant to the wish expressed by the first conference.

"But by the reason of the obstacles which the subject had encountered, the second peace conference at The Hague, although it made notable progress in provision for the peaceful settlement of controversies, was unable to deal with limitation of armament except by a resolution in the following general terms:

"'The conference confirms the solutions adopted by the conference in 1899 in regard to the limitation of military expenditure; and inasmuch as military expenditure has considerably increased in almost every country since that time, the conference declares that it is eminently desirable that the Governments should resume the serious examination of this question.'

"This was the fruition of the efforts of eight years. Although the effect was clearly perceived, the race in preparation of armaments, wholly unaffected by these futile suggestions, went on until it fittingly culminated in the greatest war of history; and we are now suffering from the unparalled loss of life, the destruction of hopes, the economic dislocations, and the widespread impoverishment which measure the cost of the victory over the brutal pretensions of military force.

"But if we are warned by the inadequacy of earlier endeavors for limitation of armament, we cannot fail to recognize the extraordinary opportunity now presented.

"We not only have the lessons of the past to guide us, not only do we have the reaction from the disillusioning experiences of war, but we must meet the challenge of imperative economic demands. What was convenient or highly desirable before is now a matter of vital necessity. If there is to be economic rehabilitation, if the longings for reasonable progress are not to be denied, if we are to be spared the uprisings of peoples made desperate in the desire to shake off burdens no longer endurable, competition in armament must stop. The present opportunity not only derives its advantage from a general appreciation of this fact, but the power to deal with the exigency now rests with a small group of nations represented here, who have every reason to desire peace and to promote amity. The astounding ambition which lay athwart the promise of the second Hague conference no longer menaces the world, and the great opportunity of liberty-loving and peace-preserving democracies has come. Is it not plain that the time has passed for mere resolutions, that the responsible Powers should examine the question of limitation of armament? We can no longer content ourselves with investigations, with statistics, with reports, with the circumlocution of inquiry. The essential facts are sufficiently known. The time is come, and this conference has been called, not for general resolutions or mutual advice, but for action.

"We met with full understanding that the aspirations of mankind are not to be defeated either by plausible suggestions of postponement or by impracticable counsels of perfection. Power and responsibility are here and the world awaits a practicable program which shall at once be put into execution.

"I am confident that I shall have your approval in suggesting that in this matter, as well as in others before the conference, it is desirable to follow the course of procedure which has the best promise of achievement rather than one which would facilitate division; and thus, constantly aiming to agree so far as possible, we shall, with each point of agreement, make it easier to proceed to others.

Naval Armament Question.

"The question, in relation to armaments, which may be regarded as of primary importance at this time, and with which we can deal most promptly and effectively, is the limitation of naval armament. There are certain general considerations which may be deemed pertinent to this subject.

"The first is that the core of the difficulty is to be found in the competition in naval programs and that, in order appropriately to limit naval armament, competition in its production must be abandoned. Competition will not be remedied by resolves with respect to the method of its continuance. One program inevitably leads to another, and if competition continues, its regulation is impracticable. There is only one adequate way out, and that is to end it now.

"It is apparent that this cannot be accomplished without serious sacrifices. Enormous sums have been expended upon ships under construction and building programs which are now under way cannot be given up without heavy loss. Yet if the present construction of capital ships goes forward other ships will inevitably be built to rival them, and this will lead to still others. Thus the race will continue so long as ability to continue lasts. The efforts to escape sacrifices is futule. We must face them or yield our purpose.

"It is also clear that no one of the naval Powers should be expected to make the sacrifice alone. The only hope of limitation of naval armament is by agreement among the nations concerned, and this agreement should be entirely fair and reasonable in the extent of the sacrifices required of eac hof the Powers. In considering the basis of such agreement, and the commensurate sacrifices to be required, it is necessary to have regard to the existing naval strength of the great naval Powers, including the extent of construction already effected in the case of ships in progress. This follows from the fact that one nation is as free to compete as another, and each may find grounds for its action.

Naval Holiday.

"What one may do another may demand the opportunity to rival, and we remain in the thrall of competitive effort.

"I may add that the American delegates are advised by their naval experts that the tonnage of capital ships may fairly be taken to measure the relative strength of navies as the provision for auxiliary combatant craft should sustain a reasonable relation to the capital ship tonnage allowed.

"It would also seem to be a vital part of a plan for the limitation of naval armament that there should be a naval holiday. It is proposed that for a period of not less than 10 years there should be no further construction of capital ships.

"I am happy to say that I am at liberty to go beyond these general propositions, and, on behalf of the American delegation acting under the instructions of the President of the United States to submit to you a concrete proposition for an agreement for the limitation of naval armament.

"It should be added that this proposal immediately concerns the British Empire, Japan and the United States. In view of the extraordinary conditions, due to the world war, affecting the existing strength of the navies of France and Italy, it is not thought to be necessary to discuss at this stage of the proceedings the tonnage allowance of these nations, but the United States proposes that this matter be reserved for the later consideration of the conference.

"In making the present proposal the United States is most solicitous to deal with the question upon an entirely reasonable and practicable basis to the end that the just interests of all shall be adequately guarded and the national security and defense shall be maintained."

The Secretary then read the American proposals.

Limitation Only Outlined.

"I have sketched the proposal only in outline," said Secretary Hughes, "leaving the technical details to be supplied by the formal proposition which is ready for submission to the delegates.

"The plan includes provision for the limitation of auxiliary surface combatant craft. This term embraces three classes, that is:

"1. Auxiliary surface combatant craft, such as cruisers (exclusive of battle cruisers), flotilla leaders, destroyers, and various surface type.

"2. Submarines, and

"3. Airplane carrier.

"I shall not attempt to review the proposals for these various classes as they bear a definite relation to the provisions for capital fighting ships.

"With the acceptance of this plan, the burden of meeting the demands of competition in naval armament will be lifted. Enormous sums will be released to aid the progress of civilization. At the same time the proper demands of national defense will be adequately met and the nations will have ample opportunity during the naval holiday of 10 years to consider their future course. Preparation for future naval war shall stop now. I shall not attempt, at this time, to take up the other topics which have been lised on the tentative agenda proposed in anticipation of the conference."

LEADERS ON BOTH SIDES IN CONGRESS INDORSE U. S. PLAN

Hitchcock "Proud We Have Such a Secretary as Hughes"—Chairman Page Hopeful for Success of Idea.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—General and enthusiastic commendation was given by members of Congress today to the American plan for limitation of naval armament. Leaders of both parties joined in expressions of approval.

"I feel that the program, a wonderful ideal, is destined for success," said Senator Page, Republican of Vermont, chairman of the Senate Naval Committee. "Ordinarily, it might be difficult to attain, but with feeling of all peoples of the world as it is, I feel sure that the program, a feasible, practical and liberal one, from the American and also other points of view, will be translated into an agreement."

Similar views were expressed by Senator Hitchcock, Democrat of Nebraska, ranking minority member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"The boldness and candor of Secretary Hughes' proposals captured everybody," said Hitchcock. "The program is enormous, and I believe it will be a success. I felt proud that we had such a Secretary of State as Mr. Hughes."

Poindexter Approves It.

Senator Poindexter, Republican of Washington, who has active charge of naval appropriation bills in the Senate, said the program presented "a very good basis if properly worked out and guarantees of fulfillment are given."

"The general plan, as I view it," said he, "puts the United States on an equal footing with Great Britain and gives Japan a somewhat higher relative position."

Some Democratic leaders, including Senator Swanson of Virginia, former chairman of the Senate Committee, and Representative Padgett of Tennessee, former chairman of the House Committee, and others withheld comment. Other members of Congress deferred discussion until they could study the American proposals more carefully.

"I am afraid we have been too generous at the outset," said Senator Moses, Republican of New Hampshire, of the Foreign Relations Committee, stating that he proposed further study of the proposal.

One Democratic Senator pointed out that the naval appropriation bill of 1916 had a clause giving the President power to conclude an armament limitation agreement without a treaty. Another pointed out that the disarmament clauses relating to Germany in the treaty of Versailles declared specifically that Germany's disarmament was stipulated in order to prepare the way for other Powers to limit their armament.

From the same source came the suggestion that Germany might well be invited to the present conference, to be a party to a voluntary agreement of limitation, as a factor of the French demands for an army for potential defense against Germany.

Senator Simons, Democrat of North Carolina, said he was "heartily in favor" of the Hughes' suggestions.

Bold Play, Says Simmons.

"I think it was a bold play," said Senator Simmons. "I hope that the other nations will agree to it and, if not, it will demonstrate that the United States has taken the lead toward world peace."

"The plan is a masterly one," said Senator Smoot, Republican of Utah. "Its conception and presentation reflect honor upon the nation. I am sure that it will bring about success of the conference."

Senator McCumber, Republican of North Dakota, said the American plan was "splendid."

"I have no doubt that it will insure a successful outcome," said McCumber, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

"It is a splendid beginning," said Senator Fletcher, Democrat of Florida.

Senator Pomerene, Democrat of Ohio, another Foreign Relations committeeman and author of a pending resolution to suspend naval construction during the conference, said the Hughes' proposals were "a very good suggestion."

"I think it presents a practical way for the limitation of armament," he said, "and I think that the entire American people will be in accord with the proposition."

Representatives' Comment.

Speaker Gillett of the House of Representatives, said: "The definiteness and explicitness of Secretary Hughes' proposals made one feel that we were at last face to face with a new and auspicious and far-reaching movement in the progress of civilization."

Representative Mondell of Wyoming, the Republican House leader, said: "The American plan goes further than even the most optimistic could have expected as the first suggestion of the program. It sets to rest all doubt as to our purpose and is so fair and reasonable that the nations most affected cannot fail to realize its logic and itss fairness. Without delay and without equivocation, the President and the American delegates have presented a plan, which, if adopted, ends all the dangers of competitive naval armament for this generation."

Representative Garrett of Tennessee, the Democratic House leader: "It scratched the surface. No doubt the limitation of armament conference will try to dig still deeper to reach the end all peoples hope for."

Representative Kelly of Michigan, chairman of the sub-committee on naval appropriations of the House: "It is a wonderful thing. Or course, it involves not only the loss of money already expended, but an equal sum in the cancellation of contracts. We have to pay that, of course. After we once get squared away, however, it, it should result in a saving of $150,000,000 a year. The plan probably would mean that we would have a navy of from 30,000 to 40,000 men, instead of the 105,000 that it now comprises."

Says People Will Approve It.

Chairman Madden, of the House Appropriations Committee: "The definite, clear-cut, concise, positive, unequivocal declaration outlining the program limiting the naval armament, even to the naming of ships that were to be kept out, was an indication that that is the policy intended to be pursued by America, both from the legislative and the executive standpoint and will be approved by the unanimous voice of the American people."

Chairman Anthony of the subcommittee on Military Appropriations of the House: "That is the sensible program for the great nations of the world to adopt. No matter whether there is any agreement at the conference, the United States should scrap at least half of its 1916 naval building program."

Chairman Porter of the House Foreign Affairs Committee: "I am delighted beyond measure because the speech means action. I regard the addresses of President Harding and Secretary Hughes as the greatest step that has even been taken in the interest of humanity."

DELEGATES TO ARMAMENT CONFERENCE ENTERTAINED AT DINNER AT WHITE HOUSE

President and Mrs. Harding Later Give Reception for Delegates and Advisers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.

THE entire group of delegates to the armament conference were entertained at dinner tonight by President and Mrs. Harding and afterward there was a reception in the East room for the delegates, members of their advisory committees and attaches.

The function was the first of a series at which those who are concerned with the conference will be brought together socially. Members of the Cabinet foreign diplomats, resident here and various other high officials are expected to continue the round of entertaining throughout the conference.

NAVY PROPOSAL PRAISED BY BORAH

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The American program presented at the arms conference was praised tonight by Senator Borah as the first great triumph of open diplomacy. His statement follows:

"I have only the most sincere praise for the manner in which Secretary Hughes has gone about the business of the conference. His open presentation of his program marks an epoch in the history of international relations. It will receive the commendation of the great body of people throughout the three continents. It is the first great triumph of open diplomacy. To close the doors now, or at any time in the future, seems incredible.

"As to the program itself, it is a splendid beginning, but I take it that it is only a beginning. I hope that Great Britain and Japan, under the inspiration of the great movement and in behalf of an imperilled civilization, will move still further toward real disarmament."

HOW FOREIGN STATESMEN RECEIVED STARTLING U. S. PROPOSAL

OTHER ISSUES NOT TO AFFECT JAPAN'S POLICY ON NAVY

Baron Kato Says Delegation Is Prepared to Reach Agreement Independently of Far Eastern Questions.

U. S. PLAN 'SUITABLE DISCUSSION BASIS'

Premier Briand Declares Conference Had Fine Beginning, Remarks Land Question Remains.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Jaan's delegation to the Armament Limitation Conference is prepared to reach an agreement on naval limitation independently of the question of naval bases in the Pacific or settlement of Far Eastern political problems also to be discussed in Washington, Admiral Baron Kato, heading the Japanese group, said tonight. In making this statement he amplified his earlier expression that the American proposal were "far-reaching," but probably formed a suitable basis for conference discussion of the strictly naval phases on the agenda.

The American plan has been turned over to his naval experts here by Baron Kato. Pending their study and report, he said, he could not say definitely how his delegation would view the specific proposals it contained. With that report in hand, however, the Baron said he expected soon to be prepared to make a definite answer.

Most Logical Suggestions.

The Japanese leader was pressed for a statement as to whether actual agreement to limit naval armament might not be linked up with Far Eastern settlements so that the one would hinge on the other in reaching final conclusions. He reiterated that he was prepared to deal with each question separately and had no preference as to the order of consideration.

Stating his own impressions as to Mr. Hughes' proposal, the Baron declared they were "the most complete and logical" suggestions for limitation of naval forces he had heard. He was in favor of the general principles stated by Mr. Hughes, he added, and could say that Japan was "prepared to carry out the desire contained in the proposals to the extent possible."

Again urged to say what his attitude on the question of Pacific naval bases in relation to the proposed plan of limitation of navies would be, Baron Kato said he must await American proposals under the naval-base heading of the agenda. Before he entered the room, however, Kotaro Mochizuki of the Japanese Parliament, heading the unofficial delegation sent to Washington by the opposition, or Constitutional, party in Japan, discussed the base question at length. He insisted that it must be considered in determining the relative naval forces of the Pacific Powers.

Would Dismantle Island Forts.

Mochizuki said he proposed to insure peace in the Pacific by the dismantling of outlying island fortifications by both the United States and Japan. If the American capital invested in those island groups where American fortifications were planted prohibited that course, he said, then at least an agreement should be reached to stop all expenditures on existing forts.

Baron Kato was asked if this question of Pacific bases was in dispute between the political parties in Japan, but he declined to comment on Japan's internal political issues. He was well aware, however, he said, that the "people in general" in Japan desired reduction of naval armaments and the Japanese delegation had come to Washington expecting to meet that desire.

The Japanese Government has not contemplated submitting a counter-proposal, Baron Kato said, earlier in the day, adding that determination of this question would await a more complete study of details of Secretary Hughes' plan.

Asked if the American proposal would be acceptable to Japan, Baron Kato said:

"As a basis of discussion, the American proposal might be suitable."

He added that although it was too soon to express a definite opinion on the subject, his impression was that Japan "will comply with the American proposal as far as possible."

Baron Kato, when asked if Japan was prepared to accept the principle of British and American naval supremacy as laid down in the proposal, he was quoted as saying, "Japan is satisfied."

Premier Briand of France came out of the conference animated and intensely interested in what had taken place.

Premier Briand's Comment.

"It is an excellent beginning," said he. "Just what I should have expected from an American statesman. Mr. Hughes took resolute hold of the question, boldly and courageously. No time was spent over [illegible]. He closed at once with [illegible] and laid down a clear, straightforward proposal about which there can be no interpretative doubt. There it is, plain and understandable. It is fundamental in principle."

"What do you think of the program itself?" he was asked.

"It concerns France less than Great Britain and Japan, and I should like to know the views of the British and Japanese delegates. As for me I think the American Government has begun the conference in the right way with frank proposals that go to the bottom of the naval armament question."

M. Briand, continuing, said: "We could have begun the conference in two ways. One would have been to appoint committees composed of experts who would have met from time to time, received proposals from various delegations that would have been discussed, amended, expanded and finally something would have been reported to the plenary meeting of the conference. That would have taken a great deal of time.

Chose the Better Way.

"The President and Mr. Hughes have taken the better way, that is to give a clear cut program as a basis for decision and this program has been laid before us in perfect loyalty and complete frankness. I await with much impatience next Tuesday's meeting."

"Do you think that the British and Japanese delegations will be able to give their replies on Tuesday?" he was asked.

"Oh, I should think that we will have replies from which some inference may be drawn," he replied.

"What do you think of the program itself?"

"I shall have to study it more in detail," replied the French Prime Minister, "and I think I should then not announce to the press precisely my considered views before I have given them to my fellow delegates."

"The proceedings today," M. Briand added, "did not touch the question of land armament. We have not changed our point of view on that question, which is that we must have security.

"The President spoke nobly, expressing the idealistic inspiration of the conference, while Mr. Hughes proposed the practical plan for realizing the ideal."

U. S. Proposals in Brief; Greatest Loss Is on America

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.

IN the sweeping challenge Secretary Hughes presented to the other naval Powers today the United States offered to go far beyond what she asked Great Britain or Japan to do, viewed from the absolute financial losses involved. The whole American big ship building program is on the stocks while Great Britain has no capital ships under construction and the Japanese "eight and eight" program is as yet largely on paper.

The principal features of the American plan propose:

That for not less than 10 years competitive naval building cease as between Great Britain, the United States and Japan.

That all capital ships building or planned be scrapped and a few recently placed in the water be destroyed within three months of ratification of the agreement.

That the older ships of each fleet also be destroyed, reducing the British force to 22 battleships, the American to 18 and the Japanese to 10, each ship to be retained being specifically named.

That during the agreement no capital craft be laid down except under a detailed replacement scheme included in the proposal which would provide for ultimate equality of the British and American fleets and for a Japanese force at 60 per cent of the strength of either of the other two. Within three months after the conclusion of an agreement the tonnage of the three nations respectively would be 500,650, 604,450 and 299,700.

The replacement scheme is 500,000 tons for the United States, 500,000 tons for Great Britain and 300,000 tons for Japan. No replacement ship could exceed 35,000 tons. The United States would scrap 30 capital ships aggregating 843,740 tons; Great Britain 19, aggregating 583,375 tons, and Japan 17, aggregating 448,928 tons.

That all other naval craft be similarly provided for in the same ratio, specific figures for aggregate tonnage in each class being laid down.

That naval aircraft be disregarded in the scaling down processes as a problem incapable of solution owing to the convertibility of commercial aircraft for war purposes.

That no naval building of any character be undertaken in any of the three countries on foreign account during the life of the agreement.

That the life of a battleship shall be fixed at 20 years and that ships to be replaced be destroyed before the replacement vessel is more than three months passed completion.

That no battleships replacement whatever be undertaken for 10 years from date of the agreement.

That no combat craft be acquired except by construction and none be so disposed of that it might become part of another navy.

That regulations to govern conversion of merchant craft for war purposes be drawn up, because of the importance of the merchant marine "in inverse ratio to the size of naval armaments."

SAYS JAPAN IS AMAZED AT SCOPE OF U. S. PROPOSAL

Correspondent for Tokio Paper Declares People Would Be Ready to Face Enormous Sacrifice to Meet Plan.

By ADACHI KINNOSUKE,
Washington Correspondent of the Jiji Shimpu of Tokio.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. — The reaction of the people of Japan, not that of our delegation here in Washington, mark you, nor that of the imperial navy of Japan, nor yet the Government of Japan, but of the general run of the people of Japan —to the American proposition "for an agreement on limitation of naval armament" as presented this morning by Secretary Hughes is something like this:

1. An open-mouthed wonder at the heroic sweep of the proposition.

An intense desire of examining just what this means to the defense of the empire and that in the light of what might or might not come out of the chaotic China and out of equally disturbed Siberia on the west or the other side the infinite possibilities arising out of the Pacific.

2. Then if they are reasonably assured in their minds that the national existence of Japan as a nation of peace and meeting its needs in a peaceful manner is beyond danger, I believe most profoundly that the people of Japan would rise en-masse and face the whole business in a spirit as heroic as the proposition itself. More than that, they would rise and call the author of it, blessed.

Difference in Point of View.

The important thing which should be pointed out is the difference between the way the Japanese people look at their navy and the way the American people look at theirs. They are radically different. For one thing the people of America have never missed their three meals in order to build the ships of their navy; the Japanese have. To throw 30 capital ships of more than 845,000 tons into discard and put a white stone over the grave, would only evoke the emotion of exhaltation among the people of this land where millionaires are about as cheap as soda fountain aristocracy.

But with the people of Japan, all is different. They have been taught from their youth up that every rivet, every ton of metal which entered into the building of their navy was as essential for the national life of the empire as skin is to the body. We are not a nation of millionaires over there; quite the contrary. Our people have sweated blood in building up their 80,000,000 yen super-dreadnaughts. Naturally, they would feel something like a man called upon to chop off one of his arms when they are called upon to face the actual destruction of the ships.

Equal to Heroic Surgery.

And yet, I believe, they would meet this heroic surgery in a spirit of sacrifice all the more noble because it would be so downright human and touching and quite worthy of their traditions.

Once they are convinced that it is for the honor of Japan and peace of human kind, they are quite equal to do almost anything, even though they might feel it as keenly as the cutting off of their own arms.

I asked one of the members of the House of Representatives of the Japanese Diet who is here as an observer of the conference, a member of the Seiyu party, what he thought of the popular reaction of the Japanese people to the American proposition. "I think they would rejoice over it," he told me confidently.

This is significant. This gentleman has had a large and innumerable opportunities to come into intimate touch with the common people of Japan in his political career. I do not think they would be as surprised over the American proposition as so many of our people seem to think. Fact is, that I had heard a number of people speak of a possible American suggestion on the limitation of armaments in Tokio before I left, and some of them took the view that whatever the American suggestion might be they would be bound to be sensationally drastic. They seemed to be ready and prepared for almost anything. I rather think there would be a popular indorsement of the American program among our people.

CONFERENCE FOES SAID TO BE AT WORK UNDER COVER

Observers Have Detected Propaganda of Certain American Interests Who Profit by War.

MEMORANDUM FOUND BETRAYS HOSTILITY

Munitions Makers and Others Opposed to Disarmament Known to Be Represented in Washington.

By a Special Correspondent of Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—On the marble arch of the apse of the Memorial Amphitheater in Arlington Cemetery, where the impressive services over the body of the unknown soldier of the United States were held yesterday, is carved this inscription in letters designed to be decipherable for ages:

"We here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain."

Underneath are the names of the nation's military heroes of our wars, and underneath, yesterday, was the casket containing the body of the anonymous hero of the world war. That the mental attitude of the multitude assembled to do honor to the memory of the unknown ran true to the spirit of the inscription was unmistakable.

What the inscription meant to those who read it in the light of the Armistice day anniversary ceremony was that our heroes fought and died to insure peace to this country—not peace between wars, but peace for all time. Whether that meaning is deeply stamped into the minds of all who are directly or indirectly interested in the conference for the limitation of armaments which is to begin its sessions today is open to question.

There are American interests directly and indirectly associated with the outcome of the conference which are not only against limitations of armaments, but against disarmament of any kind. These interests are represented in Washington. They profit by war and the use of guns and munitions and war supplies.

Militarists Working Under Cover.

They are working under cover and cunningly, but they cannot hide their trail from observers who have had experience in Washington with the methods of individuals and corporations that look upon active preparation for war as essential to their business.

It would not be fair to say that these interests have deliberately formulated plans to nullify the conference; it is quite certain that their plans are nebulous—if, indeed, they have any plans at all, because they are faced with a situation that is not only new to them but to the whole world. But they see in even a threat to limit armaments or do away with war a blow at their future prosperity.

Individuals and corporations of this character have had vast practice in dealing with national Legislatures and with influential politicians. Their agents in Washington, who are continually mixed in questions of taxation and Government expenditures, are well known.

The proponents of national peace and American limitation of armaments are ignorant of the close watch that the individuals and corporations that profit by preparations for war and the actual waging of war are keeping on the preliminaries of the conference. Friends of peace are keeping tabs on the friends of war, and the results of their operations and activities promise to make interesting history in the course of the deliberations which opened today.

Propaganda to Be Dealt With.

So, observation and inquiry establishes, the conferees will not only have to smooth out the difficult questions arising from national jealousies and enmities in Europe and the Far East, but will also, the chances are, find themselves insidiously besieged by American influences that do not want peace and have for years persistently and successfully spread the doctrine that the only way to keep the other fellow from tackling you is to be better armed than the other fellow. Propaganda along that line will not be abandoned.

Within a few hours after the opening of the conference a copy of a memorandum of 40 typewritten pages dealing with the conference has come to light.

It is skilfully written and from casual reading one might infer that it was prepared for the information of interests favorable to the limitation of armaments, but closer scrutiny betrays throughout the script a manifestation of hostility to the objects of the conference as set forth by President Harding. Apparently, it was written by some one who has intimate knowledge of world-wide trade conditions and possibilities. It bears no address or signature or identifying marks and came into the possession, by an accident, of a man who is very much interested in the successful outcome of the conference.

Italian Premier Sends Message Wishing Success of Washington Conference

ROME, Nov. 12.

PREMIER BONOMI today gave the Associated Press the following message for the American People:

"The desire for peace which is living and general compels the governments of the world's strongest nations to discuss in hospitable America the ways and means of solving the knottiest questions of world interest and of preparing for the coming era in which arms can be limited to the strict necessity of defense, no step toward this grand aspiration could be of practical result unless promoted by those states which, possessing the greatest material strength, can with noble intentions demonstrate that they prefer right to might.

"It is to the credit of the American Government and people that they have assumed this highly humanitarian initiative, to which the Italian Government and people, placing aspiration for peace in the front rank, unite in wishing the conference a happy success.

"I deeply regret that I am unable to leave the cares of government at this time on the eve of the opening of Parliament. I should convey to the conference some personal contribution alongside that which the Italian delegates carry, in order to confirm Italy's desire for tranquilly and work. But I have not lost hope, parliamentary affairs permitting, that my wish to participate directly before the work of the conference is over will be satisfied."

president of the company, responding, was ordered to open the safe which he did. The robbers took from the safe a wallet which Bohenkamp said contained $500 in currency and $150 in checks.

John Ensler of 4343 Manchester avenue, a driver for the company, was counting his day's collections when the robbers entered. They took $115 in currency which he had laid on a counter. A sack containing about $50 in small change was on the floor beside him. In snatching it up one of the robbers spilled the contents, quarters, dimes and nickels rolling about the floor. The robbers did not stop to pick up this money, but ran out and entered an automobile which had been circling the block. They drove north on King's highway and east on Maple avenue, escaping.

Teacher's Purse Snatched.

Mrs. Benjamin Lamberson was alone in her husband's grocery store at 2941 Olive street, when a man entered at 7:30 p. m. and demanded money. Mrs. Lamberson took about $5 from the cash register, a small portion of what the register contained, and handed it to the man. He took it and ran out.

Miss Margaret Buchanan, 28, of 4342 Page boulevard, a school teacher, was passing 3938 Page at 8 p. m., when a negro emerged from an alley and snatched her purse, containing $11.25.

BRITISH DELEGATES "MOST HOPEFUL" AFTER SESSION

Balfour Says American Disarmament Proposal Is 'Bold, Pregnant With Infinite Possibilities.'

By JOSEPH W GRIGG,
London Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—When Arthur Balfour, who heads Great Britain's delegation at the Washington conference, was asked after today's sensational beginning what comment he had to make on the frank and far-reaching statement of America's case, he said:

"It was a bold and statesmanlike utterance, pregnant with infinite possibilities. I am most hopeful of results."

Balfour's utterance epitomizes the viewpoint of the whole British delegation.

"I feel 10 years younger" was his exclamation to Lord Riddell, when they emerged from the conference chamber.

Lord Riddell was quick to send a cable to Premier Lloyd George, giving his own impression of the far-reaching pronouncement by the American Secretary of State. His brief message to the Premier said: "Magnificent opening. Everybody most hopeful of fruitful results."

Lord Riddell sent to the British press immediately the detailed proposal of the United States on the question of limitation of armaments, with the request that a copy be sent immediately to the Premier so that Lloyd George might be made acquainted with it without delay.

Because of the prognostication during the last week that Secretary Hughes would unequivocally lay America's cards on the table, the British representatives were prepared to hear on the very first day such a vital proposition as it turned out to be.

The expression of gratified, though amazed, surprise on the faces of both Balfour and the First Lord of the Admiralty, Lord Lee of Fareham, as they listened to the unfolding of America's proposition to scrap her great building program as an earnest of her desire to end the competition in armaments, reflected the startling effect it had had on Britain's chief spokesmen.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon Admiral Lord Beatty and other British naval experts met to consider, in a general way, the American limitation of armaments proposition. Further conversations probably will be held tomorrow, and on Monday the whole delegation, presided over by Baulfour, will discuss it.

Attitude of British.

On the authority of a high British representative, the correspondent was informed tonight that Great Britain had no intention of proposing any other procedure than that decided upon by the United States, although the British view, as has recently been explained, favored the consideration, in the first instance, of the Pacific problems, holding that, to advance any distance in the matter of agreement on limitation of armaments, there must be a preliminary agreement on a Pacific formula.

But the idea now seems to be to let America take the lead and to approach the conference problems as she suggests. In this Britain will undoubtedly have the support of Canada, but the attitude of Australia and New Zealand is enigmatical. These two elements of the British Empire feel that real security can only be obtained after there is agreement on the vital Pacific issues.

As to the Anglo-Japanese pact, that also sinks into second place in point of importance, now that America has determined on settling first the question of armaments. It is rather a thin thread that binds Britain and Japan as it approaches its twentieth birthday, but thick enough still to present a problem when the time comes to break it or preserve it, possibly in a much more elastic form than now exists.

Unknown Soldier Got Last War Decorations That Can Be Bestowed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.

By the Associated Press.

AMERICA'S unknown soldier received the last congressional medal of honor and the last distinguished service cross which can be bestowed for deeds performed in the world war, the War Department announced today. The act of Congress authorizing the President to make these awards, as well as to bestow the Distinguished Service Medal, prescribed in effect, it was explained, that the awards must be made within three years of the act justifying the award. The time limit expired yesterday on the third anniversary of the armistice.

The Victory Medal still can be awarded, it was announced. This was covered by the provision of the above mentioned act of Congress.

MAYOR CALLS FOR CONCESSIONS TO REVIVE BUILDING

Directs Cunliff to Bring About Conferences of Owners, Contractors, Material Men and Union Labor.

PROPOSAL FOR CUT IN THE BASIC WAGE

Kiel Urges All Interests, Including Banks, to Get Together to Reduce Costs in Interest of Progress.

Mayor Kiel yesterday issued a proclamation on the building situation, in which he appointed Director of Public Welfare Cunliff to call conferences of owners, contractors, material men and representatives of organized labor, with a view to having them make concessions in the interest of a large building program.

The proclamation follows a survey published exclusively in the Post-Dispatch last Tuesday in which it was shown that building projects aggregating $20,000,000 were being held up by high costs.

Cunliff will represent the public in these conferences. He will endeavor to induce the unions to reduce the basic wage in the building trades of $1.25 an hour and to prevail upon material men to reduce prices of materials. The Mayor calls upon persons who contemplate building, contractors, material men, banks and labor to get together and reduce costs so that unemployment may be relieved and the city allowed to progress.

Cunliff said he would await the result of the conferences being held by the Master Builders' Association and union leaders before calling his meetings.

The next meeting of the Master Builders and union committees will be at 2:30 p. m., Tuesday, in the Century Building.

Commission on Loans.

One of the chief contentions of labor leaders, in defending the basic wage of $1.25 an hour in the building industry, has been that it would be unfair to expect labor to reduce wages while banks charged 6 and 7 per cent interest on building loans and an additional 3 per cent of the amount loaned as commission for making the loan. They have asserted that this commission was increased from 1½ per cent to 3 per cent in the last few years, and that the banks could afford to reduce the commission to the old figure.

At a conference Thursday of the committees of the Master Builders' Association and the Building Trades Council, called to discuss wages following publication of the Post-Dispatch survey showing that building was being held up in St. Louis by high costs, Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co., was questioned by Maurice J. Cassidy, secretary of the Building Trades Council, in which Cassidy sought to show that banks were reluctant to lend money for building enterprises, and when loans were made, charged an exorbitant commission.

Wade denied that the 3 per cent commission was exorbitant or that the banks were in any way responsible for the situation in the building industry. He said, however, as has been told, in response to one of Cassidy's questions, that his company would reduce the commission on loans to 2½ per cent if labor reduced wages in the interest of a building program.

Explanation Made by Wade.

Wade was asked by a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday what service was given by the banks in justification of the 3 per cent commission, and he explained that, in his company, this commission had to maintain the department for making such loans and carry a pro rata of the overhead expense of the entire institution.

He mentioned a few items of overhead expense, such as $1000 a day for taxes and $300,000 a year for advertising, the advertising being for the most part to create a market for bonds on building loans.

"This overhead expense must be defrayed by revenue from some source," he continued. "In our building loan department we convert our money into bonds that must be sold if we are to finance building projects. This department must be maintained, and the 3 per cent commission does it. When we lend a million dollars at 6 per cent on a building we issue a million dollars in bonds of small denomination that pay 6 per cent to the investor. There is a selling expense to these bonds, and that is where advertising is necessary.

"We do not consider 3 per cent commission on loans as exorbitant, and only agreed to reduce it to help the situation. The commission is not 3 per cent per annum, as Cassidy has stated, but 3 per cent when the loan is made, which, if the loan is for three years, would be 1 per cent per annum, and if the loan be for a longer period, less than 1 per cent."

Wade said there was a certain risk to every loan, and in the event of losses which occasionally occur, no matter how carefully the loan may have been considered he added, such losses are defrayed in pro rata from the commissions.

HALLIDAY SAYS HE WILL KEEP PLEDGE TO HIS CREDITORS

Broker to Carry Out Contract to Pay 25 Per Cent Cash in Spite of Indictment, He Asserts.

George V. Halliday, bankrupt stock and bond broker, against whom seven indictments were returned by the grand jury last week, based on allegations that he had accepted money for securities that he later failed to deliver, announced yesterday that, despite the grand jury's action, he would make good an agreement to settle with his creditors on a basis of 25 cents on the dollar as first payment and notes for the remainder.

Although some of the collateral, property of his wife, on which he hoped to raise part of the money to make the first payment under this agreement, has been pledged to professional bondsmen as security for a $14,000 bond under which he is at liberty, Halliday said he would be able to consummate the agreement.

His unsecured claims amount to approximately $100,000, and he wants to settle with his creditors by paying $25,000 at once and give personal notes over a period of five years for the remainder. He said 85 per cent of the creditors agreed to this arrangement, but the others sought criminal prosecution.

Halliday, who is 29 years old and lives at 24 South Rockhill road, Webster Groves, was arrested under the indictments Thursday night and spent the night in a cell, being unable to furnish bond until 1 p. m. Friday.

Some of the evidence upon which the seven indictments were based is as follows:

Lemuel Olds, a Central District policeman, says he turned over to Halliday $537.85 between April and July, 1921, for purchase of Libby, McNeil & Libby stock, which was not delivered to him.

Charles Herzel, 4115 Green Lea place, says he gave Halliday City of Berlin bonds of the face value of 50,000 marks, which he had bought from Halliday for $950 on July 15, 1921, to be resold, and was not able to get a settlement.

Josie P. Hayes, 7472 Flora boulevard, Maplewood, says she gave him $1029, of which $1000 was to be used in the purchase of an 8 per cent gold bond of the Gas Securities Co. and $29 for the payment of interest to the time of purchase, but did not get the bond.

Lavina C. Reilly, 4425 Forest Park boulevard, says she gave him $300.59 for the purchase of securities and received nothing but interim receipts and excuses.

Emma D. Krackauer, 3838 Humphrey street, had a Union Electric bond for $1000, which Halliday was to exchange, along with $500, for another bond. She says she gave him the bond and the $500 but did not get the other bond.

Charles Wieland, 3531 Oxford avenue, says he turned over to Halliday a $50 Liberty Bond and checks, bringing the total to $1007.11, for which he was to receive Kansas City Power and Light bonds, but they were not delivered.

Edward B. Huelsman, 3900 Utah street, says he gave Halliday $500 for bonds of the same company, which he did not receive.

AMERICAN PROGRAM SURPRISES BRITISH

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The American suggestion at the Washington conference of a ten-year naval holiday came as a complete surprise to the people of this country, the Washington correspondents of the British newspapers having led their readers to believe that no definite American plans were ready and that the first day's proceedings at the conference would be merely formal. Hence, the program for the wholesale scrapping of capital ships created an enormous sensation when it was announced briefly by the London evening papers.

This being Saturday, most of the public offices were closed and the public men were out of town. Moreover the Sunday papers go to press so early that the editorial writers not being in possession of complete reports of Secretary Hughes' speech, were unable to appreciate the full weight of his proposals.

The Sunday Express hails armistice week as "a week of moral wonders," and says:

"The dawn was breaking on the long night of Ireland as the soul of the British nation bowed itself in prayer for the peace of the whole world. Saturday crowned a week of miracles with the supreme miracle of Washington. Never in the history of mankind has the world been nearer its dream of brotherhood. Surely there is something not ourselves shaping the world soul and leading it to the light."

Declaring that the nations have met at Washington to draw up a declaration of peace which will complete the American declaration of independence and unite the nations in love and liberty, the Express exhorts church and nation to wake from their lethargy and send a message of faith to the peacemakers, and also heal the Irish feud which is detaining the Prime Minister from his proper place at Washington.

The Weekly Dispatch says that President Harding's eloquent speech has given the right lead to the conference, adding: "He takes his stand firmly on facts."

$40,000,000 REDUCTION IN JAPANESE NAVAL ESTIMATES

Government Budget for Next Year Unofficially Reported at $731,500,000.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Nov. 12.—Japan's governmental budget for next year, as unofficially reported here today, carries a total expenditure estimate of 1,463,000,000 yen (normally $731,500,000), being a decrease of 120,000,000 yen from last year's budget.

The naval estimate, said to have been decided by the Budget Council, carries a reduction of about 80,000,000 yen. The army estimates showed a reduction of about 10,000,000 yen.

ST. CHARLES ROAD FORMALLY OPENED WITH AUTO PARADE

First State Highway Made From Proceeds of St. Louis County Bond Issue of $3,000,000.

CONSTRUCTION IS OF CONCRETE

Celebration Held at Park at St. Charless After Many Machines Make Trip Over 12-Mile Route.

St. Charles road, formerly called the rock road, now a rockless highway of concrete, was opened to traffic yesterday afternoon with a parade in which several hundred St. Louis automobiles were driven from Wellston to St. Charles, and through the streets of St. Charles to Blanchette Park. A celebration was held in the park, with speeches by representatives of the city of St. Louis, of St. Louis County, which built the road; and of St. Charles.

The road, 12.7 miles long, is the first State highway in St. Louis County to be improved from the proceeds of the county's $3,000,000 bond issue. The cost was $600,000, one-half of which was paid by Federal aid and the remainder by the county bonds, sold chiefly to persons living or having business along the road. The construction is concrete, with monolithic brick surface at some points. The width is 20 feet, and 22 at curves. The work has been going on for a year, and the two-mile section leading to the St. Charles highway bridge was completed last, not being opened until the parade arrived. The rest of the road has been in use.

Many Cars In Line.

Automobiles gathered at Page boulevard and Hamilton avenue for the parade, and before the starting time, 2 p. m., the cars extended for several blocks east, north and south.

Stephen J. Gavin, one of the business men most active in selling the bonds for the construction of the road, was grand marshal of the parade, and the pilot car was driven by Raymond A. Walsh, manager of the Federated Roads Council. Other decorated cars carried county officials, State and county road officials, a party of United States engineers; Senator Ralph of St. Louis County, an active worker for hard-surfaced roads, and Mayor Kiel and F. W. A. Vesper, new president of the Chamber of Commerce.

At Fee Fee road, Mayor May of St. Charles and a delegation were awaiting the line, and May presented the key of St. Charles, a heavy gilt affair, to Mayor Kiel. The St. Charles contingent then rode as an escort.

The ceremony of removing the last earth from the pavement at the approach to the St. Charles bridge was performed by William Elbring, county engineer of St. Louis County, who has directed the construction of the road.

The St. Charles highway bridge, ordinarily a toll bridge, was a free bridge for the afternoon. After crossing the bridge, the official cars led in a parade through the streets. When, after a circuit of about two miles, the leading cars came near the bridge again, a long line of marchers was still crossing from the St. Louis County side.

At the park, John H. Sandfort, member of the St. Charles County Court, welcomed the visitors. "You are welcome here," he said, "but don't drive too fast, or our Constables will get you."

This announcement applied to St. Charles, and Sheriff Willman of St. Louis County, who was present, later extended it to apply to the St. Charles road. Willmann said a speed not to exceed 35 miles an hour would be permitted on the road, except in case of heavy traffic, where the legal limit of 25 miles an hour will be enforced. Deputy Sheriff Mayes, who lives at Home Heights, near the road, will have charge of the highway, and expects to be kept busy by those whom the new highway may tempt to "step on the gas."

Mayor Told to Keep Key.

Senator Ralph, who once lived in St. Charles, mentioned in his speech the town milkman of his boyhood, whose progress was deliberate, and said the milkman's son had been arrested for speeding recently. "I am glad someone in that family has got up some speed," he said.

Mayor Kiel talked jokingly about the key to St. Charles, and about the key to St. Louis, which he gave to Marshal Foch recently, and which the Marshal carried away with him. "Shall I keep this one or give it back?" he asked, and his hearers shouted, "Keep it."

Other speakers were Mayor May, J. H. Machens, J. C. Willbrand and the Rev. Dr. J. L. Roemer of St. Charles. William Shields of the St. Louis County Court and William King, manager of the St. Louis Automobile Club. The Junior Chamber of Commerce glee club sang.

On the return drive to St. Louis, a blockade resulted from a fruit sale at a point about a mile and a half from the bridge, where three cars of a Wabash freight train, containing apples and grapes, had been derailed and wrecked Friday. Speculators had bought up the fruit, and sold it at cut rates to the homebound automobilists. So many stopped to buy that the line was delayed for more than an hour, in spite of the efforts of Sheriff Willmann to get the cars to move on.

A delegation from Wellston was in the line of visitors. Two bands on trucks kept up with the procession for a time, then fell behind.

Of the road as now completed, the county sublet to contractors the two miles at the west end and the six miles at the east end, and did the remaining 4.7 miles without contract.

PROCLAMATION DECLARING PEACE GOES TO HARDING

Promulgation of Document Putting Into Effect Terms of Treaty With Germany Expected Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The draft of a proclamation declaring the United States at peace has been submitted by the State Department to President Harding for approval and signatur and its promulgation is expected early next week.

This was learned today coincident with announcement by the State Department of the exchange of ratifications of the treaty of Berlin, effected yesterday at the German capital.

Although opinion appears yet to be divided somewhat in official circles, as to the necessity for a proclamation by the President, it was asserted today that a proclamation was considered necessary to make inoperative certain acts of Congress, predicated upon a state of war, and that it might be regarded in the nature of an added precaution to insure peace. The formal exchange of ratifications, in the opinion of State Department officials, acted per se to restore diplomatic relations between this country and Germany. Necessity for an additional treaty more clearly setting forth the trade relations of the two countries was predicted by officials of the department, but it was said that any steps in that direction would be left to Germany to inaugurate.

It was said that this country would be receptive toward any proposals Germany might make with a view of replacing the commercial treaty of 1819 with Prussia. That treaty was scrapped with America's entry into the world war, but it was believed that a new commercial treaty would have been signed in any event, due to friction under that pact which had become more embarrassing with the years. It was declared, however, that Germany must originate action for any additional treaties and that this country would be content to rest on the present relations unless there was substantial demand from American business interests for greater protection than the present treaty affords.

Electric Iron Causes Fire.

Mrs. Edward C. Gish of 5058 Maple avenue, awakened yesterday morning by smoke which filled the house, discovered an electric iron left with the current on during the night had set fire to the ironing board and spread to the dining-room furniture. She and her son extinguished the blaze with buckets of water. The damage was estimated at $300.

DAUGHTERS OF CONFEDERACY END ANNUAL CONVENTION

New Officers Presented and Report of Committee Reports Heard at Final Session.

Following the presentation of new officers, the twenty-eighth annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy closed last night in Hotel Statler. The convention has been in session four days, coming to Birmingham, Ala., as the next meeting place, and chose Mrs. Livingston Rowe Schuyler, New York City, as president-general.

Mrs. Roy W. McKinney of Paducah, Ky., the retiring president-general, presided at the final session when various special committees made reports. Mrs. Schuyler enumerated the finishing of the $50,000 fund of $50,000, for the education of veterans of the World War, the handing over of the building of the mausoleum to Gen. Lee at Lexington, Ky., and the erection of the monument to Jefferson Davis at Fairview, Ky., as some of the organization's pretentious work. The convention went on record yesterday as favoring continuation of relief work in the Near East.

The convention sent a message to former President Woodrow Wilson Friday congratulating him upon his successful efforts in bringing the war to a close. Members of the Missouri Division presented a wrist watch to Mrs. J. P. Higgins of St. Louis, chairman of the Convention Committee, for her work in arranging for the convention, and Mrs. McKinney, the retiring president-general, was given a silver tea service by the Kentucky delegates.

Car Hits Blind Lawyer.

Frank Phillips, 51 years old, living at the Astor Hotel, a blind lawyer, suffered scalp wounds and cuts and bruises yesterday when he was knocked down by a westbound car on street car when he was crossing Sixth street unassisted. The fender picked him up and carried him several feet, the police reported.

SCHACHNER'S FIRM PROMOTED CANDY, OIL AND MOVIES

Young Broker's Company in Bankruptcy After 3 Years' Activity in Sales of Stocks in St. Louis.

207 CREDITORS TO MEET NOV. 29

Young Women Were Employed in Sending Out Large Quantities of Prospectuses and Advertising.

A meeting of the 207 creditors of the W. L. Schachner Co., stock and bond brokers in the Central National Bank building, will be held on Nov. 29 at 11 a. m. in the office of Referee in Bankruptcy Coles in the Security building, Fourth and Locust streets. The Schachner company last week filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the Federal Court, listing liabilities of $89,459.06 and assets of $41,923.16.

The Schachner company was organized early in 1919, when the A. R. Benesch & Co., New York brokers, decided to close an office which it had maintained here. W. L. Schachner, then 29 years old, an advertising salesman for an afternoon newspaper, and C. F. Carew, an employe of the Benesch company, bought the office furniture of the Benesch company and embarked in the bond and stock business under the name of the Schachner company.

Employed 36 Persons in Office.

The interval of less than three years between the appearance and disappearance of the Schachner firm was filled with an unusual success in selling oil and other stocks in and about St. Louis, culminating in the organization of a candy company to establish a "Mother Goose" shop at Seventh and Olive street, in which the Schachner company sold $427,-316.25 stock to approximately 1400 persons, chiefly St. Louisans of limited means.

By July, 1920, the small partnership had grown to an establishment employing, according to Carew in a letter to the St. Louis Better Business Bureau, 36 persons and clearing $1,-000,000 annually through St. Louis banks. "In a word, our business is big," Carew wrote. Most of the 36 persons in the office were young women employed in sending out vast quantities of prospectuses and advertising in support of stocks upon which, from time to time, the firm concentrated its efforts. It employed 10 salesmen for a follow-up on inquiries aroused by the prospectuses.

A review of some of the prospectuses sent out by the firm during its operations shows some of the methods used to challenge the attention of small investors.

One of the first was offering shares in the Kimberly Oil & Refining Co. It was dated May 19, 1919, and is quoted: "The house of Schachner & Co. are brokers, dealing in all securities, stocks, bonds and we would as cheerfully handle your order for United States Steel or any big board stock as we would Kimbley Oil & Refining Co. You will admit it is up to us to recommend issues to our clients that we know are safe and possess money-making potentialities."

Again: "You are not investing your funds in an unproven or unsound proposition, but in a gigantic oil company earning right today 72 per cent on outstanding preferred stock and 37 on outstanding common stock."

No Permit for Oil Stock Sale.

One of these prospectuses made its way to the Better Business Bureau, an organization maintained by the Advertising Club of St. Louis to protect the public against "wild-cat" stock sales. The bureau inquired of the State Banking Department, having administration of the "blue-sky" law to similarly protect investors, whether the Schachner company had obtained a permit to sell the stock. The reply was: "The records of this department show that on March 27, 1919, the Kimbley Oil & Refining Co. was refused a permit authorizing its stock to be sold in Missouri and that W. L. Schachner & Co. was accordingly advised on that date."

Another early offering of Schachner was Texas Amalgamated Oil Co., which, in the language of the prospectus, was "safety plus speculation, plus 24 per cent, plus extra dividends, plus efficient and trustworthy management, plus vast unproven acreage."

"You know that we will not handle your account for risky curb stock, regardless of personal profit," the prospectus continued. "At this point this question might arise in your mind: 'If Texas Amalgamated carries such tremendous value and unlimited possibilities, why is this stock being offered?' This is the answer: If the writer could afford to buy and to hold the entire block of Texas Amalgamated, he would do so and he would not sell a share for less than $10 (par value $1). But stock and bond brokers must keep securities turning. If this were not the case the United States Steel would not be offering their stock over and again to certain individuals at bargains. Nor would J. P. Morgan & Co. offer the sale of the obligations of Great Britain."

The Texluana Campaign.

Texas Amalgamated was followed with shares of the Texluana Producing and Refining Co., which was announced in a blazer type of prospectus under the heading: "Those investors who made $100,000 in Texas Amalgamated are now buying Texluana."

"The writer intends to interest himself personally in Texluana," it continued, "for at least $20,000, and between members of the firm and employes there will be over $100,000 of this stock held. Before concluding on Texluana, we insisted upon naming a majority of the directors and placing our own man in charge of field operations. This will enable us to absolutely protect the interests of the stockholders and will incidentally make us directly responsible to our clients. We do not want you to take a share unless you are satisfied you are getting a 3-for-1 value, that you are coming in on the ground floor and playing the oil game with big people in a big way."

Later: "It is the policy of this company to operate along conservative lines and that is why they have been holding the dividends to 24 per cent. Frankly, I believe the rate will be increased as soon as the first allotment is sold. There will be no increase in dividends while the stock is being sold."

How "Mother Goose" Was Promoted.

At about this time, January, 1920, Carew, who was familiar with the "Pig and Whistle" enterprises on the Pacific coast, conceived the idea of promoting a company in St. Louis for the establishment of similar stores here and began the preparation of elaborate printed matter to send out in large quantities.

One of the first announcements had for its opening paragraph: "We want you to join in a manufacturing and merchandising proposition that is the nucleus of what we believe to be a better money-maker than Coca Cola, reputed to have returned $40,000 on each $100 investment."

The project as unfolded was the first of a series of stores to be known as "Mother Goose," at Seventh and Olive streets, with expansion later to other sites and to other cities.

An elaborate booklet prospectus with drawings to present the project followed. It stated, among other things: "Under ordinary conditions, it is conservatively estimated that there will be 5600 people handled daily at the tables and 4500 people handled at the fountain. Figuring the low average of 20 cents per person at the fountain and 50 cents per person at the tables, would mean a daily receipt of $3700. After deducting $1665 for overhead cost and depreciation, it would leave a net daily profit on these two departments of $2035, which figured over a period of one year amounts to $742,775 or approximately 500 per cent on the common stock after the 8 per cent dividend on preferred has been paid.

"The figures have been greatly discounted and as they appear are unusually conservative. They are without taking the candy department into consideration, which is the mainstay of the business and which we believe can be developed in one year to such proportions as to warrant the retiring of the preferred stock at par, plus 8 per cent interest and 20 per cent cash bonus."

Troubles of "Mother Goose."

The capital originally sought was $100,000, but the eleaborate alteration plans for the room to be occupied cost much more than that and the capital stock subsequently was increased to $500,000, of which, as told, more than $437,000 actually was sold.

The name of the corporation was Missouri Sweets, Inc., and after the sale of the stock had progressed to a point where the company was ready to function, Schachner caused his election as president. The store was established. Its record lately has been shown in detail. In July, Schachner called a meeting of stockholders at which he explained that from December to July the store had lost in excess of $60,000, though its gross business had been in excess of $200,000. The stockholders ousted Schachner and elected a new board of directors, which now is progressing toward establishing the enterprise on a business basis.

One other of the statements of the Mother Goose prospectus was: "There is no brokerage or commission deducted from the sale of this stock, the underwriters taking care of this selling obligation themselves."

A suit recently was filed in Circuit Court by the new board of directors in which it is alleged that Schachner's company owed $109,000 to the candy company, money collected from stock sales, but not properly chargeable as spent for the company's benefit. Schachner submitted a statement to auditors in which he claimed not only 20 per cent of stock sales for commissions, but added selling expense which raised the promotion cost to $146,-857, or 37 per cent.

From Candy to the Movies.

During the waning days of the sale of "Mother Goose" stock, the Schachner company began issuing printed matter telling of the great money being made in the motion picture industry. This was continued for a time, earnings of many prominent companies being stated. At the end of one of these publications appeared the paragraph: "The house of W. L. Schachner has determined to enter the motion picture field. When we do solicit funds of our clients to place with our own in the motion picture industry, it will be when we are in a position to ask you to associate yourself with the greatest artists in the drama." It was announced that Carew had gone to the Pacific Coast to seek this alliance.

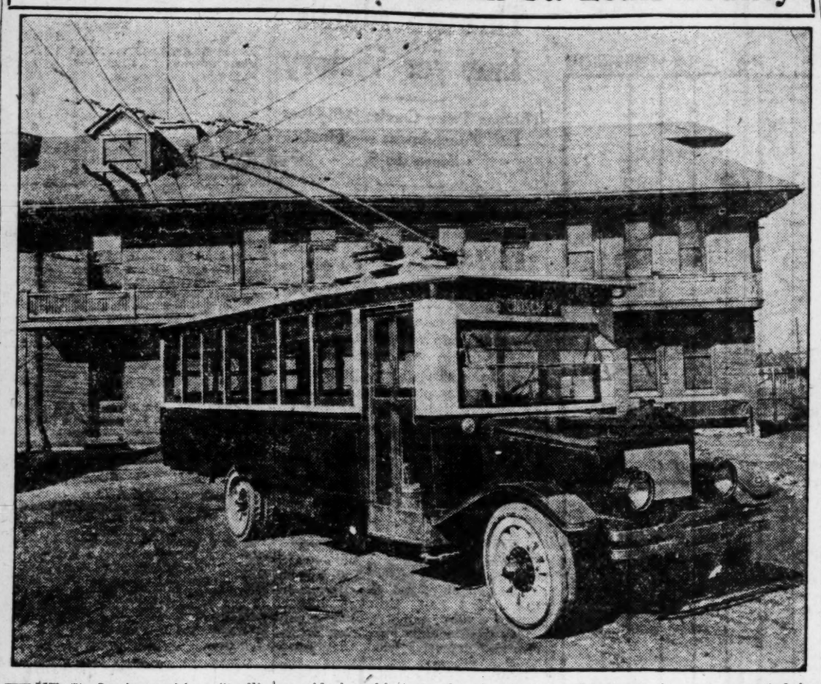
Shortly afterwards the Schachner company announced the sale of shares in the Pilgrim Pictures Corporation, which it announced would feature Julian Eltinge and Pauline Frederick. It was further stated that the first picture would be Eltinge's, "The Fascinating Widow," the speaking stage success of which was emphasized. The sale of this stock proceeded only a short time when the Schachner company dropped it. Carew said that the picture company had placed stock with another firm of brokers here, whereupon the Schachner company dropped it.

This was followed by a resumption of activity in oil, shares of the Kentucky Oil and Gas Producing Association being offered. One of the prospectuses was entitled, "A message to our clients that may prove the key to fortune." A subtitle was: "It costs you nothing and should convince you how a few pennies honestly gambled with can return colossal wealth."

The shares were offered at 10 cents each. "Get started in this big, legitimate, honest gamble today; you are abundantly protected and this may prove to be your ship, but you must act quickly," the prospectus concluded.

The company was selling this new stock just preceding its bankruptcy petition.

Type of Trackless Trolley Car Being Considered for Use in St. Louis County



THE St. Louis trackless "trolli-car," built by the St. Louis Car Co., 8000 North Broadway, was inspected last week by Receiver Wells and Manager Perkins of the United Railways, who have been considering this type of car's adaptability to communities where revenue would not justify the laying of tracks for regular electric cars, especially in some parts of St. Louis County.

This type of car is operated by electricity from two overhead wires through two trolleys, and is so constructed that it can be adapted to operation with gas by installation of a gasoline motor.

Miss Mary Evans, Educator, Dies.

By the Associated Press.

LINDENWOOD GIRL BREAKS LEG IN PLAYING FOOTBALL

Accident at College Reveals Young Women There Have Two Teams.

Football as played by girls at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, had its first serious consequence Friday, when Miss Thelma Tobin, a student, suffered a broken leg during a practice scrimmage on the campus. She is at St. Joseph's Hospital, St. Charles.

The fact that football, a sport whose heroic requirements intimidate some men, had become a regular feature of athletics at this girls' school, was learned yesterday by a Post-Dispatch reporter in making inquiry into the circumstances of Miss Tobin's injury.

It was said at the college that the game was introduced there early this season, and that two teams were formed, with plenty of candidates eager to try for positions. One team was called the Missouri team, because most of its members live in this State, and the other was named the Kansas team, for a corresponding reason. They have been practicing for a big Thanksgiving game between the two, to decide the championship of the school.

Although her home is in Texarkana, Ark., Miss Tobin was quarterback o fthe Missouri team. During the practice Friday she caught a punt, and was running it back when she tripped and fell heavily with her left leg doubled under her. She was unable to rise, and examination showed her leg to be broken above the knee. An ambulance was called. Miss Tobin is 17 years old, and is described as of robust physique. She bore her injury stoically.

Another of the players said yesterday that members of the teams were not discouraged by the accident, and that practice would continue unless interrupted by the faculty. The players wear regular gridiron togs, and play according to the established rules of the game.

FOURTH CHICAGO BOY STUDENT ENDS HIS LIFE BY HANGING

Mother Finds Youth Dead in Bathroom on Investigating Prolonged Stay There.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Charles Willison, 18 years old, a high school student, was found hanging in the bathroom at his home today when his mother investigated his prolonged absence.

Willison, she told police, had gone to the bathroom two hours before to bathe. When found he was attired in women's clothes.

The boy is the fourth Chicago school student who has ended his life by hanging in recent weeks.

Evidently That Tulane Green Wave Failed to Dampen the Ardor of the Washington Pikers

Fighting Piker Eleven Surprises by Beating Tulane Machine, 14-6

Washington Scores Two Touchdowns on Forward Passes in First Half and Then Battles Valiantly to Hold Margin of Victory Over Powerful Eleven From New Orleans.

By John E. Wray.

Washington University's fighting football team took another step toward fame when it surprised and pained the fast and versatile eleven from Tulane University, New Orleans, by winning 14 to 6, at Francis Field, yesterday afternoon. About 4000 undergraduates and other semi-maniacs hugged and pounded each other or knocked off sundry freshman skull caps in an excess of exuberance when the referee's whistle blew the closing note of the battle with Washington in possession of the ball on its own 45-yard line. The game was the first intersectional contest played here in over a decade.

Washington gave the crowd in the stands a brainstorm by scoring within a few minutes after Thumser had run back the opening Tulane kickoff. Starting on their own 40-yard line the Pikers, through two big gains by Claypool and short punches by the backfield, ran the ball to the Tulane 12-yard line in five plays, from which point a forward pass to Schnauss netted a touchdown, with a goal following.

The second Washington tally came in the second period and was scored in almost the same manner. A march of 60 yards, crowned by a 25-yard forward pass to Cantwell, enabled that alert player to cross the Tulane line for the second touchdown and again goal was kicked.

Brown Makes 50-Yard Run.

Tulane's touchdown came in the third period and was due to a 50-yard dash by Quarterback B. Brown and a tremendous plunge for 15 yards across the goal line by Fullback Legendre, a real star, by the way.

That ended the scoring for the day, although the fourth period was a desperate fight by the Washington eleven, which was tiring fast, to stall off the fierce sallies of the ever-threatening Tulane men. Aided by stout hearts and some stinging penalties administered to the foe, Washington stopped the Tulane advance and was fighting back when the final whistle sounded.

As the game was played Washington showed a superior line save at center, where the Tulane men in the second half found gaping holes for tremendous gains. It was through this region that Brown broke through for the 55-yard run that eventuated in the only score for the Southerners.

The Southern team displayed a fine back in Legendre, whose punting and line bucking was a great feature; and another in little Brown, who flashed around and through the Pikers in seemingly unexplainable manner, at times.

Passes Bewildered Pikers.

Tulane also displayed a forward passing system that bewildered the Washingtonians and seemed nearly always good for gains in midfield. It consisted of two phases. One, a short pass of less than 10 yards made by Legendre to a half or an end, designed to furnish the back with an opening for a long run through the secondary defense. The other a tremendous hurl by the same passer, designed to make a long gain on the pass itself. This variety almost scored a touchdown in the second quarter, when a Tulane back narrowly missed retrieving a 30-yard throw across the goal line.

Both teams fought hard and the game at times was very rough. Runners were thrown viciously and the stiff-arming was about as gentle as a battering ram's smash. Washington's line, while it leaked in midfield, always managed to tighten up in emergency, save for the one occasion when the superb run by Legendre carried him through the Washington secondary defense for a score.

Washington displayed the same wildcat spirit that has put the team on the map in its last three contests. As a whole the team never loafed, tackled well and was down on the enemy quickly, save the ends who were somewhat slow in getting to the safety man on punts. Whatever they hit squarely, stopped; and the men left their feet valiantly on most of the tackles. The line proved that it was about as good as had been seen here this year, and the improved playing of Long was one of the outstanding features. This big boy ought to be a bear-cat next season, as, indeed, he is now.

In the first half Washington fought to sweep the enemy off its feet and gain a lead. It succeeded. In the second half its policy was evidently reversed and an intention to play it safe and hold its lead seemed evident in all its moves. This policy, coupled with the improved form of the Tulane men, spurred on by a scorching tongue-lashing administered by the coach between halves, lent the appearance of a somewhat one-sided contest to the latter part of the battle.

In reality, however, Washington realized that, as Tulane had failed to kick goal on its touchdown in the third period, the Southerners must score at least a touchdown and a field goal to snatch the victory from the Pikers. The defensive policy won out, but it gave the home rooters several very nervous moments.

It was Tulane's fourth defeat of the year, but all of the elevens it has faced have been strong teams. Washington was not considered formidable and three of the visiting team's regulars were left at home, to save them for the Louisiana State and Centre games, which are to be the big features of the Tulane schedule.

Lineup and Summary

Washington	Position	Tulane
Kraehe (c)	Left tackle	H. Talbot
Long	Left guard	Phillips
Hafner	Center	Reed (c)
Kurrus	Right guard	White

Substitutions—Washington: O'Brien for Thumser, Cantwell for Hafner, Sarason for Cantwell; Tulane: Turpin for Nagle, Richeson for Turpin, Ray for Ford, Wingling for Phillips, E. Talbot for Wingling.

Score by quarters:

	1.	2.	3.	4.	T
Washington	7	7	0	0	14

Scoring—Washington: touchdowns, Cantwell and Schnauss; goals after touchdowns, Schnauss (2). Tulane, touchdown, Legendre.

Officials—Young (Illinois Wesleyan), referee, Griffith (Beloit), umpire, Henry (Kenyon), head linesman.

Tulane evidently had not intended to uncover its aerial game until late in the fray, but the Washington touchdowns forced its hand early.

Its short-pass play is well screened and leaves the enemy in doubt as to whether it is to be an end run or a pass. Two of Tulane's three passes in this second period were of the short variety, followed by runs. A fourth down impending forced Tulane to uncover the long forward pass, which is made from an extended line. Washington managed to be on hand and ground the ball when the score was intended; but the Pikers looked foolish on some occasions in defending against the short pass.

Cantwell on the Job.

Cantwell, a fighter, recovered a fumbled punt by Washington in the second quarter—one of several instances showing his alertness. He also intercepted a Tulane forward pass in the fourth quarter—and made a mistake in doing so. It was the fourth down. Tulane hurled the ball for a long gain from Washington's 45-yard line. A Washington man dropped back for a punt, but Thompson deserves at least a 50-50 credit for his fine hurling.

Tulane's Passes Succeed.

Tulane did not have the ball often enough to show its attacking hand until the latter part of the second period, when it began to open up its aerial attack, after finding the Washington line too stout for it to penetrate, at this time. From the 40-yard line the Green Wave tried to score on three forward passes.

Chicago Smashes Through Illinois Line for Victory

Thomas Twice Carries Ball Over for Touchdowns — Final Score 14-6.

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., Nov. 12.—Chicago's powerful fighting machine, playing a driving game of straight football, defeated Illinois 14 to 6 today on a muddy field before a home coming crowd of 23,000 people. Johnny Thomas, the man who beat Princeton, was again responsible for Chicago's victory. Twice the big fullback drove through the Illinois line for gains that placed the ball within striking distance of the Orange and Blue goal, and each time he plunged across with the ball.

It was ideal football weather over head. Sharp and cold, the air resounded with the clash of a vocal battle between the Chicago and Illinois stands which vied with that on the gridiron. A meager sun melted the frozen field and left it slippery, but both teams were heavy enough not to be badly handicapped.

Chicago outplayed the Illinois in the second half, although Illinois fought a hard, game fight. The maroons were equally strong on offensive and defensive when they stuck to line plunges, but Illinois displayed noticeable superiority in forward passing, completing seven of 17 attempts, while Chicago tried but four and failed each time.

Sternaman Proves Star.

Joe Sternaman, playing his first entire conference game, heartened Illinois by his performance at quarter. He proved a 128-pound dynamo of energy and, trying his toe for the first time, booted two beautiful drop kicks between the Chicago bars for Illinois' six points.

Both teams fought on a par the first quarter, with Capt. Walquist furnishing the only thrill when he ran 15 yards with a 10-yard forward pass. Starting the second quarter on the Chicago 23-yard line, Crangle gained through the line and Walquist shot Peden a 12-yard pass, putting the oval on the 8-yard marker. Sternaman dropped back for a beautiful drop kick. The startled Chicagoans had hardly recovered when Illinois punted. Chicago booted the ball back and Halfback Peden, scooping up the ball on his own 25-yard line, zig-zagged down the field, behind wonderful interference, to the Maroon 25-yard line. Immediately Sternaman sent another drop kick between the bars from the 33-yard line.

Returning to the field on the short end of the score, Chicago battled hard. Here Thomas, who had replaced Timme, got under way. Diving through the center Thomas staggered 10 yards from the Illinois 20-yard line before the Illini pulled him down. Alternating with Hurlburt, right half he carried the ball to the 1-yard line. Thomas plunged across for a touchdown Capt. McGuire kicked the goal.

Crisler Misses Place Kicks.

Concentrating their attack on center and right guard, Thomas and Hurlburt made consistent gains. They had carried the ball to Illinois' 25-yard line as the quarter ended and as the last period began, Crisler tried to place a kick, but failed. More plunges by the driving Chicago backs, aided by a left end run by Pyott, gave the Maroons first downs on the 13-yard line. Thomas and Pyott bucked the line for three more when Crisler tried another placement kick and failed.

Illinois failed to gain on passes and punted to Chicago. Straight football carried the oval to the Illini 20-yard mark again, where Thomas took the ball 10 times out of 11 in a series of bucks that left him barely over the goal line for a second touchdown. McGuire again kicked goal.

In desperation, Illinois opened a brilliant display of forward passes, Walquist and Peden taking turns in hurling the pigskin to the waiting hands of Sternaman and Muellen, substituting for Sabo. The Illini with time against them, made three first downs in rapid succession, only to have Crisler grab a long pass on his 3-yard line and race back to the center of the field and safety.

It was Chicago's first victory over the Illinois since 1917.

Penn State Team Hands Navy First Defeat of Season

Bezdek's Unbeaten Eleven Rolls Over Touchdown in Second Period to Win, 13-7.

MIDDIES' RALLY FAILS

Losers Put on Brilliant Spurt in Final Period, but Are Unable to Tally.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12. Pennsylvania State defeated Navy here today, 13 to 7. It was Annapolis' first defeat this season and Penn State is unbeaten so far this fall.

Played on a field deep in mud from recent heavy rains with here and there a pool of water showing, the game was one of the most stubbornly contested on Franklin field in a long time. Although defeated the Navy went down with colors flying, for in the last period the midshipmen showed one of the finest exhibitions of line plunging and carrying the ball that has been seen here this season. State also showed wonderful form on the defensive and, with the exception of the final period, gave a fine exhibition of defensive work.

Navy's only score came quickly after the opening of the game. The ball was dribbled hardly more than 10 yards on the kickoff and a State man fell on it before a State player could hold it, on State's 48-yard line. The midshipmen then began a series of a line plays that resulted in a touchdown.

Penn State Ties Score.

State quickly came back with a touchdown through the magnificent work of Killinger, Wilson and Lightner, but Lightner failed to kick the score when his try at goal went wide.

In the second period, the Navy fought hard to hold the Pennsylvanians, but the speed and power of the attack coupled with the muddy field was too much for the Annapolis team and State, after a fine exhibition of offensive work, pushed the ball over for the second touchdown.

In the last period the Navy received the ball on a punt and drove it on its own 8-yard line. Then in the frantic cheering of the entire crowd, the midshipmen pushed the ball down the field on straight forward passes and line plunges to State's 18-yard line where it was lost on downs. Shortly afterward the game ended.

Country Day Is Defeated, 27 to 6

Chicago Latin School Eleven Plays Brilliant Game to Gain Victory.

The Chicago Latin School from Chicago won a hard-fought battle from the Country Day football team on the latter's campus, yesterday, 27—6. The game was hard fought throughout, the visitors' touchdowns coming as the result of long runs and brilliant line plunging by the backfield.

The first touchdown came after a few minutes of play when Collins acting captain and quarterback for Chicago, went through center for two yards after the ball had been rushed down the field by clever mixing of line bucks and end runs. Cramer added the extra point.

The second touchdown for Chicago came as the result of a beautiful forward pass executed by Cramer and Eiszner, the latter receiving and running 15 yards for a score. Collins kicked the goal.

The third score for Chicago came in the last quarter, when Love, Chicago halfback, picked up an onside kick and ran 50 yards before being downed by Childress. The ball was then put over from the 25-yard line, Cramer going over. He also kicked the extra point.

Country Day's touchdown came a few minutes later, when, after a series of line plays, end runs and a forward pass, Childress went over through center. He missed the goal.

The feature of the game was Love's 50-yard run. Childress also made some nice runs, one of 30 yards through center and several around end for 20 yards at time. La Beaume got off some nice kicks, both punts and kick-offs. The whole Chicago team deserves mention, as all played wonderful football. Noble, at center for C. D., played well until he was injured and had to leave the game early in the second quarter.

The crowd which witnessed the contest was the largest that has ever witnessed a game at the county school.

It was the first defeat for Country Day.

CENTRE'S BACKS TEAR THROUGH AUBURN LINE FOR 21 TO 0 VICTORY

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 12.—Led by the terrific onslaughts of their backfield stars, McMillin, Tanner and Snoddy, the "Praying Colonels" of Centre College, Kentucky, plunged and passed their way to a 21 to 0 victory over Auburn here today.

"Red" Roberts, who started out playing end and later played every position except center and quarterback, plunged through the Auburn line for two of the three touchdowns made against the Plainsmen. The other was bucked across by Tanner.

Centre did not run away with the Plainsmen. In fact, the game was closer and harder fought than the score indicates.

The Colonels, however, kept possession of the ball at least three-fourths of the time.

The few times that Auburn did run with the ball showed that the Plainsmen were facing probably the most impregnable line they have gone up against this season. Ed Shirling, star fullback of the Plainsmen, carried the ball only three or four times, but he gained each time, once breaking through tackle for 20 yards, only to fumble when tackled.

Lineup:

Centre (21).	Position.	Auburn (0.)

OHIO USES 32 PLAYERS BEATING PURDUE, 28-0

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 12.—A gridiron ankle deep with mud and water, failed to turn aside Ohio State's drive for Western conference honors here today, the Buckeyes ploughing through Purdue for four touchdowns and a 28 to 0 victory. Due to rain and snow of yesterday and last night, the field was an unbroken quadrangle of mire and players became almost unrecognizable, after a few minutes of scrimmage.

After Ohio had plunged over the boiler makers' goal three times before the first half had ended, Coach Wilce took opportunity to look over his material for next year, using 32 players in all.

CAPTAIN DEVINE STARS AS IOWA ROMPS OVER INDIANA TEAM, 41-0

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 12.—Scoring three touchdowns in the first period and one in each succeeding quarter, Iowa had an easy time romping away with a 41 to 0 victory over Indiana in a Western Conference game here today. With Capt. Aubrey Devine performing with all his brilliancy, the powerful Hawkeye team shattered the defense of Indiana in the opening quarter and ran up a 20 to 0 advantage before the game had progressed 15 minutes.

The Iowa line stopped the Hoosier backs. The Indiana players were in poor physical condition and time out for Hoosier injuries were frequent.

SYRACUSE WINS FROM COLGATE ELEVEN, 14-0

By the Associated Press.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 12.—On a field half a foot deep with mud and slush, Syracuse defeated Colgate, 14 to 0, here today. The sloppy field and falling snow made the ball difficult to handle and fumbles were frequent. The hard going also impeded the backs on attempted end runs. As a result play was mostly through the line. Syracuse made no attempt to utilize the aerial route and Colgate's few attempts were quickly checked.

Notre Dame Trims Indians.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 12.—The Notre Dame football team today won its third game in eight days by defeating the Haskell Indians, 42 to 7, before 4000 fans. Coach Rockne started his second team, which scored 35 points in the first half. The Indians unloosed a tricky forward pass attack in the second half, but after they had scored one touchdown the Notre Dame first team went in and Mohardt and Wynne tore off long runs that threatened the Indians' goal as the game ended.

Safety Wins for Ohio.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Columbia, after spending itself in a second quarter rally against the Ohio University eleven today, was defeated on a safety which came from a blocked kick and a tackle behind the New York line.

Columbia scored its three touchdowns in the second period. The final was 23 to 21. Ohio was outweighed 10 pounds to the man.

Sidelights on the Pikers' Victory

Tulane players must have thought they were tackling Cornell's scoring punch, when the Washington cyclone struck them in the first period. From the very kickoff Thumser eased through them like an eel, running back nearly 15 yards before he was stopped. Then began a savage punching that ripped the Tulane line like paper. Tulane could not speed up with the Washington forwards and were outcharged repeatedly, Claypool getting through big holes for long gains.

The Washington plays bewildered the Tulane men for a time and when the forward pass across the goal line was hurled, there was no one close to Schnaus to prevent the score.

The march for a touchdown was costly, however, as Thumser was injured and taken off the field after half a dozen plays had been run. Whether he broke a metacarpal bone in his foot will be determined by X-ray.

Onside Kick Works.

The Pikers added to the confusion of the green-jerseyed defenders in the same period by introducing a pretty onside kick that gained nearly 15 yards. Mathes—again a star—recovering the ball.

Tommy Thompson was in form with that forward pass, in the second quarter, and the second touchdown was practically due to his splendid work. Thompson ran back Legendre's punt 10 yards. Then, after O'Brien's fine gain, Tommy hurled one pass to Schnaus and another to Cantwell for the touchdown, Cantwell scored, but Thompson deserves at least a 50-50 credit for his fine hurling.

Tulane's Passes Succeed.

Tulane did not have the ball often enough to show its attacking hand until the latter part of the second period, when it began to open up its aerial attack, after finding the Washington line too stout for it to penetrate, at this time. From the 40-yard line the Green Wave tried to score on three forward passes.

Aldrich Kicks 2 Goals From Field and Yale Beats Princeton 13-7

Bulldogs' Captain Gives Eleven Margin of Victory After Each Team Scores a Touchdown in First Half — Blue's Defense Against Pass Was Important Factor, Roper Writes.

By W. W. (Bill) Roper.
Head Coach, Princeton.
(Copyright, 1921.)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 12.—Yale's victory over Princeton, 13—7, about represents the relative strength of the two teams that faced each other in the Yale Bowl today. Yale took advantage of its early opportunity to score. After a couple of exchanges of kicks, Princeton fumbled a pass from center and as a result, Lourie had to kick from deep in his own territory. O'Hearn made a beautiful recovery and Yale opened the best concerted attack shown all day.

Aldrich was particularly effective on plays inside and outside of tackle. With third down on Princeton's 25-yard line, O'Hearn faked a forward pass and ran around Princeton's right end for a touchdown. The play was very cleverly executed and the right side of the Princeton line was taken in with the deception of the play. From the first few minutes of play it appeared that the Yale team would have a comparatively easy afternoon.

Instead of Yale's score making the Princeton team let up it proved the reverse, and the Tigers opened with a beautiful attack that for the time being changed the complexion of the game. Princeton used a new formation for the first time in this game. Both ends played on one side, one on the line and one a couple of yards back about five yards. This formation had the Yale team guessing most of the first half. Lourie and Cleaves made lots of ground outside the Yale tackle, and around end and Lourie mixed his passing with a running game very effectively.

Tigers Tie the Score.

Late in the second quarter Snively shot a long forward pass to Cleaves on the right, who ran to about the three-yard line, and Garrity took the ball over on the next play on a cross buck. Baker kicked the goal, tying the score. The aspect of the game had entirely changed after Yale's first score and Princeton appeared to be going stronger as the half ended.

Capt. Keck had to leave the game about the middle of the second period. Last Sunday, after the Harvard game, a very serious knee injury developed and forced the Princeton captain to stay in bed until Friday, when the team left for New Haven. It was only through the superhuman efforts of Keene Fitzpatrick and a specialist from Baltimore who worked on Keck for five days, that he was permitted to get out of bed.

His failure to appear with the Princeton team when it was warming up, was probably noticed, and at that very moment, Keck was getting his last electrical treatment in the Princeton dressing room. He showed great courage in going into the game and lasting as long as he did. Frank Rutan, who took his place, did wonderfully well under the circumstances.

Wittmer Showed Courage

While on the subject of injuries, I cannot fail to congratulate Al Wittmer, who tore the ligaments badly in his right knee early in the Harvard game. Wittmer had an injury that would ordinarily keep a man out of football for four or five weeks, but with indomitable will, he played in the entire game.

Bulldogs' Improved Defense Against Forward Pass Beat Tigers, Says Roper

The losing of the gam is naturally a great disappointment, but even in defeat, after giving all credit to the splendid Yale team and its fighting captain, Mac Aldrich, I cannot help but pay tribute to the fighting Princeton eleven that stood up till the very end.

It seemed when the teams went off the field, at the end of the first half, as if either Yale or Princeton had a chance to win.

Yale profited by the intermission and came out much better prepared to solve Princeton's open play. All through the first half, Yale played its center in the line and while this defense made Garrity's line bucking impossible, it offered great possibilities for end runs and forward passes. In the second half, Yale very wisely played the center out of the line and the backs played deeper with the result that several of Snively's long forward passes were intercepted and returned for considerable distance.

What Won for Yale Team.

Yale's improvement in its forward pass defense was what permitted it to win the game. Both teams looked stronger on offense than defense and when the Yale team succeeded in sizing up Snively's long passes, most of the sting was taken out of the Princeton attack.

While it is always hard to pick out individual stars, Captain Aldrich proved a host in himself both on offense and defense and won his own game by kicking two beautiful goals from the field, one from the 25-yard line and the other slightly nearer. Aldrich also recovered two of Princeton's long forward passes.

Yale has a very good team and the entire eleven and "Tad" Jones are certainly to be congratulated. In fact, Yale's offensive strength was better than I anticipated it would be, while the Yale line was very rugged on the defense. The Yale team was in splendid physical condition and showed it had been well coached.

Yale tried very few forward passes in the first half but in the second half executed two or three very clever ones. In one particularly effective play, a Yale back ran wide to the right and Aldrich threw a pass to Mallory over the center of the line.

The game was spectacular in the extreme. At the outset, Lourie outkicked Aldrich who sent his first three punts out of bounds, but after this, the Yale Captain settled down and kicked very well. Lourie punted consistently. Although he and O'Hearn caught punts and ran them back whenever the occasion offered, O'Hearn was particularly brilliant in an open field.

Ed Stinson, who had been playing a wonderful game at right end all fall, got a blow in the head, on the first kick off, when he threw the Yale runner in his tracks. While he stayed in the game for a few minutes, he had no idea of what was going on and it became necessary to take him out and substitute Scott who after the first couple of plays got down to business. I had hoped to only play eleven men as we did last Saturday but human endurance can only go so far. As much as I disliked to do so, it became necessary to make several substitutions toward the end of the game.

I want to take this opportunity of congratulating Tad Jones and the other Yale coaches together with the team. The Yale eleven was splendidly drilled and knew football. The officiating was clean cut and of high order. The spectators and the players were not annoyed by unnecessary penalties and yet the officials had the game in hand every minute. The game was hard fought until the last whistle but as far as I could see, was absolutely devoid of roughness on both sides.

We close our season at Princeton naturally greatly disappointed. We play to win and care nothing for moral victories, but I cannot help feeling that the Princeton eleven will go down in history as a fighting team.

SCULLINS AND MILLERS OPPONENTS IN FEATURE SOCCER LEAGUE BATTLE

All the elements which go to make up a good soccer match are to be found in the program of St. Louis Soccer League games at High School Field this afternoon. The Ben Millers and Scullins will play the first contest and the De Andreis will oppose the St. Louis Screw Co. team in the second. In their only other meeting this season, the Millers tied the Scullins, 1 to 1. The De Andreis defeated the Screws, 3 to 0.

The Scullins, with perhaps a stronger team than that which won the city championship last season, are in last place in the league standing. They have not yet shown a flash of that form which made them a truly great soccer eleven last year. The big blow-off is long overdue and if the combination hits its stride today the Millers are in for a busy afternoon.

There is no guessing the probable outcome of the second game. The Screw eleven has proven itself most inconsistent. It can shoot more goals in one game than any other team in the league and still it can make a most deplorable showing a week later. The De Andreis, an older, slower moving eleven, is sure to profit by the extension of playing time which will call for 40-minute halves instead of the usual 30. This alteration is designed to help the men in their training for the national challenge cup games of next Sunday in which 45-minute halves are demanded.

The first game will start at 2 p. m.

PLESTINA AND PESEK TO WRESTLE TOMORROW

George Bothner has been engaged by Promoter Tex Rickard of New York to act as matchmaker at Madison Square Garden for the wrestling shows to be staged this winter, starting with Marin Plestina and John Pesek on Nov. 14. Bothner has been New York's most prominent wrestling referee for several years past.

Several big matches are in the making and it will not be many days before Ed "Strangler" Lewis and the world's champion, Stanislaus Zbyszko, will be matched for the title.

Cornhusker Beef Triumphs Over Kansas Team, 28-0

Twelve Thousand Persons See Nebraska Eleven Win "Homecoming" Game.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 12.—Cornhusker beef and brawn triumphed today over the Kansas Jayhawkers, the Nebraska huskies driving through to a 28 to 0 victory. Twelve thousand followers of the pigskin pastime, attracted by the Nebraska "homecoming" celebration, massed themselves about the field and watched the twenty-eighth annual conflict by the gridiron warriors of the two institutions.

Outweighing and outplaying their traditional rivals, the Cornhuskers' triumph was never in doubt. They plunged through the line, swung outside the tackles or the ends and hurled successful forward passes in a parade of gains sufficiently consistent to count one touchdown in each of the four periods.

The Jayhawkers made but one promising bid to invade the Nebraska goal. A 30-yard forward pass from Quarterback Wilson to End McDonald once planted the ball on Nebraska's 20-yard line. Unable to make ground through the line or around the ends, the Kansans resorted to forward passes. Four overhead shots were blocked by the Nebraska backs and the Cornhuskers, taking the ball on downs, promptly punted out of danger.

Line plunging by Fullback Hartley and off tackle drives and end sprints by Halfbacks Wright and Noble were the main factors in the ability of the Cornhuskers to gain ground, although Quarterback Preston's spectacular returns of Kansas punts twice placed the Nebraskans within scoring distance.

The lineup and summary:

Nebraska (28)	Position.	Kansas (0)
Swanson (C.)	Left end	Black

flected it and it would have grounded, but Cantwell caught it on the wing and held it. This gave Washington the ball on its own 25-yard line. Had it been allowed to ground it would have been Washington's ball at the point of the throw, namely, the 45-yard line.

Even when Tulane seemed to have the Washington line at its mercy it could not gain consistently and was held at critical times.

Schnaus did the punting after Thumser went out, but he was not equal to Legendre, a great booter.

Cold Affects Southerners.

The Southerners felt the piercing cold keenly, the more especially as the Washington gym was without heat, due to repairs. Hot showers were available after the game. The Tulane trainer took buckets of hot water on the field and administered the heat and homeopathic doses to his patients.

Washington and Tulane met once before, in 1908, at Tulane. Washington won that game also, score 12—0.

St. Louis University's football team viewed the game and got an eyeful, for Washington showed its forward pass hand, its onside kick and its criss-cross—a play which was smothered so quickly they did not try it again.

Kurrus, a reliable lineman, was in the spotlight on several occasions yesterday, making some fine tackles behind the enemy line.

Figures show that Tulane outrushed the Pikers by 29 yards. This difference is chiefly due to the Pelican's wild session in the third period during which they gained 80 yards and a touchdown in a half dozen plays.

Tulane came out of the game in good shape, but three Piker regulars were injured. Dick Hafner's ankle was injured again, and Baldy Thumser hurt a bone in his foot, and Ollie Kurrus, guard, who suffered a severe bruise on the hip. He has played in every game this season, and although injured in the third quarter yesterday, Ollie said nothing about it until he reached the gym, exhausted. He played a hard game, once breaking through and nailing Legendre for a 5-yard loss.

The Piker regulars will be given a vacation tomorrow. Intensive work for the Thanksgiving day encounter with St. Louis University will begin Tuesday.

Missouri Upsets Valley 'Form' by Beating Sooners

Tigers Outplay Oklahoma Machine and Score Brilliant Victory, 24 to 14.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 12.—The Missouri Tigers ate up the unsuspecting Oklahoma University football eleven here this afternoon and by outplaying their powerful opponents, upset all the dope with a 24 to 14 victory.

A trio of touchdowns with kicked goals and a drop kick proved the undoing of Beny Owen's warriors. The Missouri gridmen started the game with a determination to win and the opening attack in the early periods sent the ball over for a touchdown and a field goal, the count at the end of the second period finding them on the long end of a ten to 0 score.

It was decidedly Missouri's game during the first two periods. Passing and line plunging netted them consistent gains. They kept the Sooners on the defensive most of the time and allowed them only four first downs in the opening half. "Chuck" Lewis, Tiger punter, gave his teammates yardage advantages continually in exchanges of punts with the Oklahoma booters, and in spite of an injury received during the week's scrimmage, exhibited some scintillating fotball. His open field running also was a feature.

The first counter came in the opening period. The Tigers had worked the ball into Oklahoma territory and a goal seemed inevitable. But an intercepted forward pass and punt by Morrison sent the ball back to the middle of the field. After a line plunge had failed of appreciable gains, the probability of a Missouri touchdown seemed slight. On the next play, however, Lewis sent an unerring flip 30 yards across to the speeding Hamilton who nabbed the oval and dashed past Oklahoma's safety men 20 yards to the Sooner goal.

Missouri and Oklahoma each counted a touchdown in the third period, the Tiger counter coming as the result of pass, Lewis to Hamilton and an end run by Lewis. Hill's 55-yard run from the kickoff and a series of line bucks gave the Sooners their counter. Bowles kicked the goal.

Missouri scored a third touchdown in the final quarter when Kershaw intercepted Morrison's pass and the Tigers carried the ball down the field, alternating an aerial attack with line plunges. The Sooners also scored, James carrying the ball across after a series of line bucks. Bowles failed in an attempt to place kick in this period from the 30-yard line.

PENN'S RALLY IN LAST 5 MINUTES BRINGS TIE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Pennsylvania and Dartmouth met on the gridiron at the Polo Grounds this afternoon and played a 14-to-14 tie. The teams battled fiercely during the last two periods of the game, Dartmouth scoring what seemed to be a winning touchdown, when Siegfried plucked a forward pass out of the air, threw off three Penn tacklers and sped away to the goal line. But the joy of Dartmouth was short-lived. Penn, stung by the imminence of defeat, began a rally in the last five minutes of the game and tore through the green eleven's line and around the ends for long gains and the tying score.

By the Associated Press.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Army finished its home schedule today, defeating Villa Nova handily by 49 to 0. The Pennsylvania collegians threatened only in the second quarter, when a penalty for roughing and two aerial plays put the ball on Army's 7-yard mark. Gilmore and Richards starred for the Army.

Unbeaten Morvich Wins 11 Races and $116,584

MORVICH, Benjamin Block's unbeaten colt, which last week removed any vague remaining doubt of his right to the 2-year-old crown by capturing the Pimlico Futurity, boosted his earnings for the campaign to the sum of $116,584 thereby, an amount excelled only twice in American history by a racer of his age. Domino won $170,880 and Colin $131,037 in 2-year-old competition, but each of these famous horses had the advantage of capturing the rich Futurity, to which Morvich was not eligible. The brown son of Runnymede has now run and won 11 races, a list of which, with his winnings in each, follows:

Suffolk Selling Stakes	$ 3,950
Greenfield Selling Stakes	3,625
Overnight race at Jamaica	4,265

Soldan Wins Second Leg on Yale Bowl, Beating McKinley

West End High School's Undefeated Eleven Finishes Season With Easy Victory — Cleveland and Central Battle Brilliantly to a Tie, 21 to 21.

Soldan High School captured the Interscholastic League football championship yesterday by defeating McKinley High School's eleven by the decisive score of 49—7. The Yale Bowl, emblematic of the title, passes from the hands of Cleveland, last year's winner, to the West End school. This is the second time that the trophy has been won by the Union avenue school. Central and McKinley also have won it twice. Cleveland held the championship last year only. The conditions of the award are that the first team to win the championship five times, not necessarily in succession, becomes the permanent holder of the bowl.

In the other game of the day Cleveland and Central tied, 21 to 21.

Soldan completely outclassed the Crimson team from South St. Louis and had little difficulty gaining at will despite the game stand of the losers. After the first quarter, during which Coach Hawkins' charges held Cook's men to a lone touchdown the West Enders scored twice each period and took things easy, mixing line plays and straight football with an aerial game. McKinley fought desperately throughout and at times displayed brilliant football.

Dunham, Eichler and Young, who was substituted for Jones early in the game played sensational football for Coach Cook's team. Hanley, at tackle for McKinley, and Jestes at quarterback displayed good football for the defeated team. Jestes' kicking compared very favorably with the booting of Dunham for Soldan.

McKinley Managed to Score.

In the last quarter McKinley surprised the crowd of 1500 by scoring a touchdown against the powerful Union avenue entry. Two forward passes netted 35 yards and Bokern took the ball over the Soldan line on a line plunge. The game ended shortly after this score as the Soldan back field was marching up the field toward the McKinley goal.

Second Game Was Feature.

Central and Cleveland battled savagely in their 21-21 draw. The outcome of the game was exactly as it should have been for the two teams were as evenly matched as any elevens which have battled this year. Fenenga's Carondelet squad had an edge in the last half of the game and Mike Walker's Red and Black machine speeded to the front in the opening periods.

Cleveland drew first blood when Williams the clever fullback, circled Central's end for a 50-yard dash to a touchdown. Superior kicking by Central worked the ball gradually down the field until Central snared a fumble on the Cleveland two-yard line. Cleveland, battling strongly, held the midcity team on two line plays, but on the third Quarterback Fischer plunged through center for the tieing score.

A fumbled punt contributed Central's second touchdown. Kohlbry juggled the ball as he caught it and when a Central tackler hit him he dropped the pigskin. Goldberg, Central end, recovered and ran 25 yards across Cleveland's line for the second Central score. The final Central touchdown came by means of an intercepted pass. Kittlaus, running at top speed, grabbed the ball as it was about to settle into Massengale's arms, and dodged through a broken field for 45 yards for the score.

Cleveland then braced and began an aerial attack which baffled the Red and Black. A long pass, Massengale to Williams, netted a second touchdown. The final scoring came as a result of several short passes, followed by a 20-yard end run by Plank which placed the ball on the Central five-yard mark. On the next play Massengale plowed through Central's tackle for the distance, tieing the count. The remainder of the quarter was evenly fought in midfield.

75 Chicago Teams Coached by Stagg

Graduated From Yale in 1888 and Later Spent Year in Divinity School.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Besides coaching 30 football teams at the University of Chicago, Athletic Director A. A. Stagg has coached 24 track teams, 20 baseball teams and one basketball team. Stagg graduated from Yale in 1888, he spent one year in post-graduate work there and another in the Yale Divinity School.

While at Yale he pitched on five championship baseball teams and played regularly at end on two Yale football team. Recalling those early days recently, Mr. Stagg said:

"My first experience as a coach was when I was a student at the Springfield (Mass.) Y. M. C. A. College, where I had gone in the fall of 1890 to get training for physical education work. I immediately organized a football team among the 52 members of the school and arranged games with several Eastern colleges and universities, including Amherst, Williams, Wesleyan, etc. Our team made such a strong showing, winning several victories, that the following year we played Yale and Harvard as well as several other colleges. I also organized and coached two baseball teams during this time.

"I graduated at the Springfield Y. M. C. A. College in 1892, and in the fall took the position of director of the Department of Physical Culture and Athletics at the University of Chicago, which was just opening its doors for the first time. Although all of the universities had already begun and had their football teams organized for two weeks or more, I immediately organized a football team at Chicago and arranged a schedule of games."

The management of all athletic activities at Chicago, including all intercollegiate contests, has been under the supervision of his department ever since. His field also includes direction of the required work in physical education prescribed for undergraduate students through five-sixths of their college course.

Michigan Holds Wisconsin to Tie

Failure to Win Practically Eliminates Badgers From Big 10 Race.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 12.—Wisconsin virtually was eliminated from the trio contending for the championship of the Western Conference when Michigan today invaded Badger territory for the first time since 1905 and fought their old gridiron rivals to a 7-to-7 tie.

Only victory could have kept the Wisconsin team in the conference showing against the unbeaten Ohio State and Iowa teams.

Breaks in the game today gave both Wisconsin and Michigan chances for easy scores, but the necessary punch was always lacking on the crucfbal play. Failure to kick successful field goals from easy positions cost each team a victory.

The second quarter saw each team score. Tebell, Badger end, had a 10-yard punt made from behind Michigan's goal posts, bounce into his arms at the opening of the period and he raced over for the Badgers' only tally. Sundt kicked goal.

The thrill was quickly followed by another which silenced the Badgers and blighted the Wisconsin championship chance when Michigan raced the ball into Badger territory and then put across a touchdown from a pass, Goebel to Robey. Here again it was a break in the game which gave the score, as Williams, Wisconsin quarterback, slipped when he tried to intercept the pass and allowed the ball to fall into the hands of Robey, who ran 15 yards for the touchdown.

The lineup:

Michigan.	Position.	Wisconsin.
Goebel	Right end	Tebell
Muirhead	Right tackle	Brumm
Wilson	Right guard	Hohlfeld
Vick	Center	Buser
Dunne (C.)	Left guard	Christianson
Banks	Quarterback	Williams
Kirke	Right half	Elliott
Robey	Fullback	Sundt (C.)

Score by periods:

Wisconsin	0	7	0	0	— 7
Michigan	0	7	0	0	— 7

Scores: Wisconsin—Touchdown, Tebell; goal from touchdown, Sundt. Michigan—Touchdown, Robey; goal from touchdown, Goebel. Referee, Walter Eckersall, Chicago; umpire, Haines, Yale; field judge, Moorhead, Princeton; head linesman, Young, Illinois Wesleyan.

No, Bo, the "Bye" Drawn by Champion Hoppe in the Cue Tourney Is Not Necessarily a Good-bye

Hoppe Will Face Greatest Test in 18.2 Cue Tourney

Three of Six Opponents Have Ability to Extend Champion if They Play Their Best.

HAS HELD TITLE 16 YEARS

Willie Won Championship From Cure, Famous French Player, in Paris in 1905.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—The draw for the opening games of the international billiard championship resulted as follows: Welker Cochran vs. Roger Conti (France), Monday night; Jake Schaefer vs. George Sutton, Tuesday at 1 p. m.; Edouard Horemans (Belgium) vs. Ora Morningstar, 4 p. m., Tuesday; 8 p. m. William Hoppe vs. loser of Monday night's match.

By John E. Wray.

It is not the nature of that phlegmatic champion, William F. Hoppe of New York, to worry. Except for one brief period in his career when his vitality was below par, Willie has given little evidence that he possesses a nervous system. Temperament is not in his lexicon. With fine physical health and an ability to concentrate on the task in hand equaled by few, Hoppe has stood out in the world as a man who could not be shaken, no matter what the stake or how great the strain.

It was this faculty that enabled Hoppe to retain the 18.2 balkline billiard championship, won in Paris by him in 1905, for almost as many years as his age totaled when he won the honor. Willie has held the title 16 years and he was 17 when he captured it from Cure, the famous French player.

If there is to be a weakening in Willie's steel nerves, it will occur this week at Chicago during the international championship tournament which opens tomorrow night. For the first time in all the long years that have elapsed, William is facing opposition that seems worthy of his own prowess.

Of the stars who played in France, with Hoppe, George Sutton is the sole survivor to enter the coming event.

Of the six rivals whom Willie must meet and defeat, any one of three has a fair chance to defeat him in a single match and the combination, if each happened to be at the peak of his game during the 400-point match would have a chance to defeat Hoppe.

Hoppe Supporters Confident.

Willie says "no!" His Manager, R. B. Benjamin, writes a ha-ha and a tee-tee to the very suggestion of such a thought. Charley Peterson, the St. Louis expert who plays with Willie in practice and exhibition matches, declares that Hoppe never, no, never, played any better than he does today, and points to a "run" of 590 points in a recent effort.

But despite these statements and going back to cold figures, it can be demonstrated that William is in a position that should cause him worry. It's bread, meat and Rolls Royces to William, this title.

Annually he has picked up at least $25,000 net for himself, by touring the country seven months as the worlds' billiard miracle. They wouldn't flock to see a beaten miracle, but would gather around his conqueror. Hence the pork-chops-and-gravy aspect to Willie's position.

The men who may cause Hoppe grave trouble are:

Welker Cochran of Iowa.
Jake Schaefer of Chicago.
Edouard Horemans of Belgium.

Conti of Paris is too new to the game and Sutton and Morningstar have played in creditable form but nothing great. But Schaefer and the other two have displayed form creditable to any play; form which, if displayed in the coming tournament, will win it, almost to a certainty. For example:

Schaefer played a 4800-point match against Edouard Horemans last season, winning with a grand average of 50! That is better than ever was made in a title tournament and is considerably more than was ever recorded in a match series for the championship, of any length over 2000 points.

Cochran did practically as well, while Horemans has turned stunts as marvelous. He defeated Cochran in one long series, but twice was beaten by Schaefer. Nevertheless his recent exploit in the East, when he ran out 400 points from the spot, without giving his opponent even a chance to play, shows the high character of the Belgian's play.

Hoppe's Average Was 47.

Hoppe, in winning last year's tournament again won with a clean slate and no defeat. But his grand average for the tournament was 29 24-54. The tournament preceding, when Schaefer and Cochran were very green and Yamada and Slosson were added entrants, Willie won six games without a defeat with a grand average of 47.06, the best ever recorded in a championship.

Perhaps it will be wondered why Hoppe should not again beat the men whom he has already trimmed. Well, perhaps he should. Probably he will. But Schaefer and Cochran this year have performed as never before. They, with Horémans, have the billiards in them. If they find Hoppe off stride, one of them may chance to be at his best and may sneak through, a winner.

Betting Out of Line.

It seems almost incredible that Hoppe can run the gauntlet of all three sterling foes without at least losing one game. And yet in Chicago they are wagering 1 to 3 that Hoppe will win the tournament and 1 to 2 that he will not lose a match.

Some confidence! It is based on the known "money playing" qualities of the champion, who does his little best all the time, whether nothing or the Washington monument is on the result.

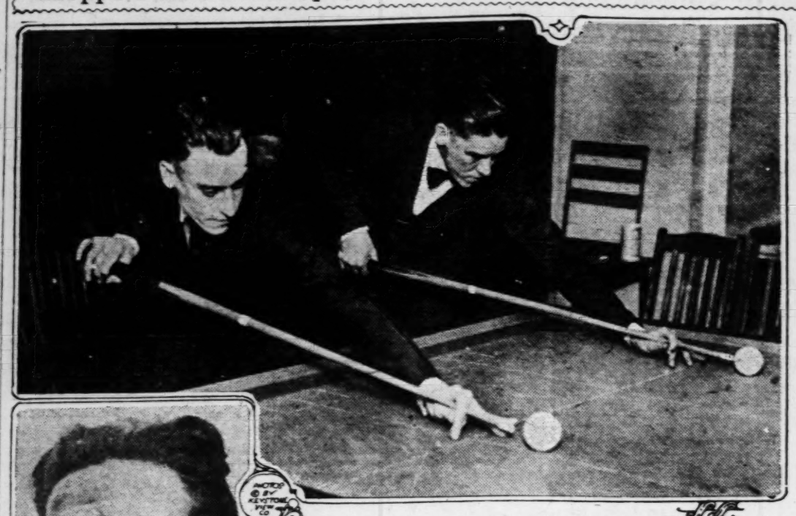
They have tried to rattle Willie in matches, but they have succeeded only in disturbing the temperament of the goat getter, not Willie. Charley Peterson tells how on one occasion in the title tourney last year a rival delayed the game by remaining out of the room when all was ready to proceed. He was gone half an hour. Hoppe sat restfully waiting for him to come in. Someone suggested that they were trying to get Willie's goat.

"Not a chance," he laughed. "The table is here, not out in the lobby. He'll have to get my goat on the table, if he wants it."

When the player finally arrived he was treated to an overwhelming defeat—the worst of the tournament.

During the 16 years they have tried every known means to "get" Hoppe, but he stands all tests, because he has a better temperament than the other fellow. However, some 8 years or so ago, it appeared as if Hoppe had cracked. Hoppe had been married a short time before and had neglected the table to some extent. He undoubtedly went back, but he did not risk his title. Reports came back from the East that he was all in. Sutton, the handless wonder, told me at the time that he thought Hoppe was "a wreck." He was hesitating and uncertain in his play and took a long time before each shot—just contrary to his usual style. But he came through all right and no trace of his indisposition has ever returned. Careful in his habits and athletic in training, Hoppe neither drinks nor smokes and has not done so, he says, in the 33 years of his lifetime.

Hoppe's 16-Year Supremacy Menaced by These Foes



JAKE SCHAEFER AND WELKER COCHRAN.

Jerabek to Meet Dean at S. B. A. C.

Welterweights to Box in Feature Friday Night—Kaiser-Moore Bout Closed.

Three 10-round bouts will make up the boxing show to be held at the South Broadway A. C. Friday night. In the feature, Sailor Jerabek will trot out his heavy artillery against Ora Dean, the Staunton slugger. Jerabek has won his last two bouts against Burns and Bryant by knockouts. Dean also has been boxing in good form this year. The bouts were originally scheduled for tomorrow, but an injury to Jerabek caused a postponement.

In the semiwindup, Grub Whalen is scheduled to tackle Bud Purell of Terre Haute at 128 pounds. Purell, who will be making his debut here, brings clippings which show he has met such boys as Jimmy Hanlon, Cal. Delaney, Toney Zill and Benny Becker. He owns a five-round knockout victory over Johnny Lucas.

Another Terre Haute boxer will be seen in the curtain-raiser, when George Teague faces the straight and hard-hitting Mike Kramer.

Kaiser to Box Moore.

Peewee Kaiser and Pal Moore of Memphis will meet in the feature bout of the Angelica Physical Culture Club show at the Coliseum Nov. 22, it was definitely announced yesterday, by Leo Heyman. KRUG HEADS SHOOTERS

The fourth match of the handicap tournament of the St. Louis Police Revolver Club produced another surprise for the old-timers. Fred C. Krug again topped the list and has a score of 181 out of a possible 200 points. He is going to be a hard man to keep out of first place, as his shooting is improving and his handicap of 14½ per cent make him hard to beat. Following were the scores:

Tilden Gets Offer To Become "Pro"

Big Gates at Championship Tournaments Interest Attention of Money Men.

Red lights are showing upon the lawn tennis track. The danger-ahead signal is set because of the amazing sums of money taken in at the gate in the tournaments this season. At Philadelphia the classic All-Comers drew a gate of approximately $120,000 gross. For the challenge matches for the Davis Cup between the Japs and the American defenders at Forest Hills, it is said that about $70,000 was received.

These great sums have aroused the interest of the professional promoter. The dollar sign appears likely to have its turn upon the courts in one of two ways: There will be stiff battles between the clubs to secure the plums in the way of remunerative tournaments or star players will become attached to a group of traveling performers who will compete for a price instead of a prize.

Tilden Receives Offer.

According to reliable authority, William T. Tilden II recently admitted that he had been approached with an offer to display his skill for cash. Aside from the admission that the project had been seriously made to him, Tilden was averse to discussing the subject. It is reported that one or two others have similarly been sounded out along the same lines as evidence that plans for a tour have been pretty well mapped out by those who believe they see money in the venture.

The fact that Tilden, Vincent Richards and others in the recent limited number of belated exhibitions for Devastated France accumulated the sum of $10,000 is regarded as focusing the interest of promoters. An official of the Metropolitan Association stated that to his knowledge the sums involved had brought about a condition that has never before been known to lawn tennis in this country, and for that matter he doubted if it had shown itself in any other quarter of the globe.

Tilden Profited by Tilts.

So far as is known Tilden is the only lawn tennis star who has profited at all through his high position in the game. He has done it in full accord with the amateur rules and in a manner thoroughly legitimate. It is all a matter of common knowledge to the United States Lawn Tennis Association and in no wise affects his standing as an amateur. Tilden's writings during the past season are said to have brought him something more than $1000 per month. The champion has carefully conformed to the rule which requires that the player must personally write his own articles and in no wise has he incurred official displeasure.

The immense money turn-over and the threatening prospect of some adventures in professional matches and competitions is causing anxiety within the official circles of the National Association. Few believe that, even though conducted upon a high plane, professional lawn tennis will pay as handsomely as some of the interested promoters appear to think possible. Sifting various accounts Tilden is reported to have been offered as much as $25,000 for a season under professional management.

Bike Races This Week.

The cycling season at New York will be officially opened at Madison Square Garden on Nov. 16 and 17, when a 24-hour bicycle race will be conducted. Municipal Teams Face Veterans in Cup Tie Contests

Springfield and Gillespie Soccer Elevens to Use Foreign-Born Players Here.

The Springfield (Ill.) F. C. will bring an eleven composed of British-American players here today for the second round United States Football Association cup tie with the Paulian of the Municipal League. The game will be played as the second part of a double-header at Sportsman's Park, the St. Leos opposing the Gillespie Moose club in another title clash in the opener at 1:30 o'clock.

According to reports from Springfield, the team that will tackle the Paulians, winners over the Prendergasts, 3—0, in the first round, has won two of its three tilts this year. The game here will be the first cup battle for Springfield.

There are many foreign-born and veteran soccer players on the Gillespie team, which will oppose the St. Leos, municipal champions two years ago. Gillespie in its first cup game eliminated Wilsonville United, 2—1, in a contest at Gillespie. Young and Conn scored the goals for the Moose.

One of the players on the team is Craig Easton, brother of Jim Easton, the husky forward, who played in St. Louis some years ago. Craig Easton also has shown in this city, but is not regarded as a star. He plays outside left forward for Gillespie. Most of the players on the Gillespie aggregation work in one of the mines in that city. A majority of the kickers are Scotchmen.

Picks St. Leos to Win.

A well-known soccer authority who saw the Gillespie team play its first cup game thinks the St. Leos should have no trouble in winning unless the Illinois team has improved wonderfully since its initial clash in the title competition.

The games will prove the real test for the two Municipal contenders. It will be the first time this season out-of-town elevens have shown in this city. If the St. Louisans win there is a chance they will be pitted against one of the better-known professional teams for the third round. Drawings for the third round probably will be made Nov. 20.

In order to conform with the rules of the United States Football Association, an admission charge of 55 cents will be made to the games Sunday. All the regular Municipal contests scheduled for Sunday have been called off by the officials. The teams today will play 45-minute halves.

The probable lineups of the elevens for the two games:

Johnston City Surprises.

Johnston City (Ill.) sprang a real surprise last Sunday when a 3-2 victory was gained over the Swedish-American team of Chicago in a clash played in the Windy City. William Cummings, one of Chicago's leading soccer authorities when here for the second round draw, stated that the Windy City team to survive would have to defeat the Swedish-Americans. The Johnston City manager formerly played with the Swedish-Americans.

Johnston City's victory places the team in the third round and there is a possibility that the eleven will be drawn against a St. Louis aggregation for its next battle. Indications are that the city has a real eleven.

Wind Is Merely A Mental Hazard, Evans Declares

Chick Advises Golfers to Pay No Attention to Air Currents When Shots Are Made.

By Charles (Chick) Evans Jr.

(Copyright, 1921.)

The average golfer is inclined to think that winds sweeping across the course have more effect on the flight of his golf ball than they really do.

Winds have a greater effect on the player than they have on the ball, and the average golfer will do well to give scant attention to the direction or strength of wind currents when he stands at the tee.

One of the chief factors in a long, straight drive from the tee is concentration. Good drivers send out long balls because they have learned the lesson of centering solely upon the matter of hitting the ball square on the nose. The player who has learned to do this can repeat time and again. Such a player will not let himself be concerned much over the wind.

Testing for a Breeze.

I have seen players take a handkerchief at the tee and hold it out to the breeze, evidently to get a true "line" on the wind. I have seen them doing this when the wind currents were hardly strong enough to sway the dandelions. It takes a young gale to interfere with the ball's flight, and the fact is that even a high wind has been demonstrated to have little effect for or against a good drive. Here is a good example of this statement:

Cecil Leitch, the British woman champion, in one of her games recently at the Belleclaire tournament, sent out a drive of over 300 yards against a wind that was almost a gale! A drive of such length—splendid distance for a powerful man player—is in all probability all that Miss Leitch would hope for had the wind been favoring. Indeed the newspaper accounts of the shot mention her surprise at the distance.

Another thing is that so many players think a strong wind flying with the ball will lengthen the drive. Consequently, many players play deliberately to get the ball high from the tee. It was the mathematician, Tait, I believe, who demonstrated that a golf ball was never blown onward by a favoring wind, as is popularly believed, for the reason, obvious enough when it is pointed out, that a driven golf ball travels faster than any wind that ever blew. Tait also explains that wind flying with the ball can increase the distance of the ball's flight only because air resistance to the ball is lessened and the decreased resistance permits the ball to travel a short distance farther.

With Vardon It's Different.

Harry Vardon thinks that the drive which must be played into a terrific wind and be intentionally pulled or sliced in order to obtain the customary distance is one of the finest shots in the game. But in this Vardon is talking about the winds that sweep the British courses almost daily. These are winds that we do not contend with here except on rare occasions. And you would have to see Vardon wrap one of his thrilling intentional pulls around a dog-leg corner to really grasp what he means. In the drive Vardon, the master, makes his ball answer him with everything except a singing voice.

Don't give too much thought to minor winds. You will soon observe that they have little effect and that they are mainly a mental hazard.

THE BOY WONDER.

I'VE got a youthful prodigy,
As bright as any boy could be,
Residing in my hovel.
He'll have the brightest of careers,
For during his eleven years
He never wrote a novel.

He finds amusement in his toys,
And likes to play with other boys,
And do a little fighting.
Although he likes to romp and play
I'm proud of him, for, strange to say,
He never took up writing.

He is a most precocious kid,
But never tried to make a bid
For literary glory.
Though Daisy Ashford made a hit
And all the kids were doing it,
He never wrote a story!

ADMITS IT.

Babe Ruth is said to be making a hit in his vaudeville sketch, "That's Good." Sounds like a poker skit.

"Former Flying Commander Refuses Dry Agent Job." He aspires to something higher, we take it.

The bill to tax musical instruments is opposed by the Federation of Music Clubs on the ground that they are not a luxury. Maybe not a luxury, but in certain hands they are a nuisance.

In taxing musical instruments, where would the trap drummer and his collection of assorted hardware come in?

LONG AND SHORT SHOTS.

Bud Fisher is going to campaign his Mutt and Jeff string stable at Tijuana. Jeff will be the short horse, while you can write your own ticket on Mutt.

"Steamboat Johnson was the only umpire in the South Atlantic League to go through the entire season." Evidently "Steamboat" didn't strike any snags.

The question agitating football circles in Detroit is "when is a professional not a professional?" Offhand we'd say when he disguises himself as an amateur and gets away with it.

Like his efforts against Jack Dempsey, that story about Jess Willard striking oil is crude.

It is rumored that Johnny Evers will supplant Cozy Dolan with the Giants next year. Johnny—like Graw probably figures that a dyspeater will do him more good than a pie eater.

A match between Jess Willard and Joe Beckett would prove interesting. The winner would be entitled to meet Fred Fulton for the fur-lined cheese knife.

HYMN OF LOVE.

I LOVE my kids,
In fact, adore 'em;
Would I could blow
Their noses for 'em.

Their lot is not
A bed of roses
When they're too young
To blow their noses.

HERMAN GETS DECISION OVER ROY MOORE IN BOUT OF 15 ROUNDS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Pete Herman, New Orleans, former world's bantamweight boxing champion, received the judges' decision over Roy Moore of St. Paul in a 15-round bout tonight. It was Herman's first appearance in the ring since he lost his title to Johnny Buff last September. Herman held a safe lead in every round but the eighth, in which Moore had a shade, and the ninth, which was even. The former champion's infighting was effective, with Moore taking severe punishment from fast right and left hand body blows.

11 ST. LOUIS TEAMS ENTERED IN MID-WEST BOWLING TOURNAMENT

Eleven St. Louis teams are entered in the annual Middle West Bowling tournament, which is scheduled to start at Des Moines, Nov. 18. The schedule for the local quintets to strive for honors follows:

Nov. 19—Sunshine Specials vs. Hooper Stores, Al Castles, Stan Jones; Wooster Lamberts Nos. 1 and 2; Nos. 26, Adamars, Budweisers and Union Bakers; Nov. 27, Witters Rams vs. Palace Alleys.

Henry C. Menne, St. Louis, president of the association for the past several years, will not be a candidate for re-election. Menne will be unable to make the trip to Des Moines.

The five-man entry for Des Moines is around 235 teams, or about 15 short of the record set here last season.

KAMMAN AND SANDFORD WIN HANDBALL TITLE

Walter Kamman and George Sandford won the city doubles handball championship at Triple A yesterday, defeating Charley Burg and Joe Daly in the final, 21—12, 21—17, 21—8. Kamman's serving and killing had the Triple A players completely baffled and he and Sandford won as they pleased.

EAST ALTON BANK ROBBED OF $7600 BY 6 MEN IN AUTO

Holdup of Cashier and Assistant Occurs Within Ten Minutes After Customer Deposits $1800.

MORE THAN DOZEN CITIZENS SEE ROBBERY

Thieves Work in Such Bold Fashion That Witnesses Scarcely Realize What Is Going On Until They Flee

J. B. Van Preters, automobile agent at East Alton, Ill., returned to his store at 10:40 a. m. yesterday, ten minutes after having deposited $1800 in the Illinois State Bank, across the street, and was nearly knocked off his feet by H. V. Green, cashier of the bank, who rushed into the store behind him.

"The bank's been robbed," shouted Green. "Let me use your telephone."

Van Preters ran out and encountered a crowd of men who were watching a green painted automobile speeding south along the main road toward Wood River.

Dozen Citizens See Robbery.

That was the aftermath of a holdup in which $7600 was taken from the bank. The robbery was participated in by six men in the presence of more than a dozen citizens of East Alton and was carried out in such bold fashion that the witnesses scarcely realized what was going on until the robbers jumped into their automobile and fled.

The automobile had stopped in front of the Van Preters store and five men got out, a sixth man remaining at the wheel. One of the men carried a grain sack over his shoulder but that did not attract any attention. Four of the men ascended three steps leading to the front door of the bank and adjusted handkerchiefs over the lower part of their faces. The fifth man remained in the street and walked up and down in front of the bank.

Lester Hill, a grocer's clerk, approached the bank intending to have a check cashed. He was intercepted by the "lookout" on the sidewalk who deliberately blocked his advance without saying anything to him. Hill was about to ask for an explanation when the four robbers ran from the bank and, joined by the "lookout," jumped into the automobile and escaped.

Cashier Tells of Robbery.

Cashier Green told a reporter that the robbers were in the bank not more than three or four minutes. His account of what happened in that time follows:

"I was working at my desk behind the cage and my assistant, Warren Lorton, was standing at his desk a few feet away when the four men marched into the bank. They must have worn extra heavy shoes, judging from the noise of their footsteps. I glanced up and seeing them past the cage I assumed they were state inspectors and went on with my work.

"The next thing I knew I was ordered to put up my hands and looking up I saw one of the men poking a revolver through the grating of the cage at my head. I then observed that the men were masked. I put up my hands, and while the one man kept me covered the others walked behind the cage and ordered Lorton to 'stick 'em up.'

"We were then told to get down on the floor. I weigh more than 200 pounds and I had trouble squeezing myself beneath a table where the robbers indicated that they wanted me to go. I was urged along, however, by a blow on the side of the head. Lorton, at the direction of the robbers, crawled beneath a desk.

Bind Assistant's Hands.

"One of the robbers then tore a desk telephone from its place and tied Lorton's hands with the wire. The robber also moved a shotgun, belonging to the bank, which had been standing within Lorton's reach.

"The safe was open and while one of the robbers kept Lorton and me under guard the others took $2000 from the counter and $5600 from the safe, which was open. They left about $5 or $6 in silver on the counter. The man who was guarding Lorton and me, while his companions were dumping the money into their sack, took my watch which was hanging from the cage in front of my desk. The chain had a charm which I regarded highly because I got it from a brewery in St. Louis where I formerly was employed. I begged the robber to leave it alone and he threw it back on the desk.

"Thursday was pay day at the Western Cartridge Co., and as yesterday was a holiday many of the employes had not yet cashed their checks. For that reason we had an unusually large amount of money on hand. The robbers evidently were aware of the fact because they asked for the payroll money, and when I told them it was paid out Thursday they said they knew otherwise."

Van Preters said that after deposition his $1800 he stopped at a neighboring store, and that not more than 10 minutes could have elapsed from the time he left the bank until Green burst into the automobile store behind him and announced the robbery.

Loss Covered by Insurance.

The bank is controlled by the Western Cartridge Co., and the Equitable Power Co., another East Alton concern, and John M. Olin, who is treasurer of both those companies, is president of the bank. It was organized six years ago and has a capital of $50,000. The bank is protected by theft insurance. The Western Cartridge Co. weekly payroll is approximately $20,000.

Witnesses who saw the automobile when the robbers fled, did not agree as to the numbers on the license tag, but all stated that it was a Missouri license.

On Sept. 5, 1919, two men attempted to hold up the bank, but they were chased away by E. L. Zoerning, then cashier, who pointed a revolver at them.

Police Board Head and Detective Chief Visit Four Cities, Posing as Crooks

Miller Says He Found Hoagland Fine "Confidence Man"—St. Louis "Heaven" So Far As Crime is Concerned.

"Meet Kid Bunk."

Thus did President Miller of the Police Board introduce Chief of Detectives Hoagland at police headquarters last night on their return from a tour of four cities. They had been gone a week, during which the paramount question in police circles was, "Where are Miller and Hoagland?" The purpose of the trip was twofold, Miller said. Hoagland wanted to see if he could locate John (Pudgy) Dunn, a crook, who is suspected of having had a hand in the recent killing of William Egan. President Miller wanted to study underworld conditions away from St. Louis.

"Say," said the head of the Police Board, addressing newspaper reporters, "this fellow Hoagland is the swellest confidence man in the country. When it comes to fooling the crooks he's there 40 ways. I am not going to mention for publication the names of the four cities we visited, but I want to tell you we got a world of dope. And here are my conclusions: St. Louis has the best police force in the country, and, when it comes to crime, this city is a heaven.

"We traveled incognito because I wanted to see conditions as they really existed. I did not want to be piloted around by policemen, because I knew those sort of tours do not reveal crime circles in their real light. Here is the way we worked it:

Posed as Crooks.

"When we arrived in a town we would hunt up a tough-looking taxi driver, and Hoagland certainly knew how to pick them out. We had left our police property at home, all except our revolvers, and we posed as a couple of crooks. Hoagland would say to the chauffeur, with a wink, 'Take us to a joint and get us in right; do you get me?' The chauffeur, with a convincing nod, would take us to just the sort of a place we had in mind.

"Arriving at the 'joint' Hoagland would enter alone. I would remain at a distance, because we had rehearsed the game we were going to play, and that was to pretend to have met by chance. After sizing up the place Hoagland would take a seat near someone who impressed him as being a crook and strike up a conversation. It usually went like this: 'Stranger?' 'Yes!' 'What's your racket?' 'Bunk.'

"That was my cue to enter. I would look around, spy Hoagland and then greet him as a friend I had not seen for a long time. 'Hello, Bunk,' I'd say, and he would reply, 'Hello, Smith.' We would then chat about jobs we had pulled off and in that way get the confidence of the man from whom we wanted our information, and what a fund of information we did get! He would tell us everything he knew—everything we wanted to know. All about the crooks in the town and what the police were doing to suppress crime. I heard stories that opened my eyes to police conditions.

Hears Self Talked About.

"In one of the four cities we were in a taxi one day when a friend of the chauffeur hailed him and asked for a ride. 'This looks like a stickup,' said Hoagland, and he got out his big 45 Colt's and placed it on his knees. I followed suit, and when the man at the chauffeur's side turned around and saw our artillery he jumped from the taxi and ran.

"One stickup man that we met insisted that he had met Kid Bunk in Kansas City and Hoagland let him have it that way, and asked him if he ever made St. Louis. 'Say, Kid,' replied the stickup, I wouldn't go to St. Louis for a million. Take my advice and stay away from there. They have a Chief of Police by the name of Miller and he's as crazy as a cuckoo. He's just out of the army and he goes out and makes pinches himself. He carries a riot gun.' I had a hard time to keep from laughing while that information was being handed out.

"After we had made a round of the gun joints in each city we would visit Police Headquarters and give our real names, but we would say nothing about having been around town. I want to say that without exaggeration we have more confiscated stills in Central Police Station here than they have in all the cities we visited put together, and plenty of booze is being sold in those towns, too.

"There are more policemen in proportion to area covered in those other cities than there are here, and in one city we found that policemen are being paid $2100 a year. That is nearly as much as our Captains get. I am sorry to hear that my bill for 215 additional policemen was opposed in the State Legislature. I will have to take that matter up with Gov. Hyde. I could write a book about our trip. Maybe I will write a sketch of it."

Anxious to Find Dunn.

Hoagland said that he established the fact that "Pudgy" Dunn is not in a hospital in a Northern city, as friends of Dunn had asserted.

"He has not been around his haunts in another city, either," said Hoagland, "and I was informed that he had spoken of going to St. Louis recently. I am more than anxious now to talk to Dunn about the Egan murder, and I will have my men double their efforts to find him."

MAYOR TO ASK LEGISLATORS FOR MORE POLICEMEN

With George Strodtmann and William Sacks Executive Will Go to Jefferson City Tonight.

215 ADDITIONAL MEN ARE WANTED

Gov. Hyde Expected to Include Measure in Legislative Program if He Finds There Is Real Demand.

Mayor Kiel, George Strodtmann, chairman of the Republican City Committee, and William Sacks, representing several business men's organizations, will depart for Jefferson City tonight and will remain there over tomorrow urging on legislators the necessity of a law authorizing the enlarging of the St. Louis police force by the addition of 215 men.

This action was decided upon after a meeting of the Republican City Committee yesterday, at which the proposal to ask for additional policemen was unanimously indorsed. Talks in favor of the increase were made by Charles H. Diehl, chairman of the Municipal Development Bureau, Chamber of Commerce; Fred C. Lake and Morton J. May for the Associated Retailers, and Sacks for the Downtown Improvement Association.

The Senate thus far has refused to ask Gov. Hyde to include the police increase in the questions to be discussed at the special session of the Legislature, though the House has asked that this be done.

Yesterday's meeting of the City Committee was at the instance of Mayor Kiel, who thought it proper to show that the party organization in St. Louis indorsed the suggestion made by Victor J. Miller, Police Board president, that the Legislature should authorize the appointment of 215 additional policemen.

After the committee meeting Mayor Kiel said that conditions this winter might call for additional protection and that many merchants felt that something should be done to give them greater security against invasion of their stores by robbers. some policemen in outlying districts The Mayor said he understood that some policemen in outlying districts had beats so large that it was almost impossible to cover them in such a way as to give adequate protection to citizens.

Chairman Strodtmann said his own observation in the Baden district where he lives had shown him that more policemen were needed, as the mounted police up there are required to cover extremely large beats.

St. Louis Legislators Oppose Taking Up Police Measure.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 12.—Persons close to Gov. Hyde said tonight that the Governor might submit to the special session the question of granting to the St. Louis Police Department the power to employ 215 more policemen if the St. Louis delegation can convince him that there is a general demand and real need for the increase. Gov. Hyde was away from the Capitol, having attended the football game at Columbia today and a statement from him could not be obtained.

The Governor told the Post-Dispatch correspondent Thursday, however, that he would submit the question if its advocates could show him that such a bill had a chance of passage. Members of the Legislature are inclined to feel, however, that this measure would have only an outside chance of being enacted into law, unless the open antagonism to it manifest on the floor of the House Thursday by four or five representatives from St. Louis, could be stilled before it is introduced. Many members of the Legislature have resented any expansion of the original program for which they were called here, enactment of a bonus bill and passing on the question of advancing the date at which a portion of the $60,000,000 road bonds may be issued. In addition there will be present when the House and Senate convene Monday only a portion of their members, only 64 Representatives having been here today and less than a quorum of Senators. Seventy-two votes in the House and 18 in the Senate are required to pass measures.

The joint caucus of Republican Representatives and Senators last Monday night refused to recommend submission of the St. Louis police matter after several St. Louis legislators had declared themselves opposed to such action and Thursday the House by a vote of only 33 to 29, adopted a resolution requesting the Governor to submit the matter with several St. Louis representatives voting in the negative.

Hostility in the St. Louis delegation toward the police increase is attributed largely to the general unfriendliness toward Victor J. Miller, president of the St. Louis Police Board, which is felt by many republican politicians in St. Louis, due to a succession of incidents of which one was a raid on a political poker party at the Claridge Hotel several months ago.

Members of both houses are very anxious for the present session to end, that they may return to their homes. This feeling also will militate against the chances of the measure.

REDISTRICTING BILL MAY COST HAWES A SECOND TERM

Virtually Eliminates Chance of Re-election to Congress and Creates Doubt About Newton's Return.

ONLY SIX IN STATE ARE LEFT SECURE

Many Changes Likely in Missouri Delegation Unless Measure Is Suspended Under Referendum.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 12.—The Tout bill, redistricting Missouri into congressional districts, which passed the Senate Friday and will be passed in the House, Monday, by the Republican majority, will, if it is not suspended under the referendum, make many changes in the Missouri delegation in Congress.

Only six of the 16 members are virtually certain to be returned as the districts are remade, five are virtually certain to be eliminated and the remaining five can be classed as doubtful.

Congressman Millspaugh of the First District, Lawrence of the Third, Hawes of the Eleventh, Hays of the Fourteenth and Shelton of the Sixteenth have almost no chance for re-election under the new districting.

Faust of the Fourth, Patterson of the Seventh, Roach of the Eighteenth, Newton of the Tenth, Dyer of the Twelfth and McPherson of the Fifteenth are almos certain of going back, though there is a single doubt about Newton, due to the fact that the St. Louis Couny porion of he new Ninth district will have a larger vote than the city portion, and Newton may have difficulty in getting the nomination.

Rucker of the Second, Ellis of the Fifth, Atkeson of the Sixth, Hukriede of the Ninth and Rhodes of the Thirteenth are in doubtful districts.

The passage of the bill by the house is practically certain as the Republicans are bound by caucus action to vote for it without change. It was prepared by a committee appointed by the caucus, but it principally represents the work of Senator Tout of Cass County.

Millspaugh's Predicament.

Congressman Frank C. Millspaugh of Lewis County, first district, a Republican, serving his first term in Congress, also is serving his last, if the redistricting measure is permitted to stand. Millspaugh's district has been recreated to make it Democratic by from 12,000 to 15,000. The Democratic nomination will be equivalent to an election.

The purpose of the Republicans was to consolidate in the first district as many heavy Democratic counties as possible to make that district heavily Democratic, while they divided Republican counties into as many Republican districts as possible. To accomplish this, they took from the old first district Adair, Putnam and Schuyler counties, all of which return Republican majorities, and added to the district Pike, Monroe, Randolph, Howard and Ralls counties, all heavily Democratic. On the basis of 1918, the district is exactly 14,223 Democratic. It has only one Republican county, Clark, which is in the extreme northeastern section of the State and could not be placed in any other district.

The old district was Democratic ordinarily, but not so heavily as the new will be. Millspaugh was elected in the Republican landslide of 1920 by a plurality of 1307.

Rucker to Have Fight.

Congressman W. W. Rucker of Chariton county, second district, a Democrat, will have the fight of his long congressional life for re-election. As the district has been constituted for 20 years, Rucker had to make the fight in the Democratic primary, nomination assuring election. As recreated, the district is very close, being Republican by 54 votes on the 1918 election basis. The redistricting committee took from the district Monroe and Randolph counties, Democratic by nearly 5000 majority, and added them to the first district. It then added Putnam, Mercer, Adair, Daviess and Caldwell, all Republican counties, and Schuyler and Saline, Democratic counties. The net gain in Republican majorities by these changes was 6032.

Congressman H. F. Lawrence of Clinton county, third district, a Republican, is almost certainly eliminated from serving again in Congress. By the redistricting Clinton county is put in the sixth district, which includes the north and Democratic wards of Kansas City and the strong Democratic counties north of the Missouri river near Kansas City.

The Democratic majority in the 1918 basis is 16,556. Of this 9642 is in the Kansas City wards and 6914 in the counties north of the river. The district is so constituted that the Kansas City wards have a larger vote in both Republican and Democratic primaries than do the counties, and thus Kansas City will dominate the district. Lawrence was elected in 1920 by 2474 votes.

Aid for Charles Faust.

Congressman Charles T. Faust of St. Joseph, fourth district, a Republican, probably will be aided by the redistricting. Platte county, with a Democratic majority of 1458, has been taken from the district, and De Kalb and Harrison, with a combined Republican majority of 872, have been added, as have also Worth and Gentry counties, with a combined Republican majority of 363. The net Republican gain in majority by the changes is 1967.

Congressman E. C. Ellis of Kansas City, Fifth District, a Republican, remains in the fifth district, which includes Jackson county and the better residence wards of Kansas City. His district is considered safely Republican by the Republicans, though their claim is not borne out by the 1918 election figures, which generally are accepted as the better basis. On those figures the district is 4919 Democratic. Ellis was elected in 1920 in a district including all of Kansas City and Jackson county. His new district eliminates the heavy north end Democratic wards.

Congressman William O. Atkeson of Bates county, Sixth District, a Republican, will be in the seventh district under the new scheme. The seventh is one of the doubtful districts. Changes in the counties in Atkeson's district have reduced the Democratic majority of 761 to a Democratic majority of 138, which is inconsequential in a district which has about 80,000 votes.

Patterson's District.

Congressman Roscoe C. Patterson of Springfield, Seventh District, will gain by the redistricting. Patterson's old district extended in a long narrow line from Springfield to the Missouri River and included several strong Democratic counties along the river. As changed, he will be in the Sixteenth District and will retain only Green county (Springfield) of the old district, and will gain a group of Republican Ozark counties near Greene. From him have been taken Howard, Lafayette and Saline counties, with combined Democratic majorities of 3270, and Benton, Hickory, Pettis and Polk counties, with a combined Republican majority of 2330. There have been added to his district Christian, Stone, Laney, Webster, Douglas, Ozark, Wright and Howell counties, with a combined Republican majority of 5721, and Texas county, with a Democratic majority of 337. The net gain for the Republicans by the change in district lines is a majority of 6324.

Through this change of district, Patterson and Congressman S. A. Shelton of Marshfield are placed in the same district, which will mean the elimination of one. It is the understanding that the district was fixed to meet Patterson's desires rather than Shelton's. Shelton resides in Webster County, one of the rural counties of the district. Greene County, Patterson's home, and the counties immediately adjoining it provide the larger part of the vote of the district.

Help for Republicans.

Congressman Sid Croach of Camden County, Eighth District, a Republican, probably will be aided by the changes made in that district. The Republican majority has been increased, though much new territory in which Roach never has campaigned, and in which it never has been necessary for him to form alliances, has been added. His difficulty will be in getting the nomination. Whoever is nominated on the Republican ticket in the district is almost certain of election.

Boone County, with a Democratic majority of 2574, and Osage County with a Republican majority of 239, have been taken from the district, and there has been added Pettis, Dallas and Laclede counties, with combined Republican majorities of 1199, and Pulaski, Maries and Phelps counties, with combined Democratic majorities of 1295. The net Republican gain by the changes is 2159 majority.

Congressman T. W. Hukriede of Warren County, Ninth District, a Republican, has not been helped by the redistricting under which he will be in the new Fourth District. The figures show a slight Democratic gain. Pike and Ralls counties, with combined Democratic majorities of 2141, have been taken from the district, and Boone, with a Democratic majority of 2574, and Osage with a Republican majority of 239, have been added. The net Democratic majority gain is 194.

Congressman Cleveland A. Newton of St. Louis, Tenth District, a Republican, will, if he desires to return to Congress, have to move his residence to another district, or be able to make a deal with Republican bosses of St. Louis County. His new district will be the ninth, and it will consist of the Twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth wards, in St. Louis, and St. Louis County. On the basis of the 1918 vote St. Louis County had 9426 Republican votes, and the two city wards a total of only 6958. The new Ninth District will be controlled by the county. The district will be safely Republican, about 5000, on the 1918 basis. Newton could get into an exclusively city district by moving into the new Tenth, Eleventh or Twelfth districts.

May Eliminate Hawes.

Congressman Harry B. Hawes of St. Louis, Eleventh District, a Democrat, would appear to be eliminated from further service in Congress by the redistricting. The Eleventh District has been made Republican by a substantial majority. It consists of wards 1, 2, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23 and 26 and part of Ward 25. In 1918 these wards returned a Republican majority of 6544. The old Eleventh District, in which Hawes was elected, consisted of the Third, Fourth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth and Twenty-sixth wards, and parts of the Second, Twenty-second and Twenty-Seventh wards. The Third and Fourth wards, considered strong Democratic wards, have been taken from his district.

Congressman L. C. Dyer of St. Louis, Twelfth District, a Republican, again goes into a safely Republican district. While it takes in the river wards, which are Democratic, it takes in strong Republican wards in South St. Louis. On the basis of the 1918 vote the Republican majority is 5684.

Congressman Marion E. Rhodes of Washington County, Thirteenth District, a Republican, will lose by the redistricting, possibly enough to defeat him, though the district is classed by the Republicans as doubtful. It has a Democratic majority of 794 on the 1918 basis. Bollinger County, with a Republican majority of 217, has been taken from the district, and there have been added Ripley, Oregon, Shannon and Dent counties, with combined Democratic majorities of 1244, and Crawford County, with a Republican majority of 458. The net Democratic majority gain by the changes is 1003.

Congressman Edward D. Hays of Cape Girardeau, a Republican, probably has been eliminated from further service in Congress by the redistricting. A net Democratic majority gain of 3987 is shown by the changes. There have been taken from him Christian, Douglas, Howell, Ozark, Stone and Taney Counties, with combined Republican majorities of 4566, and Oregon and Ripley Counties, with combined Democratic majorities of 516. There has been added only Bollinger County, with a Republican majority of 217. Hays' new district is confined to the Southeastern Missouri counties, including the usually heavy Democratic counties, Dunklin, Pemiscot, New Madrid and Mississippi.

McPherson and Shelton.

Congressman I. V. McPherson of Lawrence County, Fifteenth District, Republican, will not be injured by the changes in his district. None of the counties in his old district have been taken away and there has been added Dade County, which has a Republican majority of 407.

Congressman S. A. Shelton of Webster County, Sixteenth District, a Republican, will be in an almost entirely new district, only three counties of his old district remaining in his new district. As explained before, he is placed in the same district with Congressman Patterson. In creating the new Sixteenth District, Crawford, Dallas, and Laclede Counties, with a combined Republican majority of 1432, and Dent, Maries, Phelps, Pulaski and Shannon Counties, with combined Democratic majorities of 1903 have been taken away. There have been added seven Republican counties, Greene, Christian, Stone, Taney, Douglas, Ozark and Howell, with combined Republican majorities of 6226. The net Republican majority gain in the district is 7076.

Material for Gin Plant Found in a Drug Store

Police Arrest Three Men and Confiscate Auto; Secret Shelf in a Saloon Ice Box Lid.

The materials for putting up illicit liquor in bottles to resemble Gordon gin, including what are believed to be counterfeited Government stamps to be used to convey the belief that the gin was a bottled-in-bond product, were found last night by the police in the rear room of a drug store at 1021 North Seventh street.

The police went to the drug store upon information furnished by Frank Maggio, 20 years old, a chauffeur, whom they arrested Friday on a West End street as he drove up in a truck on which were 16 pints of whisky, a 25-gallon can of alcohol, two one-gallon cans of alcohol, 10 empty quart bottles, a quantity of coloring fluid, a whisky gauge, a funnel and labels for both whisky and gin bottles. Maggio said that he had been hired at $25 a week to place labels on bottles and deliver them to designated addresses.

Five-Gallon Cans of Alcohol.

In the rear room of the drug store the police found five five-gallon cans of alcohol, two cases of empty bottles with the name "Gordon" blown in them, one book of labels resembling case stamps which the Government places upon cases of bottled liquors, 300 blue stamps such as are placed over the corks of bottled-in-bond liquors, which bore the inscription, "Made in the spring of 1916; bottled in the fall of 1921," and a quantity of yellow labels for whisky bottles. There also were 18 bottles of gin bearing a label resembling a Gordon gin label and capped with the blue stamps described.

The police arrested in the room Carl Lapresto, 38, who gave no home address and who declined to discuss the liquor or his connection, if any, with it. An automobile belonging to him, which was standing outside, was confiscated.

The proprietor of the drug store, Vincent Chiana, 43, and his clerk, Frank Rufino, 20, of 2823 Semple avenue, also were arrested. Chiana said that he had rented the rear room to Lapresto three months ago and that he had no knowledge of the store in the room. The four men are being held for the Federal authorities.

Still in Operation Found.

A 15-gallon still in operation was found last night by the police in the basement of the grocery of Tony Hess, 26, at 100 Lynch street. John Hess, 74, of 1810 South Tenth street, also was arrested when he drove up in a wagon in which there was a gallon of what appeared to be whisky. A gallon of alcohol and four barrels of mash were found in the basement.

Joseph Lautz, who conducts a saloon at 2747 Morgan street, also was arrested last night. The police reported that a cigar box nailed on the under side of a sliding icebox cover was found to contain a quart of illicit whisky and that a similar hiding place for a second quart was found in another icebox.

MISSOURI HOUSE ADOPTS RESOLUTION OF GREETINGS TO EX-PRESIDENT WILSON

Legislative Body, Largely Republican, Expresses Wishes for His Restoration to Health.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 12.—The House of Representatives, Republican by a large majority, today adopted a resolution extending greetings to former President Wilson, expressing wishes for his restoration to health and recognizing his work for peace.

The resolution was introduced by Representative Fair of Adair County, a Republican. It follows:

"Be it resolved, by the Missouri House of Representatives assembled in the second extra session, That we extend to ex-President Woodrow Wilson our cordial greetings and good will with a profound hope for his speedy recovery.

"His presence in the parade yesterday and his response to the greetings of the many who wished him well calls to mind his broken health, but his courageous desire to pay his respects to the ideals of liberty and justice for which the unknown soldier stood.

"Be it resolved, further, that a copy of the resolutions be sent by our crief clerk to Mr. Wilson."

MAN IN FLIGHT AFTER SALOON HOLDUP RUNS INTO POLICEMAN

Acting Lieutenant Says Fugitive Had Check Reported Taken by Robber.

A man with a drawn revolver walked into the saloon of Henry Weber, at Ninth street and Allen avenue, at 9:30 o'clock last night and shouted to the bartender, William Kaeling, 1926 South Ninth street, and 15 customers: "Throw 'em up, everybody!"

He compelled all to line up at the rear wall and took from the cash register about $30 and a check for $27. Ase he backed out the front door he fired a shot into the floor, then turned and ran. Kaeling obtained a revolver and headed the 15 customers in pursuit.

Meanwhile a passerby had observed the holdup and had telephoned the police. Acting Lieut. Eilers started toward the saloon and observed a man in flight, pursued by several other persons, one of whom fired several shots. As the fugitive approached him, he drew his own revolver, whereupon the running man threw up his hands and surrendered.

Eilers said that at the station Kaeling and five of the customers identified the prisoner as the man who had held them up and that in the man's pockets there was about $31 and the check taken from the saloon. Retracing the route of the pursuit from the saloon, a revolver with one discharged cartridge in it was found.

The prisoner said he was Daniel Regan, a steamfitter. He gave a fictitious address.

PHIL DWYER AND FIVE OTHERS TAKEN IN RAID

Detectives Peer Through Window and See Man Buy Poker Chips.

Phil Dwyer, 4048 Garfield avenue, a former Democratic city committeeman, and five other men were arrested last night in a room in the rear of a dry goods store at 4119 Easton avenue, which, prior to prohibition, was Dwyer's saloon and political headquarters, after detectives, peering through the broken slats of a shutter, saw a game of cards being played with poker chips. The room was partitioned off so that it was not accessible from the dry goods store.

The police gambling squad was investigating an anonymous letter received at police headquarters several days ago which stated that the police "ought to get Dwyer's poker game." The detectives saw one of the men in the room give a $2 bill in change for a stack of chips and then raided the place.

Dwyer's companions said they were William Clark, 4021 North Market street, Edward Hicks, 4281 Easton avenue; Joseph Matthews, 3836 Easton avenue, and Joseph and James McCarthy, 2509 Whittier street.

"It was only a friendly game," said Dwyer, but he and the others were compelled to furnish police court bonds on charges of gambling. Two padded tables, a deck of cards and a box of chips are held by the police as evidence.

CHECK FOR $100,000 IS ATTACHED BY THE SHERIFF

Action Results From Efforts of Trust Company to Collect Money Alleged to Be Due on Note.

A check for $100,000 on which Albert J. Meier of Webster Groves, president of A. J. Meier & Co., investment brokers, had a one-fourth interest, was attached by the Sheriff yesterday, a short time after it had been received by Rhodes E. Cave, attorney for Meier, and other heirs of the estate of the late Adolphus Meier, who was an officer of the Heine Safety Boiler Co.

The attachment was on a suit filed by the Liberty Central Trust Co., to recover $47,667.50 from Meier on a note alleged to have been given by him to the German Savings Institution, Jan. 16, 1915. The German Savings Institution became the Liberty Bank, which later was merged into the Liberty Central Trust Co. The note was for $34,500 and the amount sued for includes interest since 1915.

Meier, when asked last night by the Post-Dispatch if he cared to make a statement concerning the attachment, said that he would prefer to say nothing until he has acquainted himself with the suit. He was a grandson of Adolphus Meier.

SIX CHARGES AGAINST WILLMANN TO BE HEARD

Four Allegations Dismissed; Removal Proceedings Before Judge McElhinney Nov. 21.

Sheriff Willmann of St. Louis County will have to answer six allegations in the removal proceedings against him, to be heard before Circuit Judge McElhinney Monday, Nov. 21. Four allegations were dismissed by Judge McElhinney yesterday, on the motion of Willmann's counsel.

The sections stricken out contained charges that Willmann neglected to make an investigation on two occasions of statements to him that the prohibition law was being violated, by named persons. It was argued by Willmann's attorneys that the Sheriff's office was not an investigating office and that he could not be charged with the duty of investigating, especially on information that was little more than gossip.

Other allegations also stricken out related to a reprimand said to have been administered to Deputy Sheriff Stuckman for making investigations without first advising Willmann.

The remaining charges relate to the still at the Wolfsberger farm, the still said to have been taken away from a place near Kirkwood and then returned there, and the alleged use, in moonshining, of barrels stored by the Sheriff in a barn on the Wilhelmi farm.

It is charged that Willmann saw the still on the Wolfsberger farm July 9, but failed to raid it until the 17th, and that in the meantime a considerable quantity of liquor was taken away. Justice Werremeyer made affidavit to this charge. As to the misuse of barrels, it is alleged that this was reported to Willmann by Stockman.

St. Louis Woman Sculptor Wins Commission to Execute $25,000 Monument to Missouri Soldiers

Mrs. Nancy Coonsman Hahn's Design Selected Over Six Others by Jury Headed by Lorado Taft.

SECOND PRIZE GOES TO F. C. HIBBARD

Shaft to Be Erected in France to Be Surmounted With 6-Foot Female Figure of Victory, in Bronze.

A commission to execute the $25,000 monument which is to be erected in France as a memorial to Missouri's soldiers in the war, was awarded yesterday to Mrs. Nancy Coonsman Hahn of 6171 Delmar boulevard, whose design was selected over six others submitted by sculptors in competition for the award.

The selection was made by a jury headed by the noted sculptor, Lorado Taft, and including, in addition, Ralph Clarkson, a painter, and Irving K. Pond, an architect. In the artistic field Mrs. Hahn's achievement is regarded as a notable one, and the fact that the monument is to stand in France will give her reputation an international flavor.

Sealed envelopes containing the names of the artists accompanied the designs, and the identity of the successful competitor was not known until after the jury had made its selection. The judging took place in the gallery of the St. Louis Art League, at the Planters Hotel.

Description of Monument.

The monument, of which a miniature was submitted, will consist of a base and shaft of gray granite, surmounted by a six-foot female figure of Victory, in bronze. The figure is an animated one, with windswept draperies, the right hand holding aloft a laurel wreath, while in the left hand is an olive branch. The facial expression is one of exaltation at bringing tidings of victory.

Near the top of the shaft, and on the front side, a bronze medallion consisting of the Missouri coat of arms, will be inset. The artist suggested tentatively, for the front side of the shaft, this inscription: "In grateful memory to the sons of Missouri, who helped bring victory to the allies, and peace to humanity, in the great war." It is quite possible, however, that the inscription will be altered or left off.

The monument, 18 feet high, will stand on the top of a hill, either on the Argonne battlefield itself, or in a cemetery where the American dead are buried. The exact site is to be decided by correspondence between the members of the Monument Commission appointed by the Governor and the French authorities.

Explaining the reasons for the jury's choice, Taft said: "The main impression of the design is that of adequacy. It is simple and straight to the point. The monument will be commanding enough to dominate the landscape. The culmination of victory is competently expressed, and the design is good from all sides."

Second Prize to Hibbard.

Second honors, which carry a cash prize of $300, were awarded to a design by Frederick C. Hibbard, a Missourian whose studio is in Chicago. It was a seated male figure of bronze, with an architectural background of red marble. The jury said the design was good, but did not answer the requirements for a tall and commanding figure.

"I can hardly believe it," said Mrs. Hahn to a reporter, after being informed of her success. "It is the greatest opportunity I have ever had, and I feel it deeply. People in St. Louis and in other cities have been very kind to my work, but this is larger in the sense that it carries a certain international standing. I shall put my heart into this work."

Mrs. Hahn was graduated from Central High School about 10 years ago, and then took a course in sculpture at the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, at Washington University. Later she studied under Charles Grafly, an Eastern sculptor of note. Her work has been exhibited in Eastern cities.

The best known example of her work in St. Louis probably is the fountain in the sunken garden north of the Public Library, over which a considerable controversy ensued because the design included the nude figure of a child. The design eventually was altered. Better known in artistic circles, perhaps, is the bust, "Maidenhood," which is in the Art Museum, and copies of which are in other museums of the country.

The memorial monument will be erected under the provisions of a bill passed by the Legislature in 1919, appropriating $25,000 for the purpose, and empowering the Governor to appoint a commission to see that the work was carried out. The members of the commission are: Maj. Norman B. Comfort, St. Louis, chairman; Maj. Charles W. Bartlett, Kansas City; Lieutenant-Colonel John F. Williams, Joplin; Col. Arthur Linxwiler, Jefferson City; Lieut. Van Osdol, Brookfield; Col. Ruby D. Garrett, Kansas City; and Lieut. Melvin E. Binswanger, St. Joseph.

In addition to Mrs. Hahn and Hibbard, the competitors who submitted designs were: Robert P. Bringhurst, Victor S. Holm, Adele Schulenberg and Erhardt Siebert, all of St. Louis, and Robert Merrell Gage of Kansas City. The conditions demanded that the artist must be a Missourian.

Mrs. Hahn will go to France to supervise the erection of the monument. She will be paid $3000 immediately as a retainer. When the commission has accepted the clay model of the monument, she will get an additional $7000. The balance will be paid after the monument has been erected. It will be shipped to France at her expense.

BARON TAKAHASHI NEW PREMIER OF JAPAN

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Nov. 12.—Baron Korekiyo Takahashi, Minister of Foreign Affairs in the Hara Cabinet, was named Premier today.

An imperial rescript issued today summons the Japanese Diet to assemble Dec. 24.

Baron Takahashi, who succeeds the murdered Hara at the head of the Japanese Government, is 67 years old. He speaks English fluently, having studied the language in the United States during 1867 and 1868.

While in America at that time Takahashi is said to have been held in a state of near-slavery for several months through the machinations of a guardian.

The new Premier was created a Baron in 1907 and, as such, sits as a meber of the House of Peers.

WOMAN KILLED WHEN ENGINE HITS HER AUTO

Mrs. L. C. Lund of Glendale Was Driving Couple on Berry Road.

Mrs. L. C. Lund of Oakland avenue, Glendale, St. Louis County, a widow, was killed at 6 o'clock last evening when her coupe was struck by a Missouri Pacific switch engine at the crossing of Berry road near the western city limits of Webster Groves.

Mrs. Lund was alone in her car, and was following another automobile at a short distance. The car in front got safely across the tracks. The train crew afterward reported to the Webster Groves police that they did not see Mrs. Lund's car until after it had been struck.

The engine, to which there was only a caboose attached, was stopped and Mrs. Lund's body was picked up about 30 feet from the automobile, and taken to a Webster Groves undertaking establishment. The coupe was demolished.

An inquest will be held at Webster Groves today.

Mrs. Lund came from Chicago in 1904 with her husband, who died several years ago. He was an attorney.

Did W. C. Durant Make Good?

On May 1, 1921, Mr. W. C. Durant made the following announcement:

"About August 1st next, the public will have an opportunity to purchase a very good motor car at a very moderate price"

A sworn statement by Mr M. B. LEAHY:

STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK } ss

M. B. LEAHY, being first duly sworn deposes and says:

I am the General Sales Manager of Durant Motor Company of New York, Inc., a subsidiary of Durant Motors, Incorporated, which company controls the manufacture and sale of Durant automobiles for the New England and Atlantic Coast territory;

That on the 9th day of May, 1921, the Sales Department of Durant Motor Company of New York, Inc., was organized;

That the first Durant car was placed on exhibition in New York City on August 4th, 1921;

That the actual signing of contracts for territory with Distributors, with one or two exceptions, was started about September 1st, 1921;

That up to and including October 22nd, 1921, a total of 141 working days, I have signed contracts, with deposits, and signed shipping orders for 24,817 Durant four-cylinder automobiles, and 6,025 Durant six-cylinder automobiles, a total of 30,842 automobiles;

That the contracts specify deliveries dating from November 1st, 1921, up to and including July 31st, 1922, a period of nine months;

That this business was obtained without the assistance of traveling men, the contracts being negotiated in my office at the plant of the company in Long Island City, N. Y.;

That the volume of business represented by these contracts is approximately $31,000,000.00;

That the total expense, including both the Sales and Service Departments, from the time these departments were formed, was $15,416.94, or an equivalent sales cost of 1-20th of one per cent;

That the portion of the territory not contracted for, and which will be closed within the next 30 days, will in my judgment produce contracts for not less than 5,000 automobiles;

That the territory controlled by Durant Motor Company of New York, Inc., is less than one-quarter of the domestic territory covered by subsidiary companies of Durant Motors, Incorporated;

That upon the basis of 35,000 automobiles as a total contracted production for Durant Motor Company of New York, Inc., the entire territory, exclusive of Canadian and Export trade, would in my judgment produce a volume of business requiring the production of 140,000 automobiles in the next nine months;

That the contracts negotiated for 6,025 six-cylinder cars, to be manufactured by Durant Motor Company of Indiana, were executed without one cent of expense to Durant Motor Company of Indiana.

Tumulty Describes the Vicious Hyphen Campaign Against Wilson

HIS STINGING TELEGRAM TO O'LEARY PUT NEW HOPES IN DEMOCRACY'S FIGHT FOR AMERICANISM

How German Propaganda Began to Menace This Nation With a Divided House and Threw Its Influence Behind the Republican Ticket Headed by Hughes—What Happened at the St. Louis Convention When the Issue Was About to Be Straddled—The McLemore Resolution to Keep Americans Off Ships.

By JOSEPH P. TUMULTY.

For 10 Years Private Secretary to Woodrow Wilson.

FIFTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

BETWEEN the Democratic convention and the time of his departure for his summer home at Long Branch, N. J., the President was engaged in Washington completing the most important items of his legislative program, including the income tax, child labor law and the Adamson eight-hour law.

A disastrous strike, involving the whole system of railroad transportation, now seemed imminent. At this critical juncture the President intervened. On Aug. 13 he invited the disputants, before reaching any final decision, to confer with him personally at Washington. His intervention evoked general expressions of relief and approval.

At these conferences the railway men stood firm for an eight-hour day. The railway managers refused these demands. How to meet this critical situation, which if it had not been checked might have resulted in giving Germany a victory, was one of the pressing problems that confronted the President that critical summer. Not only were American business interests involved in this matter, but the allied Governments of Western Europe, then in the throes of the great war, were no less anxious, for a railroad strike would have meant a cutting off of the supplies to the allied forces that were so much needed at this critical juncture.

The President sent for the Brotherhood representatives and for the managers, to confer with him at the White House, and suggested arbitration by way of settling the controversy. The labor leaders, conscious of their strength, refused to arbitrate. The railroad managers were equally obdurate. I well remember the great patience of the President at these conferences day after day. He would first hold conferences with the Brotherhood representatives and then with the railroad managers; but his efforts were unavailing. It is regrettable that the men on both sides were indifferent to the President's appeal and apparently unmindful of the consequences to the country that would inevitably follow a nation-wide strike.

Attitude to the Brotherhood.

I remember what he said to me as he left the Green Room at the conclusion of his final conference with the heads of the Brotherhoods. Shaking his head in a despairing way, he said: "I was not able to make the slightest impression upon those men. They feel so strongly the justice of their cause that they are blind to all the consequences of their action in declaring and prosecuting a strike. I was shocked to find a peculiar selfishness and hardness about these men. When I pictured to them the distress of our people in case this strike became a reality, they sat unmoved and apparently indifferent to the seriousness of the whole bad business. I am at the end of my rope, and I do not know what further to do."

His conferences with the managers were equally unproductive of result. Gathered about him in a semicircle in his office, they were grim and determined men, some of them even resentful of the President's attempt to suggest a settlement of any kind to prevent the strike. I shall never forget his last appeal to them: I sat in a little room off the Cabinet Room and could hear what went on. Seated about him were the heads of all the important railroads in the country. Looking straight at them, he said: "I have not summoned you to Washington as President of the United States to confer with me on this matter, for I have no power to do so. I have invited you merely as a fellow citizen to discuss this great and critical situation. Frankly, I say to you that if I had the power as President I would say to you that this strike is unthinkable and must not be permitted to happen. What I want you to see, if you will, is the whole picture that presents itself to me and realize the terrible consequences to the country and its people of a nation-wide strike at this time, both as affecting our own people and its effect upon the allied forces across the sea. For the moment I wish to forget that I am President and let us as fellow-citizens consider the consequences of such action. A nation-wide strike at this time would mean absolute famine and starvation for the people of America. You gentlemen must understand just what this means. Will your interests be served by the passions and hatreds that will flow from such an unhappy condition in the country? If this strike should occur forces will be released that may threaten the security of every one we hold dear. Think of its effect upon the people of this country, who must have bread to eat and coal to keep them warm. They will not quietly submit to a strike that will keep these things of life away from them. The rich will not suffer in case these great arteries of trade and commerce are temporarily abandoned, for they can provide themselves against the horror of famine and the distress of this critical situation. It is the poor, unfortunate men, and their wives and children, who will suffer and die. I cannot speak to you without a show of emotion, for, my friends, beneath the surface in America there is a baneful seething which may express itself in radical action, the consequences of which no man can foresee. In asking your co-operation to settle this dispute, I am but striving, as we stand in the shadow of a great war, to keep these forces in check and under control."

A Talk to the Men.

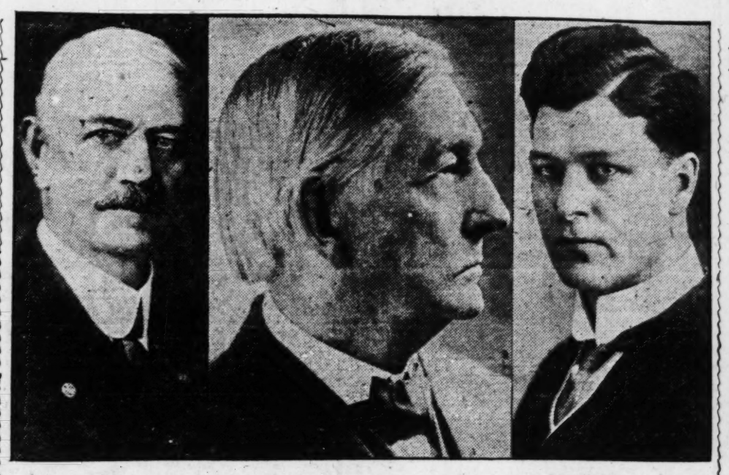
Getting closer to the men, and lowering his voice, he said:

"The allies are fighting our battle, the battle of civilization, across the way. They cannot 'carry on' without supplies and means of sustenance which the railroads of America bring to them. I am probably asking you to make a sacrifice at this time, but is not the sacrifice worth while because of the things involved? Only last night I was thinking about this war and its far-reaching effects. No man can foresee its extent or its evil effects upon the world itself. It is a world cataclysm and before it ends it may unsettle everything fine and wholesome in America. We of America, although we are cut off from its terrible sweep, cannot be unmindful of these consequences, for we stand in the midst of it all. We must keep our own house in order so that we shall be prepared to act when action becomes necessary. Who knows, gentlemen, but by tomorrow a situation will arise where it shall be found necessary for us to get into the midst of this bloody thing? You can see, therefore, that we must go to the very limit to prevent a strike that would bring about a paralysis of these arteries of trade and commerce. If you will agree with me in this matter, I will address Congress and frankly ask for an increase of rates and do everything I can to make up for the loss you may sustain. I know that the things I ask you to do may be disagreeable and inconvenient, but I am not asking you to make a bloody sacrifice. Our boys may be called upon any minute to make that sacrifice for us."

On Aug. 29, 1916, the President appeared before a joint session of the Congress and recommended immediate legislation to avert the impending strike. Following this, the chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee of the House, Mr. Adamson of Georgia, brought in a bill, now known as te Adamson Eight-Hour Law, which, after several unsuccessful attempts by members of the House and Senate to amend it, was signed by the President on Sept. 5.

German Propaganda at Work.

Early in January, 1916, German sympathizers throughout the country began a drive on both Houses of Congress for the passage of a resolution warning or forbidding Americans to travel on passenger ships belonging to citizens or subjects of the belligerent nations. Petitions of various kinds demanding vigorous action in this matter began to pour in upon us at the White House from various parts of the country. While these petitions were signed by many devoted, patriotic Americans, it was clear to those of us who were on the inside of affairs that there lay back of this movement a sinister purpose on the part of German sympathizers in this country to give Germany full sway upon the high seas in order that she might be permitted to carry on her unlawful and inhuman submarine warfare. This movement became so intense that leading Democratic and Republican Senators and Representatives soon became its ardent advocates, until it looked as if the resolution might pass with only a small minority found in opposition to it. Those of us who were in the executive offices and intimately associated with the President kept in close touch with the situation on Capitol Hill, and were advised that the movement for the resolution was in full swing and that it could not be checked. A resolution was finally introduced by Representative McLemore of Texas and quickly received the support of Senator Gore of Oklahoma and Senator Stone of Missouri, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations. What the attitude of the President should be toward it was the subject of discussion between the President, two of his Cabinet officers and myself, after a session of the Cabinet early in February, 1916.



JEFF McLEMORE. SENATOR WILLIAM J. STONE. JEREMIAH O'LEARY

The President was advised by the Cabinet officers with whom he conferred regarding the matter that it would be a hopeless task on his part to attempt to stem the tide that was now running in favor of the passage of the McLemore resolution, and that were he to attempt to prevent its passage it might result in a disastrous defeat of his leadership, that would seriously embarrass him on Capitol Hill and throughout the nation.

Fighting McLemore Resolution.

At the conclusion of this conference the President asked me whether my information about affairs on Capitol Hill and the attitude of the members of the House and Senate toward the McLemore resolution was in accord with the information he had just received from his Cabinet officers. I told him that it was, but that so far as I was concerned I did not share the opinion of the Cabinet officers and did not agree with the advice which they had volunteered to the effect that it would be useless for him to throw down the gage of battle to those who sought to pass the McLemore resolution. I informed him that regardless of what the attitude of those on Capitol Hill was toward the resolution, he could not afford to allow the matter to pass without a protest from him, and that, indeed, he could afford to be defeated in making a fight to maintain American rights upon the high seas. The discussion between the President, the Cabinet officers and myself became heated. They were reluctant to have the President go into the fight, while I was most anxious to have him do so. Evidently what I said made an impression upon the President and he asked me, as our conference was concluded, to let him have as soon as possible a memorandum containing my views upon the subject.

Shortly after the conference, Senator Stone, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate, asked for an appointment with the President, to confer with him on the next morning, Feb. 25, regarding the McLemore resolution. I suggested to the President that inasmuch as Senator Stone was to see him in the morning it would be wise and prudent if in answer to his letter asking for an appointment the President should frankly state his views with reference to the proposed resolution. The President acted upon this suggestion and the letter was immediately dispatched to Senator Stone.

My letter to the President advising him of the situation, was as follows:

The White House, Washington,
Feb. 24, 1916.

Dear Governor:

What I have heard since leaving you this morning confirms me in my belief that now is the time (before the night passes) to set forth your position to the country on the McLemore resolution in terms that no one can misunderstand. In the last hour I have talked with Speaker Clark, Senator Pittman and Mr. Sims of Tennessee, and have received impressions from them which lead me to conclude: First, that the consideration of the resolution cannot much longer be postponed, as Speaker Clark so informed me, although Congressman Doremus and Senator Pittman say the situation on the Hill is quieting down. I am more than convinced that underlying this resolution is a purpose to discredit your leadership, for the forces that are lined up for this fight are the antipreparedness crowd, the Bryan-Kitchen-Clark group, and some of the anti-British Senators like Hoke Smith and Gore. Therefore I cannot urge you too strongly at once to send an identic letter to both Representative Ford, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the House, and Senator Stone, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate. The letter, in my opinion, should embody the following ideas:

First, explain in the frankest fashion just what Secretary Lansing attempted to obtain when he suggested to the Entente nations an agreement on the arming of merchantmen, how this Government was informed by Germany of her intention to destroy armed merchantmen without giving the passengers a moment of warning, and how, in order to stave off such a contingency, we tried as the friend and in the interest of humanity to get an agreement between both sides that would bring submarine warfare within the bounds of international law.

Second, explain that a possible adjustment of this matter is in process of negotiation right now, and that, of course, while we cannot change international law upon our own initiative, we are still of the hope that some general agreement among the belligerents may eventually be obtained. Explain how embarrassing such a resolution as the McLemore one will be to negotiations now being threshed out between the Executive branches of the Government, charged with the conduct of foreign relations, and foreign Governments.

Third, then say that in the absence of any general agreement, the United States cannot yield one inch of her rights without destroying the whole fabric of international law, for in the last analysis this is what is involved. To yield one right today means another tomorrow. We cannot know where this process of yielding on the ground of convenience or expediency may lead us. These laws are the product of centuries. Our forefathers fought to establish their validity, and we cannot afford for the sake of convenience, when our very life is threatened, to abandon them on any ground of convenience or expediency.

Fourth, to pass such a resolution at this time would seriously embarrass the Department of State and the Executive in the conduct of these most delicate matters at a time when everything is being done to bring about a peaceful solution of these problems.

Fifth, might you not diplomatically suggest, in your letter to Senator Stone, that to pass favorably upon a resolution of this kind at this time would be showing lack of confidence in the Government, and particularly in its Chief Executive?

The morning papers have outlined the details of the opposition among the Democrats. The afternoon papers are repeating the same thing with emphasis on the fact that Joe Cannon, Jim Mann and Lodge are going to support you. I would suggest that you insert the following in your letter to Senator Stone:

"I think that not only would such a vote on this resolution be construed as a lack of confidence in the Executive branch of the Government in this most delicate matter, but if the division continues, as I am informed, within the ranks of the Democratic party, it will be difficult for me to consider that the majority party speaks the will of the Nation in these circumstances, and as between any faction in my party and the interests of the nation I must always choose the latter, irrespective of what the effect will be on me or my personal fortunes. What we are contending for in this matter is of the very essence of the things that have made America a sovereign nation. She cannot yield them without admitting and conceding her own impotency as a nation and the surrender of her independent position among the nations of the world."

Sincerely, TUMULTY.

The letter of the President to Senator Stone was published in the morning paper of Feb. 25, 1916, and is as follows:

The White House, Washington,
Feb. 25, 1916.

My dear Senator:

I very warmly appreciate your kind and frank letter of today, and feel that it calls for an equally frank reply.

You are right in assuming that I shall do everything in my power to keep the United States out of war. I think that the country will feel no uneasiness about my course in that respect. Through many anxious months I have striven for that object, amid difficulties more manifold than can have been apparent upon the surface, and so far I have succeeded. I do not doubt that I shall continue to succeed. The course which the Central European Powers have announced their intention of following in the future with regard to undersea warfare seems for the moment to threaten insuperable obstacles, but its apparent meaning is so manifestly inconsistent with explicit assurances recently given us by those Powers with regard to their treatment of merchant vessels on the high seas that I must believe that explanations will presently ensue which will put a different aspect upon it. We have had no reason to question their good faith or their fidelity to their promises in the past, and I for one feel confident that we shall have none in the future.

Former Executive's Private Secretary Tells Also of the Settlement of the Great Railroad Strike on the Eve of the Campaign and the Passage of the Adamson Act — President Dramatically Warned Both Employers and Employes That Allies Were Fighting the Battle of Civilization and Their Supplies Must Not Be Interrupted.

But in any event our duty is clear. No nation, no group of nations, has the right, while war is in progress, to alter or disregard the principles which all nations have agreed upon in mitigation of the horrors and sufferings of war; and if the clear rights of American citizens should very unhappily be abridged or denied by any such action we should, it seems to me, have in honor no choice as to what our own course should be.

For my own part I cannot consent to any abridgement of the rights of American citizens in any respect. The honor and self-respect of the nation is involved. We covet peace, and shall preserve it at any cost but the loss of honor. To forbid our people to exercise their rights for fear we might be called upon to vindicate them would be a deep humiliation, indeed. It would be an implicit, all but an explicit, acquiescence in the violation of the rights of mankind everywhere and of whatever nation or allegiance. It would be a deliberate abdication of our hitherto proud position as spokesmen, even amid the turmoil of war, for the law and the right. It would make everything this Government has attempted and everything that it has accomplished during this terrible struggle of nations meaningless and futile.

It is important to reflect that if in this instance we allowed expediency to take the place of principle the door would inevitably be opened to still further concessions. Once accept a single abatement of right, and many other humiliations would follow, and the whole fine fabric of international law might crumble under our hands piece by piece. What we are contending for in this matter is of the very essence of the things that have made America a sovereign nation. She cannot yield them without conceding her own impotency as a nation and making virtual surrender of her independent position among the nations of the world.

I am speaking, my dear Senator, in deep solemnity, without heat, with a clear consciousness of the high responsibilities of my office and as your sincere and devoted friend. If we should unhappily differ, we shall differ as friends, but where issues so momentous as these are involved we must, just because we are friends, speak our minds without reservation. Faithfully yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

Senator William J. Stone,
United States Senate.

The publication of the letter of the President to Senator Stone worked a complete reversal of opinion on the bill.

It placed the President in undoubted control of Congress and put him in the position of not merely awaiting the approval of Congress, but rather in the position of a party leader and law giver.

Victory for the President.

The President's open, vigorous fight against the surrender by Congress of the rights of American citizens to travel on the high seas also reflected a weakness and a division within the ranks of the Republican members of the House, and it was shown that a majority of the Republican members of the House were unwilling to defend the rights of the American people, for 102 Republicans voted for the McLemore resolution.

Quickly the effect of the President's letter was seen, and the McLemore resolution was overwhelmingly defeated.

Early in August, 1916, the President took up his residence at Shadow Lawn, New Jersey, and began the preparation of his speech of acceptance. He forwarded me a draft of his speech of acceptance, which brought from me the following comment upon it:

The White House, Washington,
Aug. 22, 1916.

Dear Governor:

I think that failure to bring out the hyphen question in your speech of acceptance will be vigorously criticised, even by our loyal friends. Mr. Hughes will soon be compelled to speak out on this question. Roosevelt's speeches in the main will force him to do this.

You might open the subject in that part of your speech in which you discuss neutrality, showing the embarrassments under which you have labored in trying to keep the nation at peace. After discussing these embarrassments, consisting of plots against our industries, etc., could you not introduce a sentence like this: "While I am the candidate of the Democratic party, I am above all else an American citizen. I neither seek the favor nor fear the wrath of any alien element in America which puts loyalty to any foreign power first."

As to Huerta—I believe your reference to him could be strengthened. I think you ought to bring out the fact that the work of assassination shall never receive the indorsement, so far as you are concerned, of this American Republic. I suggest the following: "The United States will refuse, so long as that power remains with me, to extend the hand of welcome to one who gains power in a republic through treachery and bloodshed." (This is not only sound statesmanship, but good morals.) "No permanency in the affairs of our sister republic can be attained by a title based upon intrigue and assassination." Respectfully,

TUMULTY.

P. S.—In that part of your speech referring to Mexico, where you speak of "leaders being mistaken and selfish," I would qualify it by saying "some leaders," so as not to give unnecessary offense to Carranza.

The President, always welcoming advice, approved and embodied some of these suggestions in his speech of acceptance.

It has often been said by unfair critics that Mr. Wilson was so tenacious of his own opinion and views that he resented suggestions from the outside in any matter with which he was called upon to deal.

As an intimate associate of his for 11 years, I think I was in a position to find out and to know how unfair the basis of this criticism really was. In my contact with public men I never met a more open-minded man; nor one who was more willing to act upon any suggestion that had merit in it. I have seen him readily give up his own views and often yield to the influence of a better argument. I always felt free in every public matter that he discussed and in every attitude which he took on public questions frankly to express my own opinion and openly to disagree with him. In his speeches and public statements he had no pride of opinion, nor did he attempt to hold his friends off at arms' length when they had suggestion of any kind to make.

In these reminiscences I am including my letters to him, embodying suggestions of various kinds, many of which he acted upon and many of which he rejected, in order that proof may be given of the fact that, despite what his critics may say, he not only did not resent suggestions, but openly invited them.

Wilson Versus Hughes.

After the delivery of the speech of acceptance on Sept. 2, quiet ruled over the Wilson camp at Shadow Lawn. This lull in the matter of politics was intensified by the President's absence from Shadow Lawn because of the death of his only sister, which called him away and for a while took his mind and his energies from the discussion of politics.

On Sept. 11 the State elections in Maine were carried by the Republicans. The total vote was the largest ever cast in Maine in a State election. The Republican majorities ranged from 9000 to 14,000. There had been a vigorous contest in Maine by both parties and the Republicans were greatly heartened by the result in the hope that "as goes Maine so goes the Union."

There is no doubt that the result in Maine, which many Democrats were of the opinion was a forecast of the results throughout the nation in November, had a depressing effect. The Republicans accepted it as a harbinger of victory, and the Democrats as an indication of defeat. On the night of the Maine elections I kept close to

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Place for the Horse.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MY attention has recently been called to an editorial which appeared in a recent issue, in which you suggest that St. Louis may properly emulate Detroit in certain matters, and mention that Detroit plans to eliminate horses from city streets.

A proposal of this kind can obtain space in Detroit papers because Detroit is built upon the motor industry and anything that in any way tends to increase the use of motor cars, motor trucks or motor busses will naturally find favorable hearing in that city. It is inconceivable, however, that Detroit or any other city will seriously attempt to legislate horses off the city streets, although it may be proper to regulate the character of vehicles, whether horse-drawn or motor, used on certain streets. Thus, on Fifth avenue, New York, motor cars, motor passenger busses and horse-drawn pleasure vehicles or busses are allowed, but commercial vehicles of any type are barred. The same applies to Michigan avenue in Chicago, and Detroit may take the same course, but any attempt to shut horses off streets will be as futile as the attempt horsemen made in a few isolated instances to legislate motor cars off streets 20 or 25 years ago, when they were first coming into prominence.

The logical course for Detroit or any other city to take is to develop well-defined arteries of travel, wide enough and numerous enough to take care of traffic, to debar commercial vehicles from main traveled avenues that should be restricted entirely to passenger vehicles that can and do travel at a more rapid speed.

In the end, rapid transit by trains, elevated or in subways, must be depended upon to transfer a large population to the outlying resident districts, for such trains alone can develop the speed and volume needed in the transportation of millions. Attempts to handle such transportation by motor busses or pleasure cars will inevitably fail, for the cost is too great and not enough speed can be developed. New York has the right idea, for its subways give it the finest rapid transportation of any city in America, and Chicago is beginning to realize the necessity of this, although its elevated suburban trains, steam service, have given it very good service along these same lines, and because of this, subway construction has been long postponed.

The elimination of horses from any city would increase enormously the cost of living, for in transportation of heavy loads of dead freight over short hauls horses are very much cheaper than any motor vehicles yet developed, and the same is true on longer hauls which involve frequent stops, as express service from store to store, or residence deliveries from house to house.

I submit this because I believe you would not intentionally advocate any measure which would result in a decided increase in the cost of living for city residents. WAYNE DINSMORE.

Mothers and Babies.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

KINDLY allow me space to explain the maternity or Sheppard-Towner bill to "lethargic" D. of Granite City.

Through the Sheppard-Towner bill the Federal Government, co-operating with the individual State, will provide a program of maternity care. It will provide for instruction in the hygiene of maternity and infancy through health centers, public clinics, consultation centers, the provision of nursing centers for mothers and children at home or in hospitals and particularly hospital care for mothers from remote rural neighborhoods, where the death rate from maternity is abnormal.

Careless America! Yes, in 1918, the year the last figures were recorded, some 23,000 mothers died at childbirth, 250,000 babies died before they reached their first year.

The doctors and health authorities who are trying to enact legislation to protect maternity will tell you that, with a few exceptions, these deaths were preventable. A large proportion of these mothers died because they had never had any instructions in the hygiene of pregnancy. The babies died because they were weak, ill-nourished or neglected by an ailing mother.

The State must step in and help these mothers and babies. The tragedy of 1918 and every other year must stop.

BETTER CITIZENSHIP.

Northcliffe On Prohibition.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HEREWITH quote a few words from Lord Northcliffe in regard to prohibition, published in the Saturday Review, an English "Tory" weekly.

"It is not pleasing to see American friends, with long and distinguished public records, locking their doors in club or hotel and producing a flask." Lord Northcliffe is fallible in many respects, but on a question of this sort, his judgment is better, perhaps, than most men's, and his verdict is, that "prohibition, as I saw it at work, is not the right solution of the drink problem." He condemns it as a failure. I should only add that it fails, because it runs counter, not to a policy determined by the counting of noses, but to the instinct of freedom in a true democracy. P. P.

HUGHES' SMASHING OFFER.

The conference for the limitation of armaments opens auspiciously, with a definite offer from the United States to scrap 30 capital ships and to cease building new ships for 10 years, if, of course, an agreement for proportionate reductions of naval armaments and for cessation of building is accepted by other nations.

This is an offer that goes to the heart of the conference work and that smashes naval competition. It starts the disarmament movement with a program which promises substantial economic relief at once, with progressive advancement for a decade. Assuming that this program or a substantial approximation of it is agreed upon and that satisfactory adjustments of pending issues are reached naval armaments will be police forces at the end of 10 years.

We rejoice that the United States takes the leadership of the conference and assumes initiative with a bold stroke for immediate armament reduction and the elimination of competition. It puts the question of disarming direct to the representatives of other nations in the conference and demands of them proofs of their sincerity and good faith. It heartens all those who have worked for substantial results and who have cherished expectations.

We have not shared the gloom of pessimists nor succumbed to the propaganda of low expectations. Of course, there are difficulties in the way of working out the offer of the United States and of reaching adjustment of the pending issues to be settled by the conference. If this were not the case the conference would be unnecessary or unimportant. It is its task to overcome difficulties, to solve delicate and dangerous problems which are obstacles to confidence, understanding and co-operation for peace between nations. The men of light and leading who will confer for the nations have been selected for the purpose of finding solutions of the questions to be brought before the conference which make a disarmament agreement possible and will contribute to permanent international peace and co-operation for economic relief.

Our expectations, strengthened by this definite program offered by Mr. Hughes, are based upon the belief that the delegates to the conference and the Governments and peoples they represent are not bankrupt in honor and truth and good faith.

The leaders of all the delegations and the Premiers of all the Governments represented in the conference have expressed unqualifiedly their approval of the conference, their desire for its success and the willingness of their Governments to work for and support satisfactory solutions of pending issues and to join in a disarmament agreement. The final utterances of Mr. Balfour, chairman of the British delegation, and Premier Lloyd George were unqualifiedly in favor of peaceful settlements and a disarmament agreement. Mr. George called the conference a "rainbow in the sky." Mr. Briand, Premier of France, committed himself as fully to disarmament with the security of agreement. Admiral Kato said Japan is "demanding relief from armament burden that threatens to strangle her industrial development." Senator Schanzer, head of the Italian delegation, pledged Italy's co-operation for disarmament and peaceful settlements.

President Harding and Secretary Hughes have given ample assurances of the intention of the United States to do its full part in working for arms reduction and peace settlements. Our good faith is demonstrated by the sweeping program offered the conference at its inception.

Can any nation in the conference afford to do less? Can any afford to be convicted of meaningless phrases and deceptive pledges, of professing peace and working for war, or pretending anxiety to disarm and seeking armaments? We feel justified in believing that they will prove their good faith.

The civilized world is in serious and solemn mood—too serious and solemn to be trifled with. The desire to be rid of the folly, the waste and the ruinous cost of war, to take the utmost steps to check war and save mankind from its horror and destruction has been intensified by the observance of armistice day. The world is justified in expecting substantial progress towards disarmament and a new order of justice and reason in international dealings. We do not believe that any one of the nations will dare or care to disappoint this just expectation.

The United States has challenged the good faith of the conferees. Their sincerity is put to the test.

THE WAR'S GAS BILLS.

Disturbing reports are made by Red Cross nurses of the Southwest Division as to the increasing number of gas cases among soldiers. In many instances no serious effects were felt at first. Many cases supposedly had been treated successfully. The patients seemingly had recovered. But as time goes on gassed soldiers who had been discharged as cured are becoming invalids. Gastric troubles, intestinal diseases and tuberculosis are developing, all traceable to gas poison.

The 3300 former service men in the hospitals under Government care in 1919 increased to 17,500 in 1920. This year the number is 26,300 and will be 40,000 next year at this rate. A large percentage are primarily gas cases.

Medically it is a difficult problem. To the soldiers and their families the prospect is discouraging. Apparently there is no certainty of cure. The infection in one form or another is likely at any time to appear. Must a new plan of treatment be devised, a new policy of physical rehabilitation be worked out and more elaborate provisions be made for the prolonged care of our disabled soldiers? Whatever can be done will, of course, be done.

It seems likely, however, that the final bill of our war costs has not yet been rendered. The disability account may run into figures that may not now be forecast. The outlook cannot be regarded without emotion, but grief for wrecked lives is not sufficient. The depressing reports as quoted, coupled with the acceptance by military authorities that in the next war gas will probably be the principal weapon, emphasizes the fact that statesmanship must find a way to end war if humanity is to survive.

Albany, N. Y., has elected a Democratic Mayor for the first time in the 20-odd years that have elapsed since Boss Barnes graduated at Harvard.

"PROTECTION" FOR CORN.

The farmers of Iowa, Nebraska and other states who are reported to be burning corn for fuel because it is cheaper than coal are making a serious mistake. They should appeal to Congress. Quick action would follow.

Have the farmers forgotten the flourish and reassurance with which the Fordney emergency tariff act was passed? It was the price of wheat, not corn, that was then in chancery. Canadian wheat was pouring across the border and bearing the market. But that was no problem to the votaries of protection. They would solve it instantly and easily with a protective duty.

The price, at the time the emergency tariff act was passed, was $1.70 a bushel. Thanks to the always dependable efficiency of "protection" a bushel of wheat is worth now almost a dollar. The price has only slumped about 42 per cent.

Let no corn be burned in place of coal. Let it be burned on tariff's sacrificial altar by way of incense to the snickering gods of protection.

With bread selling for 4000 rubles a pound, Russian profiteers are dong well in Utopia.

JUST A MINUTE . . .

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
By Clark McAdams

THREE YEARS AGO.
By Irvin Mattick.

THREE years ago the sirens screamed,
Bunting and flags and flowers streamed
When the heroes of Flanders moved our streets
With their tramp—tramp—tramp and martial beats,
With their loud halloes and "Carry-ons,"
With our belfries swelling carillons,
With the news that white flags fluttered free
Where our rifles burned to victory.

Three years and now: the war is won,
The flagship has borne to Arlington
Dust of our dust that is worthier far
Than every panoply-sprinkled war,
Dust of our dust that is put to rest
With the dearest and bravest—tenderest, best.
A stone for his deed, a flag for the sky
To look at itself from heaven on high;
A wreath for his fame, tears for his joy,
Grass on the grave of an unknown boy.

The while in the space of a glittering hall,
Premier, President, Ministers, all
Bend to the task of delivering men
From the beast of war, that never again
Might shall shatter the starry dome
Freedom hath built on her sacred home.

The wise men try but they cannot tell
Why their wits are dull, why a mystic spell
Weaves around the council chamber and falls
Upon the might of their congress halls—
There's a stir in the air, a throb in the hill
Where Arlington's dust is slumbering, still.

The wreath is lifted from our dust,
The golden clay aside is thrust,
The flagship back to France's shore,
Her funnels belching smoke before,
And France's earth is opened wide,
Our dust is lowered side by side
With comrades that still smile in death
Beneath the poppy's morning breath,
Cannon thunder, flash and roar,
And France's soil that proudly bore
Our soldier dust is opened, and
The diggers in their puttees stand,
Take our dust and bear it back
Upon the sickroom's polished rack,
The nurses come and from his mouth,
Take the spoonful that his drouth
Craved that hour before he closed
The brilliant eyes and paled—reposed.
Men in gloves and hoods push back
The shrapnel's splinters and the crack
Of tearing muscles brings him to.
The stretcher-bearers, two and two,
Bear him to the ambulance.
He hears the mighty guns of France
Chorus with his own that steeled
His valor on the battle-field;
Upon one knee he rests and aims,
And as a shrapnel screams and maims
His buddy he can feel
The hot tongues of the cutting steel
Leave his face and neck, and lo!
He stands upon the ridge aglow
With courage: night pales to day,
The sun rolls West to East, and gray
The dawn looms over France's shore
As the transport that his battery bore,
Her prow ahead rears to the coast
He left to fight and die for most.
He strips the khaki from his form,
Rides to his cottage through the storm,
Endures farewells and is again
A man amid the ways of men.

Our dust that sleeps in Arlington,
In worth a tender mother's son,
Steps to the council chamber where
Premier and envoy gasp and stare
As on the street a shout is heard,
The age-old, iron, hell-born word,
"War is declared, the troops are called!"
And while the great men stand appalled,
Our dust leaps to the door and, looking back,
Shouts till the glittering rafters wrack,
"If it's war they want," his tone is steady,
"If it's war they want, my flag! I'm READY!"

Some scientist begs leave to say that there probably were fairies, whom he makes out to have been little people who lived in hollow trees and stole like crows. He thinks they were historic enough, and leaves us to assume that they were probably assimilated by society, which may account for small people. What we regard as the unreal is not always so unreal as we imagine. Perhaps you have read Lincoln Strachey's "Queen Victoria." It is hard to believe that her long reign was real, yet many of us witnessed the latter part of it. Unlike Elizabeth, who was part of the intellectual period of Shakspeare, Spencer and Bacon, she made not the slightest impression upon her time. We have this amusing thumb-nail sketch of her by Wilbur Cross in the Yale Review:

> Victoria was a symbol. Without her the Victorian era, except for minor details, would have been precisely as it was. She did not read much. The amazing discoveries in science which she heard about left her cold, for her intelligence could not rise to an understanding of them. Even a novel like "Middlemarch" was too difficult for her. Nor did she care for poetry, except the resonant verse of Tennyson celebrating the blameless life of the Prince Consort. There is no record of her reading Dickens or Thackeray. So far as she was concerned, the world might have stood still. Though a woman, she thought the suffragists of her day should be whipped. She interfered in the policies of her ministers, and "at the end of her reign the Crown was weaker than at any other time in England's history."

Is it any wonder that Kipling could write "Puck of Pook's Hill"? We are half persuaded to believe in Santa Claus. Ours is not an altogether real world.

NOVEMBER IN THE OZARKS.

The maples are glorious with amber and deep rose; among them are the fir and cedar, quiet or gently moving. From the blazing yellow hazel-nut trees fall showers of nuts dressed in ruffled petticoats. Jack rabbits bounce across the fields and cottontails, surprised, spring from the thickets. The little blades of winter wheat gleam cool and green; persimmons glitter on their candelabra. Spring stirs in her sleep and smiles; the trees bud again and meadow larks sing sweet lullabies. The hawk flies high. Along crooning streams the thorn trees stand, quaint fans. The wild plum leans gracefully against the fences. Chrysanthemums still bloom on the lawns where cosmi lift pale lips and salvia withers. Cornstalks wave silken rags and tatters. Across orange-coral sunsets is drawn a transparent screen of frail branches. In the distance the mountains rise against slate-colored skies, peaceful, amethyst and deep in mists. The wild geese, a suggestive gray fleet, have flown south. Frost spreads her soft, glistening rugs for Winter, who, wrapping her cloak about her, is upon the horizon whence she will come with rainful, windful certainty.

Newspaper writing is always diverting. Some days ago we tried to describe the peace shrine built in Rome 700 years before Christ by Numa, who was probably terrorized by the slaughter in the Old Testament. We said the shrine "consisted of two parallel arched gateways connected by sidewalks and furnished with gates." You may imagine what the diversion was when we read in the paper that these gateways were "connected by sidewalks and furnished with gates." Some shrine, that!

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading political newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

PROHIBITION IN CALIFORNIA.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

TWO HUNDRED gallons of wine a year is equivalent to about six-tenths of a gallon a day, say two bottles a day and an extra drink at dinner for the old man. For a family of five it is a pint a day each, with something less for the baby. And that, according to Washington dispatches, is what Chief Prohibition Commissioner Haynes is to notify the nation every family in America is entitled to, provided it is made by the family. The ration, of course, was not calculated for families of the size and nationalities which are now competing for the Chronicles' family prize. But such families are exceptions. For most of us it will do. We are not sure that the word wine will be used in the coming proclamation. It will be grape juice, which we are at liberty to press from the grapes, and it must not be intoxicating. Happily, it never is. If some evil spirit gets into the stuff later and raises hob with it the family will not be to blame and Commissioner Haynes will not hold them responsible. It will be an act of the devil and cannot be helped. If such a proclamation is issued as a definition of the law it will be evidence of good sense and a real desire to minimize the injurious effects of alcohol. It will be the longest stride toward temperance and sobriety which has yet been taken. Incidentally it will be great for the California grape growers.

THE WASHINGTON CONFERENCE.

COL. C. A. C. REPINGTON, in Atlantic Monthly.

I DO not think that very much can be expected from the meeting at Washington in the way of reduction of land forces. With respect to Japan it is different, because there are only three great navies that count, and none of these is specially concerned in the enforcement of the terms of peace upon our late enemies, who have no navies at all. It is, therefore, merely a question of coming to a mutual standstill in naval armaments, and this question, it would seem, should present no insuperable difficulties. Armaments are symptoms of a political disease, but are not the disease itself. The real diseases of war are unstable exchanges, unsound currencies, hampered trade and the false nationalism which shuns obligatory arbitration. Cure these diseases and armaments cure themselves. No one can safely predict the future of German politics, which depend on events that cannot be foreseen; but that the character of the new Chancellor and the policy of the Government offer the best ascertainable chance for the gradual pacification, not only of Germany but of Europe, will not be disputed by the closest observers of European politics.

EXCESS PROFITS TAX.

DAVID F. HOUSTON, in World's Work.

THE excess profits tax was intended to be an equivalent for the surtax levied upon the undistributed or reinvested profits of sole proprietors and partnerships. But in reality it does not work out this way. It has proved to be impossible as between corportaions and other forms of business. In 1918 members of a well-known partnership paid nearly $1,125,000 more in taxes than they would have paid as a corportation, and than their principal competitors were corporations. As a rule, however, corportaions pay a heavier tax. In 1917 a partner in a small business entered the Government service, and, for convenience, the business was incorporated. It paid nearly twice and one-half times as much on its earnings in 1918 as it would have paid if it had not incorporated. This tax also works inequitably as among corportaions. A conservatively managed corporation is penalized. If, however, it is generously capitalized, its exemption based on ten per cent of its capital will be large and it can escape with little or no excess profits tax.

Events in the Social World

Two Debutante Balls in Large Tents at Faust and McBride Homes to Be Main Social Affairs of Next Three Weeks.

TWO outstanding debutante balls within the next three weeks will give marked impetus to the social season.

There is the formal dance that Mr. and Mrs. Edward Faust of 1 Portland place will give in honor of their daughter, Miss Audrey Faust, next Saturday, and there is the "Night in Venice" ball at which Mrs. W. L. McBride of 29 Washington terrace, will introduce her daughter, Miss Dorothy McBride, to society, on Friday evening, Dec. 2.

Elaborate preparations are being made to entertain the guests in temporary pavilions adjoining both homes.

The dance for Miss Faust will be arranged on comparatively simple lines. A large tent has been erected on the lawn between the Faust home and King's highway, connected with the house, and furnished with a dancing floor, heat and electric lights. The idea of the decorations will be that of spring. There will be about 400 guests.

Workmen have dug a circular lagoon, encompassing an "island," in the vacant lot just west of the McBride home and have started preparations for the erection of a large, heated tent to defeat the December winds and make the atmosphere of the scene more like that of Venice. The details of the plans for this ball have been kept secret, in order to heighten the surprise of the guests, but it is understood that it will be a costume affair, with St. Louisans impersonating Venetian noblemen as they glide about the lagoon with fair ladies, in gondolas.

The marriage of Miss Frances Filley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dwight Filley, to Thomas S. McPheeters, was solemnized Thursday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, 40 Westmoreland place. Mr. McPheeters was attended by his cousin, S. H. McPheeters, as best man.

The bride's gown was of white chiffon with panels embroidered in crystals and pearls. The bodice also was embroidered and had long flowing sleeves of chiffon. Her tulle veil was worn with a wreath of orange blossoms and orange blossoms adorned the satin court train. She carried a round bouquet of lillies of the valley. The matron of honor wore hydranga blue georgette and chiffon, embroidered in beads of the same shade, with a blue plumed hat of gray lace. She carried Ward roses and blue delphinium.

Mr. and Mrs. McPheeters are spending their honeymoon at Hot Springs, Va., and will be at home after Dec. 1 at 5099 Waterman avenue.

FREIGHT ARRIVES FROM PITTSBURG BY BARGE

Towboat Transporter Makes First Trip Here With 500 Tons of Nails.

The towboat Transporter on Friday completed the first water movement of freight from Pittsburg to St. Louis in many years, bringing between 500 and 600 tons of nails and barbed wire, the equivalent of about 20 freight-car loads, to the Simmons Hardware Co.

The boat made the trip in 12 days and is scheduled to begin the return trip today. It will return with its barge empty, no St. Louis freight for Pittsburg having been found in a search of two weeks. A traffic official of the company said, however, that the Water Transport Co. of Pittsburg, to which the boat belongs, will continue to carry freight to St. Louis in the hope that a return business eventually will be builded. The next sailing from Pittsburg, he said, would be Nov. 20.

The representative also stated that the line will maintain service between Pittsburg and New Orleans and that freight will be accepted in St. Louis for New Orleans at 75 per cent of the rail rate. This service will be offered only to coincide with the arrival of tows at Cairo on their way from Pittsburg to New Orleans. The Federal barge line rate to New Orleans is 80 per cent of the rail rate.

The Transporter on her initial trip to St. Louis left Pittsburg with seven barges loaded with steel products. One was dropped at Huntington, W. Va., two at Louisville, three at Evansville, the seventh coming through to St. Louis.

Red Caps on Union Station Ushers.

Red caps are now the prevailing fashion in the army of ushers and baggage porters employed at Union Station. This style became effective yesterday morning, and was ordered by the Terminal Association management to harmonize with the color in the other large passenger stations. Travelers from Eastern cities, especially, always ask for a "red cap" when they need the service of the ushers and porters. In the future they will not have to make such an inquiry as the caps and their wearers will be in evidence at all the telephone at the executive offices and engaged in conferences with two or three practical politicians from New Jersey. It was interesting to watch the effects of the returns from Maine upon these men. When the returns, as complete as we could get them at 12 o'clock on the night of Sept. 11, came in, James Nugent, one of the leading politicians of Essex County, N. J., who was in the room, took from my desk a copy of The World Almanac, and referring to the returns of previous elections, said: "Of course, the Republicans will hail this as a great victory, but if they will sit down and analyze the gains they have made, they will find no comfort in them, for to me they indicate a Democratic victory in November. If the Democrats make proportionate gains in other states, you can absolutely count upon a Democratic victory in 1916."

HOW WILSON MET THE HYPHEN ISSUE IN 1916 CAMPAIGN

This prophecy was verified by the results of the election of Nov. 7.

Campaign Difficulties.

It was difficult, and almost impossible, between the date of the speech of acceptance and Oct. 1 to revive interest in the Democratic campaign and to bring about a renewal of hope of success that had almost been destroyed by the psychological results of the Maine elections.

Frequent demands were made upon us at the executive office at Asbury Park to get busy and to do something. "Wilson was not on the front page and Hughes was busily engaged in campaigning throughout the West." But the President, in his uncanny way, knew better than we the psychological moment to strike. He went about his work at the executive offices and gave to us who were closely associated with him the impression that nothing unusual was afoot and that no presidential campaign was impending. I made frequent suggestions to him that he be up and doing. He would only smile and calmly say, "The moment is not here. Let them use up their ammunition, and then we will turn our guns upon them."

The psychological moment came, and the President took full advantage of it. One afternoon in September the President telephoned me at the executive offices at Asbury Park to have the newspaper men present for a conference that afternoon, that he would give out a reply to a telegram he had received. With the newspaper group, I attended this conference. It appeared that an Irish agitator, named Jeremiah O'Leary, who had been organizing and speaking against the President and trying to array the Irish vote against him, wrote an offensive letter to the President, calling attention to the results of the Maine elections and to the New Jersey primaries and to his anticipated defeat in November. The President handed to the newspaper men the following reply to O'Leary:

I would feel deeply mortified to have you or anybody like you vote for me. Since you have access to many disloyal Americans and I have not, I will ask you to convey this message to them.

This sharp and timely rebuke to the unpatriotic spirit to which O'Leary gave expression won the hearty and unanimous approval of the country to the President. Nothing like this bold defiance came from Hughes until a few days before the election.

The Democratic campaign, within 24 hours after the publication of the O'Leary telegram, was on again in full swing.

Sarcasm Aimed at Hughes.

At this same newspaper conference the President, who had not seen the newspaper group since his arrival at Long Branch, discussed the campaign in the most intimate way, so they might have what he called the "inside of his mind." His criticism of the campaign that Justice Hughes was conducting contained bitter irony and sarcasm. Evidently, the petty things to which Mr. Hughes had adverted in his campaign speeches by way of criticising the President and his administration had cut the President to the quick. One of the newspaper men asked him what he thought of Mr. Hughes' campaign, and he laughingly replied: "If you will give that gentleman rope enough he will hang himself. He has forgotten many things since he closeted himself on the bench, and he will soon find himself out of touch with the spirit of the nation. His speeches are nothing more or less than blank cartridges and the country, unless I mistake the people very much, will place a true assessment upon them."

The newspaper men left this conference heartened by the reply he had made to O'Leary, and with the firm conviction that the Democratic candidate was just "playing" with Hughes and would pounce upon him at the psychological moment.

In the delivery of the campaign speeches at Shadow Lawn each Saturday afternoon, President Wilson took full advantage of the swing toward the Democratic side which was manifest after the publication of the famous O'Leary telegram. While the Republican candidate was busily engaged in invading the West in his swing around the circle, the Democratic candidate each week from his porch at Shadow Lawn was delivering sledge-hammer blows at the Republican breastworks. As the Republican candidate in an effort to win the West was heaping maledictions upon Dr. E. Lester Jones, the head of the Geodetic Survey, a Wilson appointee, the President calmly moved on, ripping to pieces and tearing to shreds the poor front behind which the Republican managers were seeking to win the fight.

Mr. Hughes campaigned like a lawyer. Mr. Wilson like a statesman. Mr. Hughes was hunting small game with birdshot; Mr. Wilson trained heavy artillery on the enemies' central position. The essential difference between the two men and the operations of their minds was made clear in the campaign. No one would wish to minimize the unusual abilities of Mr. Hughes, but they are the abilities of an adroit lawyer. He makes "points." He pleases those minds which like cleverness and finesse. He deals with international affairs like an astute lawyer drawing a brief. But has he ever quickened the nation's pulse or stirred its heart by a single utterance? Did he ever make anyone feel that behind the formalities of law, civil or international, he detected the heartbeats of humanity whom law is supposedly designed to serve? Mr. Wilson was not thinking of Mr. Hughes, but perhaps he was thinking of the type of which Mr. Hughes is an eminent example when he said in Paris, "This is not to be a lawyers' peace."

Every speech of President Wilson's was, to use a baseball phrase, a home run for the Democratic side. They were delivered without much preparation and were purely extemporaneous in character. The Republican opposition soon began to wince under the smashing blows delivered by the Democratic candidate, and outward proof was soon given of the fear and despair that was now gathering in the Republican ranks. With a few short trips to the West, and his final speech at Long Branch, President Wilson closed his campaign, with Democratic hopes on the rise.

The happenings of election day, 1916, will long linger in my memory. I was in charge of the executive offices located at Asbury Park, while the President remained at Shadow Lawn, awaiting the news of the first returns from the country. The first scattered returns that filtered into the executive offices came from a little fishing town in Massachusetts early in the afternoon of election day, which showed a slight gain for the President over the election returns of 1912. Then followed early drifts from Colorado and Kansas, which showed great Wilson gains. Those of us who were interested in the President's cause were made jubilant by these early returns. Every indication, though imperfect, up to 7 o'clock on the night of the election, forecast the President's re-election.

Election Day of 1916.

In the early afternoon the President telephoned the executive offices to inquire what news we had received from the country, and he was apprised of the results that had come in up to that time. Then quickly the tide turned against us in the most unusual way. Between 7 o'clock and 9 o'clock the returns slowly came in from the East and Middle West that undeniably showed a drift away from us.

About 9:30 o'clock in the evening I was seated in my office when a noise outside in the hallway attracted my attention and gave me the impression that something unusual was afoot. The door of my office opened and there entered a galaxy of newspaper men connected with the White House offices, led by a representative of The New York World, who held in his hands a bulletin from his office carrying the news of Hughes' election. The expression in the men's faces told me that a crisis was at hand. The World man delivered his fateful message of defeat for our forces, without explanation of any kind. To me the blow was stunning, for The New York World had been one of our staunchest supporters throughout the whole campaign, and yet I had faith to believe that the news carried in the bulletin would be upset by subsequent returns. Steadying myself behind my desk, I quickly made up my mind as to what my reply should be to The World bulletin and to the query of the newspaper men whether we were ready to "throw up the sponge" and concede Hughes' election. Concealing the emotion I felt, I dictated the following statement, which was flashed through the country:

When Secretary Tumulty was shown The World bulletin conceding Hughes' election, he authorized the following statement: "Wilson will win. The West has not yet been heard from. Sufficient gains will be made in the West and along the Pacific Slope to offset the losses in the East."

Shortly after the flash from The World bulletin was delivered to me, conceding Hughes' election, the President again telephoned me from Long Branch to find out the latest news of the election. From what he said he had already been apprised by Admiral Grayson of the bulletin of The New York World. Every happening of that memorable night is still fresh in my memory and I recall distinctly just what the President said and how philosophically he received the news of his apparent defeat. Laughingly he said: "Well, Tumulty, it begins to look as if we have been badly licked." As he discussed the matter with me I could detect no note of sadness in his voice. In fact, I could hear him chuckle over the phone. He seemed to take an impersonal view of the whole thing and talked like a man from whose shoulders a great load had been lifted and now he was happy and rejoicing that he was a free man again. When I informed him of the drifts in our favor from other parts of the country and said that it was too early to concede anything, he said: "Tumulty, you are an optimist. It begins to look as if the defeat might be overwhelming. The only thing I am sorry for, and that cuts me to the quick, is that the people apparently misunderstood us. But I have no regrets. We have tried to do our duty." So far as he was concerned, the issue of the election was disposed of, out of the way and a settled thing. That was the last telephone message between the President and myself until 24 hours later, when the tide turned again in our favor.

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

Tomorrow Tumulty will tell how the election tide turned to Wilson later in the night just as it seemed to run overwhelmingly to Hughes earlier in the evening.

AUSTRIA PLANS BIG INCREASE IN PUBLIC UTILITY COSTS

Price of Tobacco Also to Be Raised, According to Dispatch From Vienna.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—A dispatch to the Manchester Guardian from Vienna says the Austrian Government proposes to raise the price of tobacco and cigars 300 to 500 per cent, railway fares 200 to 250 per cent, and telegraph and telephone rates in similar proportion.

The municipality of Vienna likewise plans to greatly increase the price of gas, electric current, tram fares, etc. With the prices of foodstuffs rising daily, the time is near when people whose annual income is only a million Kronen will have difficulty in making both ends meet.

MOLES, BLACK AND Brown, flat or elevated over the level of the skin, coarse warts of face and hands may turn into cancerous or sarcomatous growths at any age. Early removal of all such blemishes appears imperative according to modern scientific conception. Permanent and radical removal of same can be achieved without knife or electrolytic destruction, leaving no unsightly scars, causing no pains or other inconvenience, but this may be done only before the turn to malignancy takes place. Announce a Special Selling of

DELION Cord Tires

"King of them All"

10,000 Miles Guaranteed

There is No Question About Cord Tires Being Better Than the Fabric Type

YOU will find that nearly all big races have been won on cords—that most leading car makers are now using cords—that the biggest mileage records are on cords—that the greatest freedom from tire trouble is when using cords.

Delion Cord Tires Are Hand Built With Extreme Care and Not Rushed through a lot of humanless machinery. They are cured on air bags that furnish an even pressure to bind the tread and body into one powerful unit, free from buckles or wrinkles.

The Heavier Tread

Delion Tires have an extra thick, heavy, specially compounded "Crown Type" tread that is the result of eight years' experience and study. Delion construction gives 10% more than usual roadsurface. The tread is absolutely guaranteed against chipping or cracking. It is made of live, fresh rubber.

Each Cord Rubber Covered

One of the greatest advantages of Delion cord tire construction over the fabric type is that each cord is completely covered by rubber which acts as an insulation. This prevents the cords touching each other, thus reducing friction heat.

Non-Stretch Bead—Reinforced

Positive assurance is given to Delion users against stretching, broken beads or "rim jumping." The bead is composed of numerous steel wires imbedded in a solid rubber base, then reinforced by several extra layers of strong cords at this point. Double chafing strips shown by the lower arrow completely surround the bead, giving protection against rim cutting.

Extra Shock Absorber Strip

This is a special development of the Delion Company and has proven so remarkably successful in binding the tread to the cord body that we absolutely guarantee Delion users against the treads loosening or separating. This is one of the most important discoveries in tire making and one of the features that enables us to give you a guarantee of 10,000 miles' service.

Cushion and Breaker Strip

The Cushion is composed of pure gum a great deal thicker than generally used, which absorbs the shocks of severe blows so that Delion Tires will withstand the hardest kind of service without injury to the cord body. Delion users are not troubled with the usual stone bruises and fabric breaks. The Breaker Strip is a layer of wide mesh material united with the bottom cushion that acts as a protector.

Strong Side Walls

You have doubtless noticed how some tires check or crack on the sides. This allows moisture to reach the cords, causing tread separation, and also permits dirt and sand to work in, making blisters. Delion sidewalls are built of a secret formula rubber compound that is guaranteed not to crack or check.

Sale Begins Monday in Our Auto Accessories Department Fourth Floor

To prove to the thousands of car owners how big and husky Delion Tires are—we are making an unusual proposition. We know Delion Tires at these sale prices are the biggest Tire value on the market, and are going to let you prove it to yourself. Come in and see them. Examine them carefully—compare them for size—compare weights. We feel confident and assured you will agree with us that they are the "Best Value" obtainable, guaranteed by a reputable manufacturer and doubly secured by our guarantee, and all Tires are adjusted by us, based on prevailing list prices. COAST GUARD HERO DIES IN NEW YORK

Commodore Berthoff Led Expedition 1700 Miles to Rescue 200 Frozen-In American Whalers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Commodore Ellsworth Price Bertholf, retired commandant of the United States Coast Guard, who in 1898 received a gold medal and the thanks of Congress for heroism in saving the lives of 200 American sailors frozen in on a fleet of whalers at Point Barrow, died here today at the age of 54.

Commodore Bertholf was probably the only man who was ever able to win by competitive examinations appointment in quick succession to the naval academy at Annapolis, the military academy at West Point and the United States Revenue service. In the first two he was first in competitive examinations and in the last he came out second in a class of several hundred.

He was expelled from Annapolis for hazing and when this became known at West Point he was not allowed to continue his studies there, but he was permitted to remain in the revenue service and later became an officer in the Coast Guard, its successor.

In accomplishing the relief of the whalers he led a party of three 1700 miles overland in the frozen Arctic country.

In the winter of 1901 he went alone through Siberia for the Department of the Interior to select a herd of reindeer for introduction into Northern Alaska. He gathered 428 deer and chartered a small steamer at Vladivostock and delivered them at Port Clarence. He was not heard from for months while on that trip and made the circuit of the globe before he returned. He retired as coast guard commandant in 1919. Afterward he was vice president of the American Bureau of Shipping at New York.

Music Authority to Speak.

How You Can Tell If You Need Glasses

The indications that you are not seeing as clearly as nature intended are comparatively simple to identify.

If you have headaches, the condition of your eyes is not infrequently the cause. If, therefore, you are troubled in this way, your eyes should be examined to see if they are in any way a contributing cause.

If you are easily irritated, or if you are languorous, and nothing much seems to ail you, then it is very probable that an unsuspected visual defect may be responsible.

If you are compelled to hold your letter, newspaper or book at any unwonted distance from your eyes in order to read clearly, it is a sure indication that you have reached the age when eyes undergo such structural changes that glasses are absolutely necessary for comfort.

If you play tennis or golf, or if you motor and your mental response is not instant with your moment of vision, this lack of co-ordination can be corrected by glasses.

On noticing any of these indications for the need of glasses, consult your Oculist.

Your prescription for glasses will require extreme mechanical care and patient optical adjustment. This is how Erker's can serve you to your best advantage.

REED INSISTS ON PAYING BONUS WITH EXCESS PROFIT TAX

Senator Declares That Proposal, in His Belief, Will Become an Issue in Coming Campaigns.

THREE SUBJECTS OF BILL DISCUSSED

Asserts at Keytesville That Republicans, Declining to Let Profiteers Pay, Mean to Make People Pay Bonus

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KEYTESVILLE, Mo., Nov. 12.—Senator James A. Reed spoke at the Courthouse here today on the tax question, giving his view of three principal subjects in the revenue bill, which was recently passed by the Senate and returned to the House for action by conferees of the two bodies. The Senator explained his effort to continue the excess profits tax and use it to pay a bonus to the American soldiers in the great war. He declared it to be his opinion that the issue growing out of this measure would be a principal issue in coming compaigns. The text of his address on the revenue bill follows:

"The revenue bill was reported to the Senate by a strict party vote in the finance committee, the Republicans, of course, voting in the affirmative and the Democrats in the negative. Its outstanding provisions were:

"First—The abolition of the excess profits taxes. The present law provides that corporations shall pay a 10 per cent tax upon their incomes. When the net income exceeds 10 per cent on the invested capital, after deducting all expenses of every character, the excess profits tax applies and was levied at the rate of 20 per cent on the profits in excess of 10 per cent and less than 20 per cent, and at the rate of 40 per cent on profits in excess of 20 per cent. This tax during the coming year would amount to $450,000,000.

"Second—The bill proposed to repeal the tax upon corporation stock. This is a tax of $1 on each $1000 of the value of corporate stock and is paid by the corporation. It amounts to but little on small corporations; but, on large corporations, like the Steel Trust, Standard Oil, General Motors, the American Tobacco Co. and every very large institution, the tax is very substantial. The tax on the Steel Trust and its allied companies amounts to practically $2,000,000. The tax in the aggregate pays into the public treasury $75,000,000 annually.

"Third—It was proposed to reduce the surtaxes on large incomes. Under the present law all incomes above $5000 are subject to surtaxes. The tax gradually increases with the size of the income until it reaches 32 per cent on an income of $68,000. From that point it continues to increase to 65 per cent on incomes in excess of $1,000,000. The bill proposes to make some slight changes in the taxes on incomes below $68,000, but on incomes from $68,000 up the bill retains a level tax of 32 per cent. An income of $68,000 is equivalent to the interest upon an estate of $1,000,000 at 6½ per cent. The reduction of the taxes, therefore, applied to 12,000 men who, for all substantial purposes, could be accounted as 12,000 millionaires. The reduction in the taxes of these 12,000 people amounts to $90,000,000.

Reduction of $615,000,000.

"Upon the three classes I have mentioned, therefore, an aggregate reduction of $615,000,000 was made, all of which went to the benefit of corporations or large institutions enjoying large incomes and individuals enjoying incomes in excess of $68,000 per year.

"In order to make this cut it was necessary to retain one half of the taxes on transportation. This one-half amounted to $180,000,000 a year. Every cent of it is paid by the public. It was also necessary to postpone the passage of the Soldiers' bonus bill.

"The proposition was so astounding that it provoked rebellion on the Republican side, first, by a group of men known as the agricultural bloc, consisting of about 20 men equally divided between the two political parties. These men determined to resist the bill or at least the measures in the bill to which I have referred.

What Agricultural Bloc Did.

"The loss of that many votes would have meant the defeat of the bill. Accordingly, members of the Republican organization met with the leaders of the so-called agricultural bloc and effected a compromise agreement, by the terms of which the tax on corporation stock was restored and surtaxes on incomes above $68,000 was raised from 32 per cent as reported in the bill to 50 per cent. The entire tax on transportation was repealed. But, in consideration of these concessions, the Republican members of the so-called agricultural block solemnly agreed to support the Republican leaders in their effort to take off the excess profits tax.

"As the bill finally passed, therefore, the excess profits tax, amounting to $450,000,000, was taken off; the surtaxes on incomes were reduced from $90,000,000 to $55,000,000, and the one-half of the tax on transportation which it had been proposed to continue, amounting to $180,000,000, was taken off.

Tax for Soldiers' Bonus.

"An effort was made to pass an amendment which I offered, proposing to continue the excess profits tax, which would bring in $450,000,000 a year, and apply it to the discharge of the soldiers' bonus and attached to the amendment was the soldiers' bonus bill as previously reported.

FOURTH CONVICTION IN MURDER OF DRY INFORMANT

William Hayes Third Member of His Family to Be Found Guilty in Herculaneum Killing.

PUNISHMENT FIXED AT LIFE IN PRISON

His Father and Brother Are Under Sentence to Be Hanged—Two More Men Await Trial.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

IRONTON, Mo., Nov. 12.—A jury here today found William Hayes of Herculaneum guilty of the murder of Andrew Deck, a former saloonkeeper at Herculaneum and fixed his punishment at life imprisonment. Deck was shot and killed after being lured from his home the night of Feb. 26 last. He had been a voluntary informant of prohibition enforcement officers and been summoned as a Government witness in a bootlegging case.

Hayes' conviction is the fourth in connection with the Deck murder. He was the third member of his family to be convicted of this crime. His father, Ernest Hayes, and his brother, Eugene Hayes, were found guilty at Hillsboro and are under sentence to be hanged. James Seward of 1621 South Third street, St. Louis, also is under death sentence for the murder. Eugene Hayes, at the time of the shooting, lived at 1712 South Tenth street.

Otto and Jesse Thomas, not related, both of Festus, are waiting trial for the murder.

William Hayes' Trial.

After the conviction of the others William Hayes took a change of venue to Ironton. Taking of testimony was concluded yesterday and the jury was 22 hours in deliberating. After the verdict was returned it was learned that the jury had agreed to a verdict of guilty on the first ballot, but debated as to whether death or life imprisonment should be the penalty. For most of the time the vote stood six to six on that question.

The mystery of Deck's shooting was not cleared until June 4 last, more than three months after the shooting, when Seward made a confession to the St. Louis police after he and Eugene Hayes had been arrested on suspicion that they were transporting whisky in automobiles from Herculaneum to St. Louis. Seward told of having been hired by Eugene Hayes to go to Herculaneum and "beat up" Deck. He told of going to the Hayes home in Herculaneum where he met members of the Hayes family, who agreed to pay him $35 for beating up Deck. He said he was taken to the Deck home in a machine driven by William Hayes and that Ernest and Eugene Hayes and Otto Thomas also were in the car.

Slain in View of Wife.

Seward said the others waited while he went to Deck's home and called Deck out, telling him some prohibition officers wanted to see him. Seward said it was arranged that he should pick a quarrel with Deck and use this as an excuse to beat him.

Deck had walked only a short distance from his home with Seward when he was shot and killed in view of his wife and child.

Seward at his trial alleged that Deck drew a revolver and that he took the revolver from Deck and shot him. In his confession he said all conspirators knew of the shooting and aided him in getting away from Herculaneum and coming to St. Louis in an automobile.

VETERANS ASKED NOT TO MAKE APPLICATIONS FOR BONUS NOW

Adjutant-General Raupp Requests Ex-Soldiers to Wait at Least Three Months.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Dec. 12.—Adjutant-General W. A. Raupp, chairman of the Soldiers' Bonus Commission, in a bill signed yesterday by Gov. Hyde, today issued an entreaty to former service men not to send in applications now, as probably three months will elapse before his office will be in shape to handle them.

More than 5000 letters already have been received by him on the subject, Raupp said, and his present force, not designed to handle such business, is swamped. Raupp said that no applications will be filed by him until some at least of the bonus bonds are sold and the money is available.

EIGHT CARS OF CORN PRODUCTS ON WAY TO THE NEAR EAST

Eight carloads of corn products in the Near East relief campaign have been handled through the St. Louis terminals bound for New Orleans, in the last few days. From New Orleans the shipments are exported to feed the starving people in the Near East.

The shipments, which the railroads are handling free of all charge, are made under the supervision of a committee representing the Near East Relief organiaztion and the American Railway Association. Alonzo E. Wilson of Chicago, field director of the Near East Relief, and J. J. Pooley for the railroads, are supervising the routing of the shipments, which will be moving to New Orleans until next March. The present shipment through St. Louis consists of 24 cars of grain products from St. Joseph, Mo., and Cedar Rapids, Ia. These are handled over the C. B. & Q., Terminal Association and Illinois Central.

SEVEN COUNTIES IN MISSOURI ALLOW NO QUAIL SHOOTING

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY Nov. 12.—Only seven counties in Missouri of the 106 which have answered inquiries from the office of the State Game and Fish Commissioner, have no open season on quail, which under the State wide law may be hunted from Nov. 10 to Dec. 31. The seven counties in which, under a vote of the people, it is unlawful to hunt quail at any time during this year, are Adair, Barton, Dallas, Gasconade, Ozark, Ray and Stone.

Eight counties have not yet answered the inquiry. These are Atchison, Cedar, Gentry, Jackson, Jasper, Perry, Pike and Ralls. In the counties reporting, quail shooting now is on, the only prohibition being the bag limit, 10 birds for one day or not to exceed 15 in the possession of the hunter for a longer period.

"The income from the excess profits tax alone would have paid the entire soldiers' bonus within three years and would have much more than taken care of the soldiers' bonus provided any considerable percentage of the soldiers accepted in lieu of cash the so-called insurance plan which provides for payment of certain sums over a long period of years.

"The measure was supported with practical unanimity on the Democratic side and gained, I think, some eight votes from the Republican side, but we could not secure enough to pass the bill. It was then proposed, under an amendment offered by Senator Simmons, to pass the soldiers' bonus and provide for its payment out of the interest on the debts due the United States by foreign Governments. This measure was likewise rejected.

"As matters stand the soldiers' bonus is in complete abeyance. Republican leaders, however, assert that it will be passed and that it will be paid out of a sales tax. That is to say, they refuse to pass the bill to pay the soldiers' bonus out of the profits of the profiteers, but promise to pass the bill to pay the soldiers' bonus out of a sales tax which must be paid by all of the people of the United States and one-fifth at least of which will be paid by the soldiers themselves or their immediate families. No matter how it may be disguised, a sales tax is a tax on consumption and will therefore, be paid by every man, woman and child in the United States. The measure was overwhelmingly defeated in the Senate when offered by Senator Smoot, and, in my opinion, would be likewise defeated in the House.

"Becomes Campaign Issue."

"My own position in that the huge profits even now being made by many business concerns are the direct result of the war; that they could not be realized except for the war and that it is just and equitable that a portion of these excess profits should be employed to compensate the soldiers in part for the financial sacrifices made by them in entering the war. In a word, we would be taking some of the money from those who had profited by the war and using it to recoup in part the losses of those who defended the country in time of war.

"The issue, in my opinion, made by this measure, will constitute the principal battle line of the campaigns of the near future."

POLICE WILL TRY TO CLOSE SALOON ONCE RUN BY EGAN

Friday Night's Shooting, Following Murder of City Committeeman, Leads to This Decision.

An effort will be made by the police to force the closing of the saloon at 1400 Franklin avenue, following a second shooting there within two weeks. The wounding of three men there Friday night, so soon after the unsolved murder of the former proprietor of the saloon, William T. Egan, Democratic City Committeeman, caused this decision.

Six men were at the bar Friday night when someone shot through the glass of the front door, wounding William Berkery, 1407 Franklin avenue; William Dineen, 1516 North Leffingwell avenue, and Frank Abel of 832 South Fourteenth street.

Chauffeur Describes Stranger.

Louis Zopfi, a chauffeur for the Yellow Taxicab Co., told policemen he had taken Abel and two other men from a saloon at Twelfth street and Chouteau avenue to the Egan saloon and was waiting outside when a stranger wearing a dark overcoat and a cap jumped on the running board of the taxicab and commanded him to start the engine. He obeyed.

The stranger then walked to the front door of the saloon and Zopfi heard seven or eight shots, after which the stranger got into the taxicab and commanded Zopfi to drive by a circuitous route to a vacant lot on Thirteenth street a short distance south of Cass avenue. After compelling Zopfi to put out the headlights and lie down in the machine the stranger fled. When Zopfi felt sure the man was gone he drove to a garage and notified the police.

Police Captain Stinger of the Carr Street District, yesterday said everything possible would be done to close the Egan saloon, though since the excise law became inoperative with prohibition, there is no one authority with power to close saloons. The police policy in such cases has been to harass owners and customers of undesirable places until they give up.

Since the murder of Egan, a policeman has been posted at the door of the saloon to question customers and arrest police characters. The shooting Friday night occurred when a change of patrols was being made and the place was temporarily without a police sentinel at the door.

JANE ADDAMS TO SPEAK HERE

Will Address St. Louis Community Forum Meeting Next Sunday.

Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, who has recently returned from Europe, where she attended the Women's Peace Conference, is scheduled to address two meetings of the St. Louis Community Forum next Sunday. The time and place of these meetings will be announced later.

A regular meeting of the forum will be held at 3 p. m. today at Sheldon Memorial, 3648 Washington boulevard, to which all interested persons are invited. There will be no admission charge.

SCHOOL CHILDREN INVITED TO SEE HISTORICAL EXHIBIT

Supt. Maddox Sends Notices Concerning Display at Jefferson Memorial.

Interest in the historical features of the Missouri Centennial will be aroused among public school children of St. Louis this week when teachers will advise them to visit the exhibits of the Missouri Historical Society in the Jefferson Memorial Building during the last two months of Centennial year. The children will also be urged to have their parents accompany them.

Notice is being sent to the principals of all the schools in reference to this matter by John J. Maddox, Superintendent of Instruction. Supt. Maddox presented this matter to the Board of Education at its meeting last Tuesday night and the board indorsed the movement.

Night Tire Service Suspended.

Night tire service was suspended during the winter months, beginning last night, as a result of a recent agreement between tire service companies. Service will be given only between the hours of 7:30 a. m. and 6:30 p. m., Sundays included, until May, when the 24-hour service will probably be resumed. The Automobile Club will continue its night service for members.

H. E. HUNTINGTON PAYS HUGE SUM FOR PICTURE

Gainsborough's "Blue Boy" Said to Have Cost Railroad Magnate $640,000.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
LONDON, Nov. 12.—Henry E. Huntington, American railroad magnate, and collector of rare books and manuscripts and fine pictures, bought Gainsborough's famous "Blue Boy" from Sir Joseph Duveen, it was announced today. It is said Huntington paid $640,000.

As was obvious at the time, Sir Joseph's announcement several weeks ago that he bought the picture, with Reynolds' "Tragic Muse," from the Duke of Westminster for himself and not for sale, was merely a piece of the usual trade camouflage.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Henry Edwards Huntington, nephew of the late Collis P. Huntington of California, has acquired within the last 10 or 12 years many of the greatest works of old English masters. Among them are three other Gainsboroughs, which were bought by the Duveens in London and later displayed in Paris and sold to Huntington. He also possesses Romney's portrait of Mrs. Siddons and her sister. It was Mrs. Siddons who sat to Reynolds for the "Tragic Muse."

At the time the Duveens bought the "Blue Boy" and the "Tragic Muse" for $1,000,000, it was announced the price of the "Blue Boy" was $850,000, the highest price ever paid for a single picture.

Fined for Smoking on Street Car. Sidney Harstick, 27, of 2749 Arsenal street, was fined $10 in Police Court yesterday for smoking on the rear platform of a Page avenue car at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Harstick claimed that he was within the law, for one of the windows of the back plaform was open, and City Ordinance 30700 permits smoking on the three rear seats of street cars when the weather permits windows to be open. Judge Mix ruled that the "three rear seats" did not include the back platform.

Exhibit of Monday Club. There will be an open meeting at the Monday Club of Webster Groves tomorrow afternoon. The art section is in charge, Mrs. Wilkinson, chairman, and the program for the occasion will consist of an exhibit of historical articles belonging to the members of the club.

MORE THAN 3000 PLAY AT BENEFIT CARD PARTY

Tables Fill Coliseum at Entertainment for St. Louis University Endowment Fund.

About 3000 women and about 10 men attended yesterday afternoon at the Coliseum a card party which was said to be the largest ever given in St. Louis. It was for the benefit of the St. Louis University Endowment Fund.

There were 700 tables in use when play began at 2:30 o'clock and players were still arriving. To accommodate the overflow, tables were placed in the boxes and in rooms and open spaces under the first gallery. Each table accommodated four players, at $2.50 for each player. The proceeds were further swelled by the sale, at the end of the party, of the cards at 25 cents a deck and the table covers at 50 cents each. With the exception of the rental of the building, all the money realized will be turned over to the endowment fund, the cards, pencils, scores, etc., having been donated and all incidental expenses having been taken care of by friends of the undertaking.

Parties Arranged Beforehand.

All the table parties had been made up beforehand and for an hour before the starting time for the game, the players, with the aid of 40 ushers, young girls in the University colors, white and blue, were finding their tables and their table partners. At most of the tables, play was started before the announced time.

The prizes, handbags which were said to have a retail value of $4 to $25, were suspended on screens at the south end of the oval. The attendance was so great that it was seen, early in the afternoon, that the bags which had been donated were not enough and a hurry order was sent to a wholesale house for 250 more. Distribution was by chance, the winner at each table earning the right to draw a number.

Players at each table had the option of playing whatever game they preferred.

Prize Drawn By Number.

The attendance prize, a sterling silver mounted handbag, given a valuation of $45, was to be drawn by number.

No refreshments were served and nothing was offered for sale except the cards and table covers.

The arrangements were in the hands of a committee headed by Mrs. Paul Dobyn. Mrs. T. J. Dooley was chairman of the Bags Committee. Mrs. William Maffitt is chairman of the women's committee of the endowment fund. About 100 women assisted in the arrangements.

HEAD OF MAN FOUND IN BALE OF WASTE PAPER

By the Associated Press.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Nov. 12.—The head of a man, with two bullet holes in the forehead, was found by workmen here today in a bale of waste paper at the warehouse of a local storage company. With the head was found a bloody shirt and a bank book, showing deposits of more than $3000 in a bank at Lafayette, Ind. Canceled checks in the bank book, signed by G. L. Ream, for the "H. & R. W. Co.," were drawn on the Tippecanoe Loan and Trust Co. of Lafayette. Doctors who examined the head expressed the belief the man had been dead about a year.

The head was scorched, presumably in a fire in the warehouse last August.

The paper bale in which the head was found was sent to the warehouse several months ago by the American Box Board Co. of Grand Rapids. Workmen were about to place the paper in a re-bailing machine when they made their discovery.

Bible Meetings at Three Churches.

There will be a "Fundamental Bible Conference," commencing next Sunday and concluding with Thanksgiving day, at the Washington and Compton Presbyterian, Hope Congregational and Curby Memorial Churches. Some of the leading speakers i nthe country will attend.

A NEW PRINCIPLE FOR INTERPRETING THE BIBLE

Do some of the ancient narratives shock you? The way to understand it, reverently and rationally, is to remember that nothing despicable to man's developed moral sense could possibly be good to God. So all that is sacred stands secure.

Now 11 Days to Rio

SOUTH AMERICA, once so inaccessible, has been put within easy reach of the American traveler. A United States Government steamship, The American Legion, recently made the voyage from New York to Rio de Janeiro in 11 days and 2 hours breaking all records. Her sister ship, the Southern Cross, is just as fast.

Hotel Comforts at Sea

When you step aboard one of these beautiful ships for a flying voyage to South America you find yourself among all the comforts of a great American hotel.

Modern single beds have taken the place of old-fashioned bunks; all rooms are on the outside; all rooms are equipped with running water, electric fans, electric radiators, bed reading lamps, chiffoniers or dressing tables, wardrobes and toilets. Half the rooms have private baths. Tub baths have needle showers. A positive system of forced ventilation keeps the ship cool on the hottest days.

The Managing Operators of the South American Service are the Munson Steamship Lines. For nearly a half century this organization has studied the wants and needs of American travelers. As a result the service they offer today is second to none. Food on these ships is the finest. A trained staff of employees renders cheerful, competent service.

MILK WAGON DRIVER DENIES EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE

Man Held on Complaint of Pevely Company Says $700 Shortage Was Due to "Dead" Accounts.

John H. Kenkel, 33 years old, of 5471 North Euclid avenue, a milk wagon driver, was arrested at the instance of the Circuit Attorney Friday on an indictment charging grand larceny and embezzlement of about $700. The Pevely Dairy Co., for whom he worked, is the complainant.

Kenkel at Police Headquarters yesterday said he had not taken any money dishonestly. He said he had worked for the Pevely company for 17 months prior to last January. At that time, he said, the company checked up his accounts for the first time during his term of employment and told him he was short more than $700. He said he was told to go out and get the money and not come back until he had the cash. He said he went to work for other dairies and had not yet accumulated enough to make up the amount.

The shortage, he said, was due to "dead" accounts and natural shortages that occur on all milk wagon routes. The drivers, he said, are held responsible for all accounts on their route. If a customer moves and does not pay his account, he said, the driver is held responsible. Some drivers stand the shortages, he said, in order to keep up their routes. Kenkel is married and has two children.

Remarkable Value in Pianos and Player Pianos

Wherever pianos are sold, the Washburn Piano is known for thoroughly dependable quality. By all ordinary standards, it belongs in a higher price class.

Outside of those expensive instruments laying great stress upon their claims to artistic pre-eminence, few pianos approach the Washburn in beauty of tone, skill of workmanship, and excellence of material.

At the new price level, a good Washburn Piano or Player Piano costs you no more than many of inferior grade. It saves you $100 from the usual price of competitive instruments.

Made by Lyon & Healy

More than a half-century's experience with fine pianos lies back of the Washburn. Together with the vast resources of the world's foremost music house.

It is as an ideal piano for the home that the Washburn has achieved its great success. Its purity and sweetness of tone help to train the child's ear to a true appreciation of musical quality.

"Made by Lyon & Healy" means much to the piano buyer. It indicates an understanding, second to none, of what makes for musical excellence. A remarkable organization, with unequalled facilities for production. A sincere desire to serve the cause of good music by producing instruments of true worth.

"Made by Lyon & Healy" means that the Washburn comes from the same workrooms that have developed the superb Lyon & Healy Piano, as well as the finest harp, the finest mandolin, the finest banjo that the world has known!

In Use the World Over

The tone of the Washburn Piano—round, resonant, full, and sympathetic—remains unimpaired by time and use. So scientifically is it designed, so well built! It can never become "tin-panny," as do so many moderate-priced instruments.

That it is made by Lyon & Healy guarantees the goodness of the Washburn Piano. Into it has gone the knowledge born of 57 years of handling high grade instruments.

Because of this enduring goodness, you will find Washburns giving satisfaction under the severe climatic conditions of Asia—in South America, in Iceland, in South Africa. Truly, the Washburn's leadership in its class is beyond question!

In the Washburn Player Piano, you will find the same superiority. For the Lyon & Healy-made Player is a perfected mechanism. The first-time performer can play it with keen enjoyment, while, to the trained musician, it gives unlimited opportunity for the expression of his interpretive powers.

A Sound Investment

There is sure satisfaction—lasting satisfaction—in the purchase of a Washburn Piano or Player Piano. And the value, at the new low prices, is unmatchable!

Let us show you these good instruments —tomorrow!

PRELIMINARIES IN SMALL CASE LIKELY TO BEGIN DEC. 5

Trial of Governor to Open by Dec. 28 If Indictments Are Sustained.

By the Associated Press.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Nov. 12.—Request that all three preliminary motions in the embezzlement case against Gov. Len Small be heard on Dec. 5 was made today by Attorneys for the Governor and the States Attorney's office of Sangamon County. In event that the indictments are sustained they asked that the trial be started at the earliest possible date. December 28 is being considered as a possible date for opening the trial.

Edward Pree, Assistant State's Attorney of Sangamon County, and Werner W. Schroeder, attorney for Gov. Small, told the court they had reached an agreement in a conference at Chicago last night. The Governor's attorneys, they said, had promised to deliver copies of all preliminary motions, including the motion to quash the indictments, to State's Attorney Mortimer at Springfield on or before Nov. 25.

Subject to the approval of the court, they said, they were ready to start arguments on the motions on Dec. 5. Judge Edwards said the date was satisfactory to him provided a murder trial set for Nov. 28 is completed by Dec. 5. If the murder case is not out of the way by that time, the Judge said, he will arrange to take up the Governor's case during the following week.

Arguments on the preliminary motion are expected to consume three days. Today's court action lasted less than 5 minutes. The Governor's attorneys and Pree arrived just as Judge Edwards was completing a minor damage suit and a divorce action was postponed for a few moments to give the Governor's case right of way.

$7500 VERDICT AGAINST ESTATE FOR WOMAN

Mrs. Sybil Miles Given Award by Jury on Claims for Nursing William Fawcett.

A jury in Circuit Judge Taylor's court yesterday returned a verdict for $7500 in favor of Mrs. Sybil Dudley Miles, in her suit against the estate of William Fawcett, a mechanical engineer, for nursing him when he was ill and performing other service during a period of 15 years. The service began in 1902. Mrs. Miles sued for $17,062.94.

The case was originally heard in the Probate Court, where Judge Holtcamp disallowed all but $22.95 c the claim, this being for money which Mrs. Miles alleged she actually expended on account of Fawcett. Any service rendered five years before Fawcett's death, two years ago, the Probate Court ruled out, on the ground that this part of the claim was barred by the statute of limitation.

View Taken by Judge Taylor.

Judge Taylor, however, on Mrs. Miles' appeal from the Probate Court, held that the alleged contract between the petitioner and Fawcett, by which it was alleged he promised at some time to pay her, was a continuing one up to the time she ceased to render service in 1917.

Fawcett, who was 91 years old, was a bachelor, and for years lived at a bachelor hotel at 3201 Lucas avenue. At intervals he would leave the hotel and go to Mrs. Miles' home at 4556A McMillan avenue, where she waited on him. She also looked after him when he was ill at the hotel and other places, it was testified.

Mrs. Miles was not permitted to testify, but evidence in support of her claim was furnished by her husband and other witnesses. It was stated that one of the things she did for Fawcett was to take him to church when he was not able to go alone. He had said, according to the testimony, that at some time he expected to reimburse her for all of her work.

Contention of Defense.

The defense contended that there was no agreement of the kind alleged, and further, that Fawcett, for a man of his age, was unusually vigorous, being able to walk across the free bridge and stroll around in East St. Louis before riding back to this side. He was not the kind of a man who needed much nursing, the defense asserted.

Fawcett left about $20,000, but did not leave a will. His nearest living heirs are two sisters, one of whom lives at Springfield, Ill., and the other at Taylorville, Ill. The claim was resisted by the administrator of his estate.

COMMODITY PRICE INDEX NUMBER FOR ENGLAND SLUMPS

Economist's Figure on Wholesale Values Dropped Approximately 7 Per Cent During October—Possibilities of Washington Conference From Trade Aspect.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Since the news of the week from the financial markets has been of a distinctly mixed character, it follows that the evident feeling of optimism arose from thoughts of the impending Washington conference. Such a reaction is perfectly natural. If the conference succeeds, as seems to be likely, financial burdens of all Governments will be materially eased. Taxation will be lightened, a drag on business will be removed, and one of the principal causes of currency and exchange derangement will be eliminated. A great step will have been taken toward stabilizing the world's financial relationships.

Long Distant Effects.

"In addition, a disturbing political situation, that existing in the Far East, will have been composed and the machintry will have been set in motion for the discussion and adjustment of other international problems. The by-products and sequels of a successful conference are likely, in fact, to be among its more important results. With an agreement reached on the particular questions now at issue, the way will be opened for the discussion of such political matters as the arrangement of international debts and the adjustment of German reparations.

"It would be a mistake to assume, however, that a successful meeting would lead to an immediate revival in our own trade or that of the world. Existing business conditions are the result of economic and financial conditions that do not change overnight. Frozen credits do not thaw in a day nor does purchasing recover while we wait. An understanding at Washington is of prime importance, but its effects will be felt in next year's rather than next month's business.

"Your domestic markets recent developments have been to the disadvantage of the already suffering farmer. Grain prices have rallied slightly, but are still close to the bottom, while cotton has lost a cent and a half a pound on the accumulating evidence that the Government's Oct. 3 crop estimate was far ahead of the probable yield. Some compensation is offered in the further rises of crude oil prices. Taking the business position as a whole, however, it remains an open question as to whether we have reached the height of a seasonal movement or whether improvement is to be progressive through the winter.

Break in Index Number.

"An arresting piece of recent foreign news is the sharp fall in the Economist's index number of British wholesale commodity prices. After several months of comparative stability this index dropped approximately 7 per cent during October, reaching the lowest point since September, 1916. Part of the fall undoubtedly is due to the improvement in sterling exchange and the demoralization of grain prices. Certain commodities, such as minerals, have, however, been declining consistently for several months, and British trade reports speak of lower prices for steel products as a result of reduction costs. Are we now to enter a period of secondary price deflation based on further wage cuts, lower freight rates and the like? It is possible. The effect on business of such a movement would be, however, vastly different from that of the decline of 1920. Business could adjust itself better to the smaller and more orderly recession.

"Wild fluctuations in marks meanwhile point to another German crisis. Authentic details are lacking, but the broad aspects of the situation are fairly evident to anyone. Enormous fresh printings of marks keep the exchange value on the decline. The conclusion is aggravated, furthermore, by the much talked of Wiesbaden agreement, since under the latter the Government must print additional marks to pay for the goods delivered to France without being relieved of its other obligations to the Reparations Commission. Rathenau's attempt to start a reparations boom on this kind of inflation merely intensifies the German financial gamble. Meanwhile the question of defaults on coming reparations payments is realized, attempts at domestic and foreign loans are abortive, and the Reparation Commission departs for Berlin. And while Germans see hope in the latter event, it seems that the commission, divided within, is quite as likely to be interested in the methods of making Germany meet her existing obligations as in allowing her any remission in terms."

—Industrials Up Saturday.

"After the second interruption of the week the stock market resumed this morning with business still on an active basis and with prices generally firm. Strength was marked over the industrial list, rails being quiet and irregular. Oils and equipments continued to be features for strength, but a number of industrials touched new high prices for the movement and many showed advances amounting to substantial fractions toward the close. Wheat also showed firmness, May gaining 2¾ cents at $1.12¾. Cotton, however, continued to ease. At 16.34 cents the January delivery was off 31 points on the day. The foreign exchanges were fairly active, with sterling firm at $3.94. German marks were 1 point lower at 0.45-32 of a cent.

"As the result of an increase of $23,299,000, the excess reserve of the Clearing House banks stands at $25,100,000. Loans are less by $3,200,000. Deposits are greater by $11,100,000 and reserve deposits at the Reserve Bank are increased by $23,100,000. Government deposits show a shrinkage of $4,500,000."

FINANCIAL LONDON ON CONFERENCE AT WASHINGTON

Opinion on Final Outcome Called Moderately Hopeful —Believed U. S. Does Not Realize Full Strength of Position and Possibilities From Gold Holdings.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Arthur W. Kidder, editor of the Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post in financial review, says:

"It is unfortunate that the moment for the Washington conference coincides with so many pressing problems here, notably that with regard to Ireland. You perhaps will do well to recognize this clearly. Unless the Irish problem is settled shortly, the will of the coalition Government and the general election are probable, and are no more than America is likely to realize the disturbing effect of such an event.

"Financial opinion concerning the final outcome of the Washington conference is, nevertheless, moderately hopeful. This is partly because it is believed that the conference will be characterized by a frankness in dealing directly with the points of policy affecting the conflicting interests and partly because fresh and vivid recollections of the recent war will combine with existing desperate economic conditions in Europe to give impetus to a desire to establish peace on a sound, enduring basis.

Expected Conference Results.

"Practical business men with whom I have discussed the outlook see considerable stress, however, upon the unlikelihood of one conference settling peace for a prolonged period by the drafting of mere written agreements. It is believed, therefore, that the best results will come from a setting in motion by this conference of the machinery for further periodical meetings, all of which will result in the direction of good will and co-operation. In fact, to state the matter briefly, the elements of friction, competition and misunderstanding which make for war can only be overcome by equal activity on the part of the forces making for understanding and general amity.

"The Chancellor's speech definitely announcing that £50,000,000 are required next year for resumption of service on our debt to you should be sufficient to contradict mischievous assertions frequently made to the effect that Britain is endeavoring to obtain a remission of her indebtedness by constantly raising the financial question or dealing with the international indebtedness. If Britain should tomorrow every penny she owes America, she would still raise the point about international indebtedness, including German reparations. She would do this simply in the economic sense and in a desire to accelerate economic recovery in Europe, which she believes to be closely linked with international good will.

"Financial London believes that it can scarcely realize as yet the full strength of your own position and the possibilities arising out of recent events and your huge accumulations of gold. We are afraid to say much about your further strengthening and consolidating your economic position by lending carefully and wisely to Europe because of fear of being misunderstood. Nevertheless, in many banking quarters the opinion is held that still further participation in foreign investments by you would ultimately prove a truer economic service than gold itself.

Greatest Problem Economic.

"Your greatest problems here are economic. There are some slight indications of reviving trade, but although wholesale commodities have risen so greatly, the shrewdest opinions consider that in view of normally high prices for coal and the very small reduction in wages, even with the reduction in efficiency as measured in output, any revival in trade will not go far. This view considers that we are not on sound basis in the sense of being capable of producing an exportable surplus for foreign countries. Hence we probably have still to face considerable economic and social difficulties."

Outlook in France Better.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Developments in France during October resulted in a more optimistic attitude toward the commercial and financial prospects of the country, improved conditions in Belgium were maintained during the month while the situation in South America was practically unchanged, according to reports made public by the Commerce Department.

Reductions in unemployment and increases in freight traffic were the basis for the optimistic outlook in France. A considerable "back to the farm" movement was noted. French exports and imports practically equal for the first nine months of the year, the advices said, adding that a slight improvement had been registered in the iron and steel industry, while production for the first eight months of the year showed an increase of 10 per cent over the same months of last year.

Improvement in the condition of the key industries of Belgium, noted in September, was maintained last month, but without appreciable advance. The general business tone was said to appear to be influenced by the presidential crisis and the unsettled politics before election, it was said.

Conditions in South Africa, in general, were practically unchanged, as compared with September, with few signs of improvement, the advices declared, adding that any revival of commercial representation or other business activities on the part of American firms would tend to create an unfavorable impression in that country.

New York Coffee.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The market for coffee futures was very quiet today, but lower owing to the easier showing of Rio over yesterday's local adjournment. Offering pressure, after selling at 7.75@7.80 March rallied to 7.95, compared with 7.85 at the close of Thursday, but the firm was not fully maintained, and after opening at a decline of 7 to 8 points, the market closed 3 to 8 points net lower. January, which was 5 points higher, was estimated at about 20,000 bags. Spot coffee: Quiet; Rio 7s, 8¾@8¼c; Santos 4s, 11¼@12¼c.

Linseed Oil.

Sales of 1 to 4 barrels at 80c per gallon for raw and 82c for boiled.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The stock market began this morning where it left off Thursday with the same buying and same impulse toward higher prices. Such selling as was incident to the closing out of traders' contracts over the week-end, was readily absorbed. The representative industrial stocks went through their previous high prices. There was special strength in the equipments, in American oils, in some of the independent steels, and in a variety of specialties like American Linseed, common and preferred, the Central Leathers and Haskell & Barker. Investment stocks were in demand again with American Telephone and a number of the preferred industrials going still higher.

The cotton market went lower again, but while the prices mended somewhat, nothing of importance happened in the foreign exchanges.

The high prices were reached, as a rule, in the first hour, but while not gaining any further ground in the later dealings, the market held its own consistently.

The Bond Market.

Prices in all parts of the bond market in today's short session held around Thursday's close. The Libertys were typical of the whole list. They were unchanged with the exception of the first 4¼s which advanced a number of points.

There was considerable interest in foreign Government bonds. They were firm and in a few instances reached their best quotations for the year.

Whatever irregularity there was took place almost entirely in the industrial group where a few issues which were prominent in the recent enthusiast buying receded slightly. Mexican Petroleum 8s lost a half point and so did Adams Express 4s. Western Union 6s got down to 106. On the other hand U. S. Steel 5s advanced to a new high figure of 98, the Armour 4½s continued their rise to 85¾. American Telephone and Telegraph 6s, United States Rubber 5s and the sugars were strong. The tractions were in demand. Third Avenue adjustment 5s at 45½ reached a new top.

Despite the week's two holidays the market for Canadian Provincial bonds has been the most active in months.

New Light Beats Electricity

When Edison invented the incandescent electric lamp, and Count Welsbach the incandescent mantle, most people thought the day for the oil lamp was past. A remarkable new oil light has now been brought out which has been tested and approved by scientists at leading universities in England, Canada and the United States and found to be far superior in quality to electric light. The U. S. Government's Bureau of Standards reports this new way of using kerosene oil for lighting produces four times as much light from a gallon of oil as in the old way.

This brilliant, pure white light is pronounced by famous eye specialists as resembling sunlight in quality, and the best artificial light known. It is endorsed by the Underwriters' Laboratories as an absolutely safe light, is guaranteed to burn without odor, flicker, smoke or noise, and is lighted and put out like the common lamp.

The inventor, L. T. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

CHAMPION HORSESHOE PITCHER HAS PLAYED FOR 40 YEARS

By the Associated Press.

KELLERTON, Ia., Nov. 12.—Frank E. Jackson, national champion horseshoe pitcher of the world, has been ringing pegs for more than 40 years.

The game of horseshoes, he says, is like everything else—there being at least two ways in which it can be played, a right way and wrong way. For 28 years, Jackson played the game wrong and then he discovered that there was a scientific way to ring the iron pegs with greater accuracy. So, since 1909, Jackson has been pitching a scientific game of horseshoes.

One of the first things Jackson discovered when he learned the science of the game was his control over the "open shoe."

Jackson has held the national championship since 1914, winning it the last time at the Minneapolis tournament.

In practicing or training for a tournament, Jackson usually plays several games every day, for a period of several weeks.

Jackson is as enthusiastic over his horseshoes as many golfers are over their game on the green. He says the most exciting game of the Minneapolis tournament was played between himself and a 13-year-old Twin City youth, Freddie Hay. The score ended 40 to 50, Jackson pitching 40 ringers and 15 double ringers, while the youngster pitched 40 ringers and seven doubles.

Jackson is the father of two song. Correl and Hansford, who are good at horseshoe pitching. They are doubles champions of Iowa, Illinois, Missouri, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas.

He has issued a standing challenge, expressing a willingness to play anyone.

Barney Bernard at American; Jefferson Is Dark This Week

Creator of Abe Potash Has New Role, as Jewish Cobbler, in "Two Blocks Away"—Julian Eltinge at the Orpheum.

WITH the Shubert-Jefferson dark this week, Barney Bernard, at the American, will be without competition. He appears there tonight in Aaron Hoffman's comedy, "Two Blocks Away," the first play of the year to reach St. Louis during the same season of its production in New York. Eddie Cantor, in "Midnight Rounders," was booked for the Jefferson this week, but an extension of his engagement in Chicago will postpone his arrival until Dec. 4.

Barney Bernard has abandoned Abe Potash after eight years, and now appears in a new character, that of Nate Pomerantz, a simple and unsophisticated Jewish cobbler who is beloved by the entire neighborhood in which he has his shop. His kindness and generosity reach out particularly to the poor.

But from an unexpected source he suddenly inherits a considerable fortune. He changes his name to Nathaniel Orange, and moves to a mansion "two blocks away." Residing there in solitary grandeur, he forgets his old friends, and seems gradually degenerating into a miser. How he is saved from moral destruction is the theme of the play.

The part is rich in homely humor, and one of the diverting bits of dialogue is between the former cobbler and a collector who demands that he pay an excess profits tax. Nathaniel refuses. "Tell that to the Government," he says. "They got a mint to make money. I ain't."

In support of the comedian are Edna Hibbard, Abbe Carpenter, Walter Erskine, Harold Russell, John Rutherford, Kate Morgan and others.

"Erminie" Next Week.

A musical event of prime importance will be the production of "Erminie" next week at the American, beginning Monday night. The restoration of "Erminie" to the stage brings together for the first time as co-stars Francis Wilson and De Wolf Hopper, for many years rivals in the field of light opera. Wilson will play the role of Cadeaux, which he created in the first American production of "Erminie," and in which he appeared more than 1200 times at one New York theater. Hopper's part is that of a companion rogue, Ravennes. The Jefferson announces for next week a return engagement of "Take It From Me," a musical comedy.

Julian Eltinge, female impersonator, has headline honors at the Orpheum this week, and promises a new display of gorgeous Parisian modes. Artie Mehlinger and George W. Meyer appear as singers of their own songs; Kate Elinore and Sam Williams have a new act called "Wanted, a Cook;" and Hugh Herbert will be seen in a one-act comedy, "Mind Your Own Business." Others on the bill are Adelaide Bell, dancer, and the Swor brothers, minstrels.

Features at other playhouses are: Columbia, a playlet by Aaron Hoffman, called "The New Leader," which pictures a rehearsal of vaudeville performers; Grand, "The Cotton Pickers," a song and patter act laid in the South; Rialto, Blossom Seeley, with Bennie Fields, in their jazz act, "Miss Syncopation;" Empress, "Hanky Panky Jr.," a musical act; and King's, LaSova and Gilmore in "Diversions de Vogue," a dancing skit.

Anna Q. Nilsson in "Why Girls Leave Home," Liberty.

Thomas Meighan in "The Conquest of Canaan," Missouri.

Wanda Hawley in "Her Face Value," West End Lyric.

Odd Facts About Players and Films

SCREEN stars are said by critics to "get under the skin" of a role, but now the process has been reversed—a role got under the skin of the actor. The victim was Clyde Fillmore and the play "The Sting of the Lash." He was horsewhipped, and in order to preserve the realism a mule-skinner's whip was used. Result, the evidence of his role remained under his skin in the form of welts and bruises for over a fortnight.

Mary Alden has become one of the most discussed personalities on the screen and has been called the "Mary Garden of movies."

Hugo Ballin was the first artist of real eminence to become a motion picture art director.

There are approximately 5000 feet of film in the average picture.

Phyllis Haver is proud of the fact that her real name has an O in front of it—O'Haver. She is one of the few bathing beauties that Mack Sennett hasn't lost. He has promoted her to stardom.

Conrad Nagel, Mildred Harris, Dorothy Dalton and Theodore Kosloff all appear in De Mille's latest production, "A Fool's Paradise."

Sir Gilbert Parker says the great producers will now film historical novels and scenes from history and points out as proofs of his statement, "The Mark of Zorro," "Passion," "Deception" and "The Three Musketeers."

Gaylord Lloyd, who is five years older than his brother Harold, has been in pictures now for three years, and has doubled for Harold in many photoplays. There is a close resemblance in looks and he did many stunts such as driving a Ford through buildings and fences, and jumping on top of railroad trains.

Mae Murray has formed her own company, the Tiffany Productions, Inc., and is working on a new picture entitled "Peacock Alley." Her director, Robert Leonard, is also her husband.

Ruth Roland of serial fame was injured during the making of "Handa Up" when a pinto pony she was riding bareback ran away with her, down a mountain trail. She was thrown and so badly hurt that it was feared she would be crippled for life.

Elaine Hammerstein was born in 1897, weighs 120 pounds, and has brown hair and gray eyes.

The pale complexion requires only a light makeup for the screen. A sallow complexion takes only light powder, preferably yellow, while a florid coloring needs more paint and powder to lighten the skin as red photographs black.

"Jane Eyre" has been made into a picture with Mabel Ballin and Norman Trevor in the leading roles.

One of the first rules given camera men is to stick to their posts. In a picture taken in the Bahamas "The Woman God Changed," the camera man and director had to go in the water. In order to get a close up of a fire scene on a roof the camera man and director had to stay on the roof until after it had been ignited; while in "Treasure Island," the man who filmed it had to perch his camera in precarious positions all over a ship.

George M. Cohan and Mary Garden failed to achieve success on the silver screen.

Marion Davies plans to appear in a dazzling presentation of "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

Madge Evans has reached the advanced age of 12 years, and was on the stage with John Barrymore in "Peter Ibbetson."

Many times 25 to 30 thousand feet of film are taken and only five or six thousand feet are used. Sometimes several cameras are used from different angles, and then the best scenes are used. The cutting of the film is one of the most important things in the making of a picture.

"Pilgrims of the Night" "Why Girls Leave Home" "Conquest of Canaan"

Week's Picture Theater Offerings Also Include Theda Bara in Person at New Grand Central and Wanda Hawley in "Her Face Value" at West End Lyric.

THEDA BARA, famous portrayer of vampire roles on the screen, is at the New Grand Central Theater in person this week. She will play the entire week, appearing once each afternoon and twice in the evenings. It is her second appearance in St. Louis, her first having been as the featured player in "The Blue Flame."

Miss Bara is presented in a novel manner, her appearance being preceded by the showing of a one-reel film. As it fades out the stage lights come up, the effect being that the film dissolves into Miss Bara herself. She then gives an intimate account of her career in the movies.

"Pilgrims of the Night," is the principal photoplay offering. The story is based on E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel, "Passers By." Rubye de Remer, Lewis S. Stone and Raymond Hatton are in the cast. The story, laid in France, deals with a pretty girl, a band of Parisian crooks, an organ-grinder and Scotland Yard detectives.

The Missouri is now celebrating a "Made in St. Louis Week" with a number of local offerings. The feature picture, not a St. Louis product, is Thomas Meighan in "The Conquest of Canaan," made from Booth Tarkington's story of the same name. A St. Louis written and made picture, "The Land of Eternal Youth," by Anne Scannell O'Neill, is also on the program. The play was written around the Forest Park Zoo and the scenes were "shot" in the park and in other parts of St. Louis. The cast is made up entirely of St. Louisans. Miss Minnette Gilber, a youthful St. Louis singer, will sing Robyn's "Answer," and the orchestra will be heard in the works of St. Louis composers.

A "Main Street" runs through "Canaan," the mythical city which Tarkington wrote about in "The Conquest of Canaan." Here the respectables looked up to Judge Pike as their leader. His word was law. The unrespectable accepted him because they knew that he owned their homes, their saloons and had their lives in the hollow of his hand. As the title suggests, Main Street in Carman was conquered by two of the unrespectables, Joe Louden and Ariel Tabor. Ariel was fortunate enough to inherit money which took her to Paris. Joe could not bring himself to conform with the Main Street conventions which aroused such prejudice within him that he was forced to leave town to carve out a better career. Doris Kenyon in the role of Ariel Tabor plays the leading feminine part.

Wanda Hawley and Ben Turpin are principal attractions at the West End Lyric the first half of the week. Miss Hawley appears in "Her Face Value," a dramatic offering considerably "heavier" than anything she has yet attempted, and Turpin is the feature in "She Sighed by the Seaside," in which he portrays a life guard.

In "Her Face Value" Miss Hawley is supported by T. Roy Barnes and an excellent cast. The star plays the role of Peggy Malone, a chorus girl who is the chief support of her worthless father and brother. Following Peggy's marriage to Jimmy Parsons, the press agent of her show, Peg's male relatives continue to sponge, with the result that Jimmy becomes careless and finally leaves his home. Later Peggy gains fame in the movies and Jimmy's return is depicted in an amusing way.

Elaine Hammerstein, in "The Girl From Nowhere," is booked for the last three days of the week, starting Wednesday.

Billie Burke Back on Stage in Mocking Role

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.

WE must go as far back as Booth Tarkington's "Clarence" to find so much as an approach to the freshness, humor of observation and sparkling fun that he has put into "The Intimate Strangers," which opened Monday night at Henry Miller's theater. This little comedy—the temptation to speak of it in the diminutive is strong, although it is an unusually expert bit of writing—proved to be a jewel in its gently romantic and playfully sentimental way. Maude Adams, for whom it is said to have been written, regarded it disparagingly, and thereby Peter Pan missed a glorious opportunity, if she wants to act at all.

Billie Burke exercised a shrewder judgment, and so it happened that "The Intimate Strangers" was carried to a conspicuous success, with the charming star in the sly and captivating role of Aunt Isabel. It was Miss Burke's return to the stage after a spell, after as many seasons as separate the present from "Caesar's Wife."

The bantering, mocking role of Aunt Isabel is for an actress who is not afraid of her years. It is beyond the flapper period that Miss Burke used to suggest so alluringly. And it is underscored by the circumstance that, because her father didn't marry the second time until he was 65, she thereby inherited not only a niece, but a grandniece, to help her in the amusing deception by which Aunt Isabel punishes and then rewards a chance acquaintance she makes at an up-State railway station.

Aunt Isabel and Ames, a lawyer from New York, find themselves marooned and become acquainted at the desolate junction by reason of tornadoes, washouts, electrical storms and other acts of providence designed to plague travelers.

Her chance remark about the conservatism of the older generation leads to his condescending rejoinder in praise of the mellower years, and then to his open condemnation of thoughtless and effusive youth—"Brazen hussies in boy's breeches," he doesn't hesitate to call them. Then one of the self-same "brazen hussies"—Aunt Isabel's grandniece, to be exact—comes in a motor car to rescue her; and Ames, before this vision of fresh and buoyant youth, shows signs of contradicting the assertions he has made.

Eugene O'Neill's "The Straw."

SUCH a play as Eugene O'Neill's "The Straw," produced Thursday night at the Greenwich Village Theater, puts the reviewer in a state of perplexity. The superior quality of this work is beyond doubt or dispute. In not one out of 20 dramas presented in New York in the course of a season are there to be found even traces of the same ability that is distinguishable in its every scene. As a work of imagination it is unquestionably vivid. As a study of human nature under certain extreme circumstances it is profoundly impressive. As a dramatic representation of life it is engrossing.

On the other hand, it is the most lugubrious and depressing play that could possibly be encountered within theater walls. Not one ray of hope illuminates it. There are five scenes, and they pass in an atmos-

ETHEL CLAYTON has finished her new starring picture, "The Cradle."

Will Rogers' new picture, tentatively called "Ek," has been christened "One Glorious Day." It contains a scene in a spiritualist meeting where Rogers, as the professor, first presides and then later returns in spirit form, trying to prove his presence to the members. The scene required a great deal of tedious, painstaking double exposure work.

"The Lane That Had No Turning," by Sir Gilbert Parker, will be the final title of the new picture starring Agnes Ayres.

Exteriors for "The Champion," Wallace Reid's latest picture, will be made in the Yosemite Valley, California. The company includes Lois Wilson as leading woman. The picture is an adaptation by J. E. Nash of the stage play by the same name, in which Grant Mitchell is starring.

An interesting Canadian village called "Pontiac" has been erected for exterior scenes in "The Lane That Had No Turning," featuring Agnes Ayres. This is an original story by Sir Gilbert Parker. One of the particularly colorful buildings shown in the village is an old-fashioned manor house, 200 years old, built along the lines of the French-Canadian style of architecture.

These are school days for Lila Lee, leading woman with Will Rogers in "One Glorious Day," a Paramount picture being produced by James Cruze. Every time she gets a few minutes off set she has her maid bring her a trigonometry, a French grammar and a book on economics which she diligently studies. Being only a youngster still, Lila doesn't propose to let motion picture making interfere with her education. When she was working this summer she didn't study but took a vacation like all co-eds. Now she's back at the old grind. One beautiful thing about her school is that she can pick her own curriculum.

STRAUSS PROGRAM TO CONSIST WHOLLY OF HIS OWN WORKS

Some of Songs Virtually Unknown in This Country—Composer Will Appear Nov. 21.

The program attending the appearance of Richard Strauss at the Odeon on the evening of Nov. 21 will consist wholly of works by the eminent German composer, it is announced. His sonata for violin, opus 18, will be played by Mishel Piastro, and three groups of songs will be given by Elizabeth Schumann, soprano, formerly of the Metropolitan. Dr. Strauss will serve as accompanist for both artists.

Some of the songs are familiar but others are new and were virtually unknown in this country until the composer's arrival. The list is as follows: "Zueignung," "Du Meines Herzens Kroenelein," "All' Mein Gedanken," "Mit Deinen Blauen Augen," "Jung Hexenlied," "Freundliche Vision," "Ichwollt' ein Straeusslein Binden," "Einerlei," "Der Stern," "Schlechtes Wetter," "Wiegenlied," "Glueckes Genug," "Ich Trage Meine Minne," "Ich Schwebe," "Traum Durch die Daemmerung" and "Schlagende Herzen."

The FRANKLIN SEDAN

Out-Sells just as it Out-Travels All Other Enclosed Cars

Of 1920 Franklin production, over 46% was enclosed cars, 35.3% was Sedans; of 1921 production, 42% is Sedans.

Of 1920 automobile production in general, only 17% was enclosed cars.

THERE are many reasons for this, but they are all summed up in the Franklin Sedan quality of maximum usefulness at minimum cost.

The Franklin Sedan is not only lighter than most open cars, but more flexible. It absorbs shock more easily—wood frame, full elliptic springs, fourpoint body suspension. It is direct air cooled—has no radiator troubles. And it is different in many other ways.

The comfort, endurance and economy that this construction gives, combined with the practical advantages of wide windows, single wide doors and sloping V-shaped windshield, make the Franklin Sedan even more satisfactory for touring purposes than open cars of other makes. Investigate it.

How long does Paderewski hold this D?

How have you played it? Or heard it played?

You can tell exactly how Paderewski intended that we should interpret his Minuet by hearing him play it for you on the Apollo. You can have him play it for you, over and over again, just as he would play it once in concert — until you thoroughly grasp every detail of his interpretation.

To learn one selection that way, thoroughly in every detail, means much more than the mastery of that one piece of music; that one study in detail means a better and deeper grasp of musical interpretation as a whole.

To Music Lovers

The Apollo Reproducing Piano has elevated the "Player Piano" from a "mechanical" instrument to the highest plane of musical art. Today this instrument is recognized by the music masters of the world as truly a perfect reproducer, conforming to the worthiest standards. Its educational value, especially where young people are being taught the piano, is now recognized by the leading teachers of music.

Paderewski, Hofman, Gabrilowitch, Godowsky, and scores of leading pianists can today be heard in the home on the Apollo precisely as on the concert stage. The refining and educative influences of such an instrument can, therefore, hardly be overestimated. Since its music is true and genuine, it is not a temporary pleasure but a constant companion through all the years.

lead in Paramount pictures with Gloria Swanson in "The Husband's Trademark," which is now in production. He was last seen in the second role in "Wealth," with Ethel Clayton.

Clarence Burton has been added to the cast of "The Husband's Trademark," Gloria Swanson's latest Paramount picture, to play the role of a Mexican bandit.

Dorothy Dalton, playing the featured role in "Moran of the Lady Letty," is keeping in physical trim during the filming scenes aboard two sailing vessels especially chartered for the picture. Every morning Miss Dalton does a Marathon about the deck of her ship while it is going to the location spot, covering the distance from stem to stern 20 times.

"A man's fight with himself," is the way A. S. Le Vino, adapter of "The Parson of Panamint," Peter B. Kyne's story as a Paramount picture starring Jack Holt, characterizes the theme of this picture.

Penrhyn Stanlaws has completed his production for Paramount of Barrie's play, "The Little Minister," starring Betty Compson. Scenes were made last week in a big set representing the interior of an old castle in Scotland.

Work on Ethel Clayton's new picture, "For the Defense," was concentrated last week upon police headquarters scenes in which ZaSu Pitts, in the role of Jennis, is subjected to third degree examination.

Vera Steadman, Christie Comedy star, who is known in private life as Mrs. Jackie Taylor, is the mother of twin girls, Frances and Marie, born Oct. 7. One of the daughters is named for Marie Prevost, another firm star, who is a lifelong friend of Miss Steadman's.

Bobby Vernon is working in a novel two-reel comedy which goes all the way from the barnyard to romantic France. It is called "A Barnyard Cavalier."

New Christie Comedies on the way are: "A Pair of Sexes," with Neal Burns and Vlora Daniel; "Pure and Simple," with Bobby Vernon and Josephine Hill; "Saving Sister Susie," with Dorothy Devore; "Fresh From the Farm," featuring Bobby Vernon; "Kiss and Make Up," featuring Earl Rodney and Helen Darling, and "No Parking," featuring Neal Burns, with "Laddie" and Jane Hart.

Harry Ham has been secured to play the part of an American professor in John S. Robertson's next foreign-made Paramount picture, "Spanish Jade," an adaptation of Maurice Hewlett's novel. It will be filmed in Spain.

Annett Benson has just been engaged to play an important role in "The Man From Home," George Fitzmaurice's next London-made picture.

Jack Holt has a unique role in his new Paramount picture based on "The Parson of Panamint." As escaped convict 999, Holt poses as a parson who goes to a small mining town to clean up and "gets religion."

A courtroom scene with many extras employed and realism carried out to the last degree has occupied the activities of Ethel Clayton for her production of Elmer Rice's play, "For the Defense," which was adapted to the screen by Beulah Marie Dix. Vernon Steele is leading man with Za Su Pitts in an important character role.

Nov. 21 is the approximate starting date for the Paramount special comedy, "Is Matrimony a Failure," with T. Roy Barnes in the role created by Leo Ditrichstein in the stage production. Walter Hiers will also have one of the leading parts.

Wallace Reid has temporarily discarded his saxaphone for a punching bag during the making of his latest picture, "The Champion." He is almost as proficient in slapping the leather as he is on the musical instrument.

Theodore Roberts, who is playing the character of "Sky Blue" in Thomas Meighan's picture, "If You Believe It, It's So," and that his record for cigars smoked in one scene was 70 in a picture made several years ago, "M'Liss." In "Old Wives for New" he smoked one cigarette through 23 scenes. His hardest job smoking was in "Forbidden Fruit," where he had to keep a cigar at a certain length for a dozen scenes.

STEPS TO KILL LARVAE URGED

Farmers and Railroads Asked to Burn Off Right of Way.

The College of Agriculture of the University of Missouri, through its agricultural extension service, is appealing to the railroads and farmers to burn off the right of way skirting farms and fence borders of the fields in order to destroy the larvae of insects that might damage crops next year. The railroads of Missouri have already burned off the right of way, but some of the farmers have not co-operated by cleaning up their field borders in this manner.

Statistics from an experiment station at Conway Springs, Kan., are cited to show that the proper cleaning up of railroads' right of way and field borders at this time of year saves an average of 10,000 bushels of wheat in each 36 miles of burning. These statistics are based on chinch bug years.

SULPHUR SOOTHES UGLY, ITCHING SKIN

The First Application Makes Skin Cool and Comfortable

If you are suffering from eczema or some other torturing, embarrassing skin trouble, you may quickly be rid of it by using Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist.

This sulphur preparation, because of its germ-destroying properties, seldom fails to quickly subdue itching, even of fiery eczema. The first application makes the skin cool and comfortable. Rash and blotches are healed right up. Mentho-Sulphur is applied like any pleasant cold cream and is perfectly harmless. You can obtain a small jar from any good druggist.

THE KIND OF FILM "THE SHEIK" IS

One New York Critic's View of the "Movie" That Has Been Made From the Very Mushy Novel.

Just what sort of a film would be made out of "The Sheik." Many who knew from the first that this popular though mushy novel was predestined for the "movies," would like to know. It is to be shown in St. Louis shortly, though why it should not have been exhibited some time ago is not clear, since this is a pretty good "movie" city and "The Sheik" has been on view in New York several weeks. Here is how Heywood Braun, a critic for the New York World, sizes it up:

"The motion picture version of 'The Sheik,' which is running at the Rialto and the Rivoli, shows how much a director can do with some horses and a little nice white sand. Moments of extraordinary loveliness have been translated to the screen from one of the cheapest and most tawdry novels ever written. The scenes in which one sees the scudding cloud of Arab riders are as thrilling as anything shown in pictures for a season.

"Of course, the book overtakes the film eventually and lays it low. The sappy, sophomoric Sadism of Ethel M. Hull's novel has been vastly toned down. In the picture the story merely remains sappy. The relationship between the Arab chieftain and the proud young English beauty is of the most casual sort. The conquering male has become only a rather rough-and-tumble little boy.

"Rudolph Valentino, cast as the Sheik, looks like some sub-freshman (probably a Princeton one) who has raged himself up for a masquerade. You feel that instead of romping around the desert he ought to be at home grinding on his algebra. The actor tries desperately hard to take the whole thing seriously, and is accordingly tempted to employ as many strategems with his eyes as any French music hall singer. Great passion he indicates by opening his eyes very wide. Still greater emotion is registered by shutting them. The whole gamut of feeling is expressed by blinking.

"Nevertheless, we gathered from the comments of the young lady who went to the movies that Valentino is one of the most bewitchingly handsome juveniles on the screen. She said that it distressed her to see him take on so. She wanted to pat him on the back and say: 'There, there, my little man, what is it you want, anyway?'

"Miss Agnes Ayres seemed to us somewhat less inspiring. She was hardly the person to have caused such a rumpus between the sheiks and set all the desert to blazing. Still, it was not such a big desert. Sometimes it seemed no more than a sandpile. Any number of persons, through one cause or another, were stranded in the center of this Sahara, but they never had to wait more than a moment or so before being able to put a finger and stop a passing caravan. The camel service supplied in 'The Sheik' was a good deal better than those of our subway.

"Still more astounding was the fact that the heroine wrotes in the shifting sand, 'I love Ahmend,' and Ahmed himself, not five hours later, chanced upon that very spot and guessed her girlish secret.

"The fighting at the end is rather exciting. The story, by the way, concerns an Arab, who kidnaps a beautiful English girl and takes her to his duplex tent in the desert. In the end it develops that he is actually the son of an English noble and an excellent catch. They marry."

PERCIVAL CHUBB TO LECTURE ON LIFE AND WORKS OF DANTE

Percival Chubb, leader of the Ethical Society, will deliver, at Sheldon Memorial, this morning, the second of a series of five addresses on the life and works of Dante Alighieri. The six hundredth anniversary of the Italian poet's death occurred Sept. 14, and was observed in his own city, Florence, and elsewhere in Italy, and by his countrymen and lovers of his verse throughout the world.

In connection with his series of addresses, Chubb has called attention to the fact that some of the foremost interpreters of Dante's writings have lived in St. Louis. The late William T. Harris wrote "The Spiritual Sense of Dante's Divine Comedy," and Harris' surviving friend, Dr. Denton J. Snider, has written the "Dante Commentaries," a new edition of which is now being published. Thomas Davidson, St. Louis lecturer and writer, was also a Dante scholar of note, and Miss Susan Blow wrote a book on Dante's works

DR. W. O. COFFEE

Restoring Hearing, Relieving Head Noises, Curing Catarrh by Special Method In St. Louis Offices Every Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dr. W. O. Coffee, the noted specialist, says, in an interview, that many cases of deafness and impaired hearing, head noises and ulcers of the ears can be benefited or relieved and all cases of catarrh by his special non-surgical method. He is in his St. Louis offices every Tuesday and Wednesday. He is one of the best-known specialists in this country, having devoted 38 years to treating ear, nose and throat trouble, and over 20 years to this special non-surgical treatment, having most remarkable success in many severe cases. J. C. Patterson, Elmer, Mo., 86 years old, suffered with catarrh and deafness eight years; was completely relieved of the deafness and head noises and catarrh. A. W. Streepy suffered with catarrh that affected his nose, throat, bronchial tube and stomach. Doctors thought he had tuberculosis. Dr. Coffee cured him. Carl Nelson was totally deaf in one ear, suffered with catarrh for 20 years; completely cured. F. V. Krona suffered with catarrh, very bad throat and severe asthma; was completely cured. Dr. Coffee says if the disease has not injured the ear drum it may be helped or relieved. He says catarrh is a constitutional condition and has to be treated through the system as well as the nose and head. He says most cases of diseased turbinated bones and diseased tonsils do not have to be operated on. He has a special method of removing adenoids and polypus tumors without pain or chloroform. He invites people wearing glasses not properly fitted to have their eyes examined to see if they need glasses. His son, W. E. Coffee, is with him, assisting, and will test your eyes for glasses free any day. Dr. Coffee will examine your ears, too. If he thinks he can help you he will treat you one time free to show you how his treatment acts. He is responsible financially and professionally. Hours from 9 to 5. Room 409 Odd Fellows' Bldg., 816 Olive st. Phone Olive 8413 for special arrangement.

MANDATE OVER SMYRNA ASSAILED BY VANDERLIP

New York Financier Says Giving Greeks Control Was "Political Folly."

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 19.—Frank A. Vanderlip, New York financier, who has been making an economic survey of European countries, said when he visited this city that, in his opinion, the allies committed an act of "tragic political folly" in giving the Greeks a mandate over the Smyrna area. He declared that the Greek administration of that territory and of Thrace and Macedonia were "towering monuments of failure."

He said peace in the Near East was hopeless so long as Asia Minor was convulsed by a deadly warfare between the Greeks and Kemalists. All the economic blunders in the Versailles treaty, which resulted in such terrible consequences for Central Europe, he added, were repeated in the Sevres agreement.

"If a man put into a ring two highly bred bulldogs," said Vanderlip, "and told them to divide the quarters and live peaceably, his act would be as likely to result in peace as was the act of the allies in permitting the Greek army to enter this part of the world.

"The present conflict in Anatolia," he continued, "is paralyzing the whole of the Near East. There can never be peace and order, commercial activity and stability, nor a restoration of confidence until the Greeks are made to return to their homeland and the Turks are given a chance to get on their feet."

Vanderlip, who came to Constantinople from Athens, criticised the allies with equal vehemence for the boundary lines they set in Southeastern Europe. "The Greek frontier," he observed, "has been brought to within bombarding distance of Constantinople. Bulgaria's outlet to the Aegean Sea has been given to Greece and the certain seed of future war sown."

The American financier discussed the confused political situation in Constantinople and said there was a noticeable lack of harmony between the allies. He believed that the Sevres treaty, which was designed to represent the terms of peace between the allies and Turkey, had failed completely of its purpose and had been ratified by no one. "There is an intense rivalry," he declared, "among the big Powers for commercial zones of influence, and a disposition to ignore the United States and undermine American prestige."

"It is true," continued Vanderlip, "that the United States has never been at war with Turkey, that technically we have no position in a city under military occupation by the three allies, that we have declined to take the responsibilities of a mandate and of our own will have withdrawn politically from participation with the allies in the administration of the affairs of Europe.

"All that is an academic excuse, perhaps, for the absence of any disposition on the part of the allies to co-operate with our high commissioner. I think a broader point of view by the allies would lead them to work more closely and harmoniously with our officials here."

Vanderlip paid warm tribute to the work of Admiral Mark Bristol, the American high commissioner.

Your Stomach! Does It Work?

If Gassy, Sour, Heavy After Meals, Drowsy, Heartburn, Loss of Appetite, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Is Just the Thing After Meals

You Feel Insured When You Take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After Eating

People sometimes get the notion that the stomach has given out and their race is run. And yet it is often astonishing the relief that comes in such cases from taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after eating. This relief is so pronounced that such symptoms of dyspepsia, as the melancholy loss of appetite and broody fear to eat are quickly dispelled. Sometimes an excess of certain kinds of food may lodge in an acid stomach to cause gas, heartburn, water-brash, a sense of fullness after eating and a heavy, drowsy feeling after meals. This is dyspepsia and the stomach needs the alkaline effect given by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to bring relief. Get a 60-cent box today of any druggist and note how comfortable the stomach feels.

Paying for the Home

"Up to two years ago my money all went to doctors and medicine for my stomach trouble. I was constantly filled with gas and no medicine helped me permanently until I tried a bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy at that time with excellent results. Now I am using my money in paying for a home." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. STATISTICS ON BIG POWERS IN CONFERENCE

Figures on Population, National Wealth, Tax Burdens, Foreign Trade.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Questions of population, national wealth, national debts, ratios of taxation to wealth and debt, increases in debt and taxation since prior to the world war, figures as to foreign trade and the war effect of exports and imports will all take an important part in the discussions on limiting armaments.

Each subject has a definite share in having brought about the conference and is linked not alone with the economic discussions among the delegates to be expected, but directly associated with the size of armies and navies.

Figures on Big Powers.

For the five major Powers participating in the arms conference, the following outline may be taken as substantially correct on the best and latest information available here:

To arrive at the relation of existing tax burdens, the estimated national wealth of the five Powers may be set down as follows. British Empire, $180,000,000,000; Italy, $30,000,000,000; France, $100,000,000,000; Japan, $25,000,000,000; United States, $350,000,000,000. On the basis of 1920 direct taxation, this represents the following ratio of taxes to national wealth in each country: British Empire, 1.9 per cent; Italy, 1.6 per cent; France, 1.2 per cent; Japan, 0.6 per cent; United States, 1.1 per cent.

Taxation and Population.

Population totals (estimated) are as follows: British Empire, 469,431,559; Italy, 38,840,000; France, 91,225,000; Japan, 78,000,961; United States, 118,832,596 (including 12,414,421 in non-contiguous territories). Against this per capita taxation in 1920 is: British Empire, $7.40; Italy, $12; France, $13; Japan, $2; United States, $33.

For the purpose of this calculation, national debts are placed as follows: British Empire, $46,725,318,000; Italy, $17,846,400,000; France, $41,683,020,000; Japan, $1,763,500,000; United States, $23,996,523,000. Ratio of debt to national wealth: British empire, 26 per cent; Italy, 59.5 per cent; France, 41.7 per cent; Japan, 7.1 per cent; United States, 6.9 per cent. Ratio of debt to population: British Empire, $100; Italy, $459, France, $458; Japan, 23; United States, $202.

Increases in Direct Taxes.

Increases in direct taxes between 1913 and 1920 were as follows: British Empire, $423,073,000 to $3,514,527,000; Italy, $113,430,000 to $484,500,000; France, $188,670,000 to $1,220,422,000; Japan, 72,454,000 to $170,526,000; United States, $1,349,841,000 to $4,000,000,000.

Changes in foreign commerce for each Power between 1913 and 1920 were: British empire: Imports, $6,037,475,000 to $14,092,690,000; exports, $4,714,865,000 to $11,487,025. Italy: Imports, $738,519,000 to $3,187,563,000; exports, $520,520,000 to $1,565,434,000. France: Imports, $1,901,759,000 to $5,984,416,000; exports, $1,580,759,000 to $1,980,211,000. Japan: Imports, $364,716,000 to $1,130,156,000; exports, $315,208,000 to $2,387,723,000. United States: Imports, $1,813,008,000 to $5,278,481,000; exports, $2,465,884,000 to $8,228,016,000.

$4000 Reward for Jewel Smugglers.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 25.—Large advertisements have been appearing in the French press offering $4000 reward for information aiding in the arrest of persons who bring about the entry in contraband into the United States of pearls, diamonds and other precious stones. It is specified that the value of the seizures must be at least $40,000. The offer is made by an association for the protection of American jewelers.

IMPOSING ART DISPLAY TO OPEN THURSDAY

Works by Noted Artists, Including Gainsborough to Be Seen at 316 N. Eighth.

Art lovers will find an imposing array of paintings by masters at an exhibition which will open at the Marx & Jones galleries, 316 North Eighth street, next Thursday and continue for one week. The showing is being made by the Ehrich galleries of New York. In the exhibition will be notable works by Goya, El Greco, Hals, Reynolds, Raeburn, Romney, Turner, Constable, and, most treasured of all, a portrait by Gainsborough, in which great interest is inevitable in view of the recent sale of "The Blue Boy" at an extremely high figure.

The Gainsborough is a portrait of Martha Talbot before her marriage with the Rev. William Davenport. The sitter inherited the picture which remained at her ancestral estate in England until recently.

Among the other paintings in the exhibition will be "The Portrait of a Princess," by Goya, a study of Lady Hamilton in the nude by Romney and portraits by Lucas Cranach, Vigee le Brun, Antonio Moro, Anthonie Palamedes and Antoine Vestier.

The landscapes include works by Constable, Gainsborough, Stark, Watts, Pannini and Turner.

A notable religious subject is "Christ Mocked," painted by El Greco, a "Mater Dolorosa" by Blondel and several notable examples of the Italian and Flemish schools.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat, which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless, inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple any woman can dye or tint her worn, shabby dresses, skirts, waists, coats, stockings, sweaters, coverings, draperies, hangings, everything, even if she has never dyed before. Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—then perfect home dyeing is sure because Diamond Dyes are guaranteed not to spot, fade, streak or run. Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton or mixed goods.

Proof of St. Louis' Progress

We believe our home folks will all be glad to hear about the steady, solid growth of Union Electric's business during the past year. We attribute that growth, in a time of general depression, mainly to three factors:

First: The St. Louis district's relatively prosperous condition, compared with other American cities.

Second: Union Electric's ability to supply good service at low rates compared with rates in other cities.

Third: Everybody's desire, these days, to enjoy the labor, time and money saving benefits of electric service.

September 30, 1920, Union Electric had 122,278 electric service customers. September 30, 1921, we had 134,289—a gain of 12,011 in a year. Here is a record of the gains by months: 1920, October, 1,431; November, 1,123; December, 996. 1921, January, 670; February, 910; March, 1,019; April, 1,031; May, 1,088; June, 772; July, 992; August, 1,058; September, 919.

Our total energy sales to all classes of customers showed a gain for every month of the same period. The gain for September, 1921, as compared with September, 1920, was 7½%.

In our opinion, buyers of Union Electric 7% preferred shares, sold with the State's approval to finance this constant growth of the business, are making no mistake. Over 7,000 St Louis district men and women now hold these shares, individually or in joint ownership. The shares cost $100 each, or $101 when bought on monthly payments, with a first payment of $11 per share. If you are looking for a really safe 7% income, or for a chance to earn 7% interest on your current savings, you can get it in these shares.

Makes Curls or "Ear Muffs" Stay in Place

You will be glad to learn that you can keep your hair beautifully wavy and curly by using a perfectly harmless liquid known to druggists as "slimerine." You need only apply a little with a clean tooth brush just before doing up the hair, and in three hours or so you will be most agreeably surprised with the effect. And this effect lasts for quite a considerable time, so a small bottle goes a long way and is quite economical to use. Pure slimerine is really beneficial to the hair and there is no greasiness, stickiness nor anything unpleasant about it. It is a good idea to divide the hair into strands and moisten these one at a time, drawing the brush down the full length.

With the aid of liquid slimerine it is easy to shape the prettiest "ear muffs" and easy to keep them as placed all day. Just try it!

BILLIE BURKE IS BACK ON STAGE IN MOCKING ROLE

phere of impenetrable gloom. The morbidness of it is astonishing. The fact that it is so beautifully acted only makes it the harder to endure.

All but its opening scene passes in a sanitarium for consumptives in the Connecticut hills. The victim of the fatal disease is the oldest of the four children of a drunken and selfish widower in a nearby town. In his ignorance and meanness he does not see the Eileen, who is striving to mother his little flock, has been seized by the dreadful malady. Nor does the youth whom she loves only half heartedly and is engaged to marry.

Despite the grumbling of her stingy parent she is moved to the sanitarium. Here in doleful surroundings and among others as grievously afflicted as she, she meets and falls in love with another patient, a talented young author, who eventually recovers and goes away.

Her Love Unrequited.

BUT meanwhile has occurred the tragedy of unreturned love. Stephen Murray is a buoyant, likeable fellow. No blame attaches to him for his unresponsive attitude. Unconscious of the girl's adoration, he accepts her companionship, feels the stimulus of her encouragement and wins sudden success as a story writer.

Meanwhile despair is gnawing at Eileen's heart. When Stephen is cured and discharged, the ravages of her malady are hastened. She summons up courage to tell him of her love. But her confession meets with no response. Stephen hears it only with boyish embarrassment and confusion. Thereafter she suffers in silence.

In the final scene Stephen comes back to the sanitarium to pay Eileen a visit. She is now at death's door. A kindly nurse tells him the cruel facts of her condition, and suggests that a simulation of affection will bring hope and happiness into her dying hours. He agrees to the subterfuge, and then as they talk at the bedside discovers that he actually loves her. There is a last despairing scene, and the curtain mercifully cuts off this unbearable, but strangely beautiful play.

The company is in every way adequate, but two performances—those of the hero and heroine—were little short of remarkable. Margalo Gillmore expressed with the keenest intelligence the mental distress of Eileen, and she denoted in appearance and action the physical disintegration through which she passed. Every moment of her lovely performance was filled with infinite pathos.

Almost equally good—though his opportunities were fewer—was Otto Kruger's impersonation of the frank, honest, kindly Stephen. A commendatory work should be spoken for Harry Harwood, George Woodward, Katherine Grey and Grace Henerson.

The Hattons Once More.

THE play with which Frederick and Fanny Hatton Wednesday night began to regale the metropolis at the Forty-eighth Street Theater is called "We Girls." It is the skittish matron of society, who refuses to admit her accumulating years despite the damning testimony of full-grown children, who has now arrested the attention of these satiric playwrights.

Such a vain and shallow deceiver is the temperamental Mrs. Sadie Durand, who dangles one elderly and two "baby lovers" at the end of her string. Her daughter, Harriet, with all her 20 years of discretion, escapes from the enforced seclusion of the convent and rushes loyally in a motor car she has stolen to her parent's aid. "Mother's running wild and I've come home to look out for her," Harriet explains to the social secretary, the maid, the butler and even to the traffic cop who tries to intercept her.

How Harriet, as she was impersonated by Juliette Day, "looked out" for mother, as Mary Young acted her, is the story out of which the remainder of the Hattons' play is built. For a few brief moments, due to Miss Young's spirited tantrums as the "skinned, peeled, bleached" and otherwise made-over Mrs. Durand, "We Girls" promised to develop into

CARELESS SHAMPOOING SPOILS THE HAIR

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonsful of Mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

BILLIE BURKE IS BACK ON STAGE IN MOCKING ROLE

a mildly amusing satirical comedy. The promise, though, did not endure long. "We Girls" steadily lost its poise and lapsed into a provokingly incoherent and crudely mechanical farce.

Pretends to Be Aged.

His punishment comes in the humorous teasing and delightful mockery that Aunt Isabel keeps up during the succeeding acts, in which she tries to convince her much confused guest of years that she really cannot claim. How he attempts to dispel his doubts by the testimony of the family Bible, how he is detected redhanded in the search, and how finally his suspicions are allayed, are some of the subsequent humorous episodes of this gossamer comedy.

Nor has Mr. Tarkington failed to weave into his play, in the characters of the modern grandniece and her jealous sweetheart, his intuitive knowledge of the humors of adolescent and romantic youth. These characters are sketched with that same understanding and skill that were found in "Seventeen."

Miss Burke played all the phases of her role with the greatest charm, and with a constant and pretty sentiment concealed beneath its humorous surface. She has gained in delicacy of method, poise and finish.

Alfred Lunt, as the lawyer who took seriously his not-too-many years, gave a performance of equal quality. There was a sparkling performance also by Frances Howard as the supermodern hoyden, and another by Glenn Hunter as her resentfully jealous young sweetheart.

New Scarborough Play.

THE tale George Scarborough had in mind when his fountain pen last felt the dramatist's urge was about "Little Sunshine," the innocent and devout ward of a good, gray padre who presided over a mission close to the Mexican border of Arizona. He called his play "The Mad Dog," and an audience first made its acquaintance at the Comedy Theater Tuesday night.

When Scarborough took up the story of three crowded weeks in "Little Sunshine's" life, all the world was bright and she was radiantly happy. For had she not on that very evening given her heart to Jimmie Taylor, the mission trader? Shortly afterwards she had kissed Jimmy goodby, and he had gone in company with the padre to pay a visit to the distant bishop.

"Little Sunshine" was busy tidying up the mission, when the form of a scowling, grimy stranger appeared at the door. He was a fugitive, a convict, escaped from solitary confinement in a Colorado penitentiary, and he was wounded. "Little Sunshine" invited him in. She gave him food and bandaged the furrow that a bullet had ploughed in his forehead. He rewarded her kindness by cursing her, blaspheming the image of the Holy Virgin, and drinking the sacramental wine. Then he set out again on the rough road that lay toward Mexico and freedom.

But he came back. That same old "undesirable something" which romantic dramatists delight to talk about, drew him again to the mission and to her side. Many things then happened. But last of all "Little Sunshine" and the criminal she had reformed were seen hand in hand, headed for the Mexican border, while the padre, back in the mission, was telling funny stories to the Sheriff, who knew—sly old dog that he was—that he was permitting the escape of a fugitive for whose arrest a reward of $1000 had been offered.

There were other details in the play, but they do not matter. Most of them were about as reasonable as the contention that the moon is made of green cheese. The homely Western characters had a way of expressing their simplest thoughts in imagery that might stir the envy of a poet.

The audience turned for relief to Helen Menken, whose performance of "Little Sunshine" was effective and fine. Conway Tearle played the handsome fugitive from prison walls. William Harcourt was the Sheriff and Forest Robinson was the good gray padre.

Ed Wynn's Fun Shop.

A GENTLEMAN by the name of Ed Wynn has invented a noiseless soup spoon, a nickel-plated corn-on-the-cob appliance guaranteed to keep butter out of your ears, and an entirely novel coffee cup, with a trap hole in its bottom through which you may spill your coffee, instead of doing it in the plebeian fashion, that is, over the edge. He has invented something that opened the doors of the George M. Cohan Theater Monday night as a rip-roaring fun shop—a little racket store whose shelves are so filled with wit and kitling melody that this year's somewhat robust proprietor scarce finds time to make use of his thousand and one coats.

"The Perfect Fool" is in two acts, 18 scenes and as many laughs as you can finish in that time. Wynn appears before each separate act is uncovered and tells you precisely what it turns out not to be. In these scenes that rise through dra-

Are You Squeezed in the Vise of Exhausted Nerve Force and Iron Starvation?

Physician Says These Twin Monsters Are Daily Dragging Thousands Into the Torture Chambers of Ill Health, Wrecking Their Lives and Making Them Financial Failures.

YOU are born with just so much nerve force and your body can manufacture only so much each twenty-four hours. If you use it up faster than it is made through overwork, late hours, worry, too much excitement, grief, nervous strain or other excesses, your nerve cells become depleted of this life-giving fluid, and you are dragged into the torture chamber of neurasthenia, with all its nerve-racking, agonizing pains and anguish.

Your whole nervous system becomes "on edge," so to speak, and the least little thing upsets you. You may have an almost constant aching pain in the back of the head or neck, or an extremely disagreeable feeling of fulness in the front or back part of the head, which in some cases gets so bad that you feel almost as if your head would burst; there may be spots of local tenderness on the spine, pains across the back, heart palpitation, great weakness from slight physical or mental exertion, or sleeplessness at night; and the patient often complains that his thoughts chase one another through his head with lightning-like rapidity. Some break into profuse perspiration and suffer from such great devitalizing weakness that they feel as if they were almost chained to the ground. Headaches and extreme nervousness are very frequent symptoms, and most persons are moody, irritable and easily depressed.

A physician formerly connected with a New York City Hospital says thousands of persons suffer from depleted nerve force and iron starvation of the blood without ever suspecting the real cause of their trouble, and that often their health, lives and success are completely undermined and wrecked before they find out what is the matter with them. In cases of nerve force exhaustion in which your nerve and brain cells are starving for want of a sufficient supply of nerve force or nervo-vital fluid it is worse than foolish to waste your time taking mere stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs. Your nerve and brain cells must have nerve food or something to supply more nerve force the same as a starving person must have bread to build flesh and tissue. For centuries science has searched for a nerve food. At last a remarkable product was brought to the attention of the Paris Academy of Medicine by a celebrated French physician which contained the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. This remarkable product is today contained in Nuxated Iron so that you may now easily obtain what might almost be termed artificial nerve force almost by taking Nuxated Iron three times per day. Nuxated Iron does not contain mineral iron that forms rust in your stomach, but contains organic iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Organic iron enriches the blood and plenty of rich red blood means more nerve force, so that Nuxated Iron not only directly supplies the important chemical constituent of active living nerve force to the nerve and brain cells but it also stimulates the blood to manufacture a greatly increased supply of new nerve force.

Over four million people are using Nuxated Iron annually, and from the remarkably beneficial results which it has produced the manufacturers feel so certain of its surprising efficacy that they guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. Beware of substitutes, look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. For sale by all druggists.

Rheumatism

A Remarkable Home Treatment Given by One Who Had It

In the year of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Sub-Acute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who are thus afflicted know for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy but such relief as I obtained was only temporary. Finally I found a treatment that cured me completely, and such a pitiful condition has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, even bedridden, some of them seventy to eighty years old, and the results were the same as in my own case.

"I Had Sharp Pains Like Lightning Flashes Shooting Through My Joints."

I want every sufferer from any form of muscular and sub-acute (swelling at the joints) rheumatism to try the great value of my improved "Home Treatment" for its remarkable healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address, and I will send it free to try. After you have used it, and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of such forms of rheumatism, you may send the price of it, One Dollar, but understand I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer, when relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

AMERICAN WOLF MAKING LAST STAND IN WEST

Efforts to Exterminate Animal Have Greatly Reduced Number Living.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The wolf is gamely making his last stand in America. Bloody fanged from cattle growers' stock, and fighting for his existence against the best traps, rifles, poisons and hunters, he has been cut down in number, until today it is estimated by the United States Biological Survey that in the Western states, his last refuge, there are probably less than 500.

Hunters are fast getting his pelt. In Northwest Wyoming, Uncle Sam's hunters are now intensifying a drive to clean out what is believed to be a pack of less than 50. Since the drive began last spring 24 have been killed.

The old system of laying bounties on the heads of wild animals has been found after years of study and experience to be a failure, Dr. A. K. Fisher, in charge of economic investigations of the Biological Survey, says.

"Since 1890 millions of dollars have been spent on bounties," he declared, "and there has never been a case where the bounty did any permanent good."

The old bounty men, he charged, were in the game more for the money and the living they could get out of it, than for the purpose of ridding the country of wild animals. It was found, he added, that the bounty men after hunting a season, purposely would leave one or two pairs of wolves, to raise more wolves, for more bounties.

In the beginning of the Government's drive with paid hunters, Dr. Fisher further charged, some of the old bounty men proved unfit.

"Some of them would write up here saying if they could only have the fin of a shark, or the tip of a kangaroo's tail, they could surely lure game into their traps. That was all pure superstition."

Sorority Meeting at Lindenwood.

A round of social events at Lindenwood College is planned for the national council of the Phi Theta Kappa, at its annual meeting at the college, Nov. 29 and 30. This is an honor sorority among junior colleges for girls. Miss Louise Child, a senior at Lindenwood, is national president, but Lindenwood at this meeting will withdraw automatically from membership, because it has passed from the rank of junior to full four-year college.

BILLIE BURKE IS BACK ON STAGE IN MOCKING ROLE

perles of silks, Janet Velie's pretty face and voice come before you. The Nyakeo troupe play dreamy melodies; ponderous Mr. Wynn himself doubles as a circus acrobat in baggy tights; Guy Robertson sings the haunting "She Loves Me, She Loves Me Not," Flo Newton and True Rice cut up, and capering through it all are two dozen dimpled knees at a tempo quite amazing.

A Drama of Spain.

HORACE FISH'S book, "The Great Way," offers a very long story, with many angles and a sweep through both the old world and the new. As it has been adapted by the author and Helen Freeman into a four-act play, this story suffers in scope and, for such hearers as have not read the book, loses something of coherence. As presented at the Park Theater Monday night, nevertheless, it revealed distinctly interesting qualities.

The scenes of action in the play are all in Spain. Of the triumphs of Dulce on the opera stage in Italy, America, France and London, the audience gathers only stage hearsay. The Dulce behind the footlights appears first as a girl of the streets in Barcelona. She is seen awakening to the reality of love after meeting Jose Luis. Her vow of reparation is heard and she is shown on a part of her pilgrimage on foot across Spain. All at once she is the full-fledged prima donna of the Barcelona opera house; quickly follows her penitential ascent of Spain's holy mountain and her direct talk to God. All this forms a dramatic, tabloid version of the tale in the book.

Miss Freeman, well remembered for her recent success in "John Ferguson," is the Dulce of this new play. Her acting is almost sensationally effective. She has absorbed completely the complexity and the simplicity of her role; she gives voice eloquently to the romance, the yearning, the tragedy, the comedy, the ever-underlying pathos of Dulce. But in the task of interpreting Mr. Fish's story she is practically alone. A large cast of principals and walking people appears on the stage. Out of it comes one striking contribution to the acting—that of Marian Marcus Clarke in a fleeting moment's appearance as a gypsy fortune teller. "The Great Way" is presented with incidental music by Senor Julian Huarta.

INGROWN NAILS

Toe Nail Turns Out Itself if you Toughen the Skin

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensative skin underneath the toe nail, that it cannot penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost overnight.

"Outgro" is a harmless, antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

Piles Cured 10 Years Ago—Still Cured.

R. 1, Belleville, Ill., May 16, 1911.
Dr. W. P. Henrich:
Dear Sir:—When I called on you for treatment last January at your office, I was suffering with Internal Piles which had unfitted me for business and made life more or less a burden. I felt that I was in such a condition that something radical had to be done, and instead of wasting any more time with patent medicines and regular physicians, decided that I would submit to the treatment of a good Rectal Specialist, which I understood you to be. I dreaded the treatment more than I can say and was most agreeably disappointed, finding it very mild and so effective that I improved from the very start.

Thanks to your skill and careful attention, I am today a well man without a trace of my former troubles. Your work for suffering humanity has proved a blessing to hundreds and I most gratefully indorse your method. No knife is used and the cure is perfect and permanent.

Yours very truly,
JOHN H. CLARK.

MME. GADSKI TO SING HERE WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Soprano Will Be Soloist at Benefit Concert Given by the St. Louis Massenchor.

Mme. Johanna Gadski, Wagnerian soprano, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Co., will be the soloist at a concert to be given Wednesday night at the Coliseum by the St. Louis Massenchor, an organization of nearly 1000 singers. The proceeds will be devoted to the St. Louis Provident Association, the St. Vincent de Paul Society and the St. Louis Children's Aid Society.

Mme. Gadski has not sung in this city for several years, her last appearance having been as soloist with the Symphony Orchestra. Her retirement from the public eye, dating from war days, was ended recently when she gave a recital in New York.

The Massenchor, under the direction of Hugo Anschuetz, was organized last February for the purpose of giving a concert for the benefit of starving children in Germany and Austria. The concert took place on May 18 and proved such a success that it was decided to make the organization a permanent one. Its membership includes representatives of 33 singing societies, besides 150 vocalists, who do not belong to any society, but have taken this opportunity of obtaining choral practice.

Otto J. Gosrau, president of the organization, says that its purpose is to give two concerts each season, in the fall and spring, for the benefit of some recognized charity. At Wednesday night's concert, Frank Gecks will direct an orchestra of 75 members of the Symphony Orchestra. The program is announced as follows:

Mme. Gadski's numbers will be the "Slumber" aria from "Der Freischuetz," and the "Love-Death" scene from "Tristan und Isolde." The entire chorus and orchestra will open the concert with the "Apotheosis" scene from "Die Meistersinger," and close it with selections from "Mendelssohn's unfinished opera, "Die Lorelei." These will be "Ave Maria," for women's voices and solo; "Vintagers' Chorus," for male voices, and a grand finale, for mixed voices and solo.

The women's chorus will sing the "Spinning Song" from "Der Fliegende Hollaender." The male chorus will sing, without accompaniment, Duerrner's "Invocation," Gluck's "In a Cool Vale," Foster's "My Old Kentucky Home" and "Dixie Land," Wohlgemuth's "Like Home," and a Suabian folksong, "Maedele Reich."

Other officers of the Massenchor are:: George Scharlott and George Voges, vice presidents; George Withum, corresponding secretary; Ernst Freund, recording secretary; Joseph Hoerr, financial secretary, and John Gewinner Jr., treasurer.

Eczema Caused Years of Intense Agony

"I have suffered intense agony from eczema on my leg and other parts of my body for years, and received only temporary relief from other preparations. It is only a month since I started to use PETERSON'S OINTMENT, and there is no sign of eczema or itching. You can refer to me."—Geo. C. Talbot, 27 Penfield street, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I've got a hundred testimonials," says Peterson of Buffalo, "just as sincere and honest as this one. Years ago, when I first started to put out PETERSON'S OINTMENT, I made up my mind to give a big box for 60 cents, and I am still doing it, as every druggist in the country knows.

"I guarantee PETERSON'S OINTMENT because I know that its mighty healing power is marvelous. I say to every one who buys a box that it is rigidly guaranteed for eczema, salt rheum, old sores, blind, bleeding and itching piles, ulcers, skin diseases, chafing, burns, scalds and sunburn, and if not satisfactory any druggist will return your money." Mail orders filled by Peterson's Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by Judge & Dolph, E. A. Medler, Enderle Drug Co., and Wolff-Wilson Drug Co.

RHEUMATISM LEAVES YOU FOREVER

Deep Seated Uric Acid Deposits Are Dissolved and the Rheumatic Poison Starts to Leave the System Within Twenty-Four Hours.

A— and every druggist in this county is authorized to say to every rheumatic sufferer in this vicinity that if two bottles of Allenrhu, the sure conqueror of rheumatism, does not stop all agony, reduce swollen joints and do away with even the slightest twinge of rheumatic pain, he will gladly return your money without comment.

Allenrhu has been tried and tested for years, and really marvelous results have been accomplished even in the most severe cases, where the suffering and agony was intense and piteous, and where the patient was helpless.

Allenrhu relieves at once. Immediately after you start to take it the good work begins. It searches out the uric acid deposits, dissolves the secretions and drives rheumatic poison out of the body through the kidneys and bowels.

It's marvelous how quickly it acts. Blessed relief often comes in two days, and even in cases where the suffering is most painful all traces disappear in a few days.

Mr. James H. Allen, the discoverer of Allenrhu, who for many years suffered the torments of acute rheumatism, desires all sufferers to know that he does not want a cent of anyone's money unless Allenrhu decisively conquers this worst of all diseases, and he has instructed Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 4—Judge & Dolph Drug Co.—4, Johnson Bros. Cornell Wood Board comes already Primed for painting

You will save the work and expense of a priming coat if you build your walls and ceilings of Cornell Panels instead of ordinary wallboard, plaster board or plaster. For Cornell comes "Mill-Primed." And no other wallboard has its fashionable "Oatmeal Finish" which has placed Cornell in highest favor with thousands of builders.

Cornell is rigid and fire-resisting, due to our "Triple-Sizing" process which gives this board triple the ordinary protection against moisture, expansion, contraction, sound and change in temperature.

Easily put up with hammer and nails right to the joists and studding or over damaged plaster. Costs no more than inferior boards; get quotations and sample from the Cornell Dealers shown below.

THE PINK OF POLITENESS

BY W. E. HILL

If you have been brought up to remove your hat in an elevator full of beautiful ladies—well and good. Only, do be careful how and where you hold your hat. Profit by Mr. Gosling's experience—his snappy new soft gray hat is being badly crushed between two lady shoppers of the "Stylish Stout" tribe.

Lady being told something she isn't a bit interested in, and registering such polite interest.

"My dear, you must let me pay the fares this time: I've loads of small change!" But Gladys is politely insistent and screams "No! let me!" For hasn't she the exact change somewhere? (Mabel finally unearths four cents and Gladys six, so they pool their capital.)

Otherwise beautiful girl politely trying to stifle a yawn and still look sweet. Pretty soon she will have every one in the room yawning.

Two unhappy and awfully polite young tea hounds, both starting to say something at the same moment. There is a lot of "Beg pardon? No, you go ahead; what I had to say wasn't in the least important."

A boxload of jolly matinee girls getting settled for a nice afternoon. The lady seated at the left is explaining that, really, she loves sitting way back—doesn't mind a bit not seeing any of the stage, etc., etc.

"Now, Fanny, I've hardly touched this at all! You must let me put this on your plate!" Cousin Zoe and Cousin Fanny are being too polite for words over the white meat of one portion of broiled spring chicken in the station restaurant. And if Cousin Zoe succeeds in her more than generous impulse, Cousin Fanny is going to put it right back. "Really, Zoe," says Cousin Fanny, "I always prefer the neck and the drumstick."

The man who is always on the watch for dropped articles. Always politely running after some one who has dropped part of his newspaper. Even when the newspaper was dropped on purpose he makes you take it back.

ORCHESTRA THIS WEEK VISITS KANSAS CITY

Director Ganz to Lead Matinee "Pop" on Thursday, Evening Concert Friday.

Not the least remarkable of the season's innovations in the Symphony Orchestra is a series of five pairs of concerts to be given in Kansas City, the first two of which will be held at Convention Hall on Thursday afternoon and Friday evening of the present week. Save for today's and next Sunday's popular concerts, the orchestra will have a vacation in its home city until Nov. 25 and 26, when Yolanda Mero, pianist, will appear as soloist.

The Thursday matinee concerts in Kansas City, one each month, are designed especially for school children, with educational purposes in view. The program as announced for the first will approximate the caliber of the "pop" concerts in this city. The Friday evening concerts, one also each month, will be of the same grade as the regular programs in St. Louis.

H. Max Steindel, leader of the violoncello section, will be the soloist at next Thursday's concert, and will play Henry Hadley's "Elegie," the "Allegro appassionata" of Saint-Saens, and Popper's "Elfentanz." In honor of Carl Busch, for many years Kansas City's leading musician and composer, and at one time director of its symphony orchestra, Conductor Ganz has programmed one of his works, "Negro Carnival."

Other numbers will be Elgar's march, "Pomp and Circumstance;" the second movement, "Larghetto," from Beethoven's Second Symphony; Grieg's "Peer Gynt" Suite, No. 1; the "Pizzicati" from the ballet music of Delibes' "Sylvia," and the "Blue Danube" waltz of Strauss.

Kansas City Program.

Friday night's program will be a composite of the programs of the first two pairs of regular concerts given in this city. It is listed as follows:

Overture—Patrie ..... Biset
Symphony in E Minor, No. 5, Op. 64 ..... Tschaikowsky
I Andante; Allegro con anima.
II Andante cantabile.
III Valse: Allegro moderato.
IV Finale: Andante maestoso; Allegro vivace.
Prelude to Lohengrin ..... Wagner
Tone-Poem—Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks ..... Strauss
Prelude to The Mastersingers of Nuremberg ..... Wagner

Miss Anna Miller, manager of the Kansas City Symphony Orchestra Association, under whose auspices the series of concerts there will occur, attended the popular concert last Sunday at the Coliseum. She praised the local orchestra and predicted a highly successful season in Kansas City. Representatives of many St. Louis business and civic organizations are planning to attend the Friday concert, leaving here Thursday night. They are to be guests at a luncheon in Kansas City at noon Friday.

By request, there will be repeated at this afternoon's popular concert at the Odeon, the second movement of Beethoven's Symphony in D major, which was performed with such excellent effect last Sunday at the Coliseum.

Mrs. Carpenter Soloist Today.

The soloist will be Mrs. Helen Traubel Carpenter, soprano, who is a member of the quartet at Pilgrim Congregational Church. In a previous occasion she appeared with the orchestra on tour. One of her songs is by Mrs. Marguerite Fischel, wife of Dr. Willis Fischel, of this city, to a poem by George O'Neill, also of St. Louis. Another song, "Eventide," by Goldner, was dedicated to Mme. Vetta Karst, who is Mrs. Carpenter's teacher. The program, in detail, is as follows:

March—Pomp and Circumstance— Elgar
Larghetto, from Symphony in D Major, No. 2 ..... Beethoven
Aria—In quelle trine morbide, from Manon ..... Puccini
Suite—Algerienne ..... Saint-Saens
I Prelude.
II Rhapsodie Mauresque.
III Reverie du Soir.
IV Marche Militaire Francaise.
Prelude to Lohengrin ..... Wagner
Songs with piano:
(a) Tes Yeux ..... Rabey
(b) Eventide ..... Goldner
(c) Who Goes? ..... Fischel (Mrs. David Kriegshaber at the piano.)
Second Hungarian Rhapsody ... Liszt

At the regular concerts of next week, Miss Mero will play Liszt's Concerto in A Major, for piano and orchestra. The orchestral program will include Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony, Debussy's Prelude to "The Afternoon of a Faun," and Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel" tone-poem.

VIOLINIST WHO WILL APPEAR HERE IN RECITAL

FERENC VECSEY.

NOTED VIOLINIST TO GIVE RECITAL AT ODEON

Ferenc Vecsey to Play Stradivarius Once Owned by One of Napoleon's Generals.

Not since Jasha Heifetz has a violinist created such a furore as has Ferenc Vecsey, who will be heard in recital next Saturday night at the Odeon. He has been praised on all hands for golden tone, purity of pitch, and sensational technique; and he is described as being not merely a virtuoso, but a mature musician; and not only a musician, but a man of wide culture.

Information taken from J. Cuthbert Hadden's book, "Modern Musicians," is that Vecsey (pronounced "Valy-chi-ee") was born at Budapest, March 23, 1893, of a wealthy Hungarian family. His father, an excellent amateur, was his first teacher on the violin. He studied for a time with Hubay, and then at the Royal Hungarian Musical Academy in Budapest.

At the age of 10 he sought to become a pupil of Joachim, who at first refused, he having a violent dislike for child prodigies. But when he heard the lad play, he exclaimed: "I am 72 years of age, yet never in my life have I heard the like." Vecsey made his debut in Berlin during 1903, and toured the United States in 1907.

Three compositions of his own are included on the program, and one, a "Caprice," is said to be so difficult that it required a full year's study from the composer himself, before he could play it. The list follows:

Sonata for piano and violin..Franck
I Allegretto ben moderato.
I Allegro.
III Recitativo—fantasia.
IV Allegretto foco mosso.
(a) Melodie .....Gluck
(b) Praeludium e Allegro—
Pugnani-Kreisler
(a) Caprice No. 5, La lune glisse a travers les nuages (The moon glides through the clouds) .....Vecsey
(b) Pourquoi? .....Vecsey
(c) Badinage impertinant ...Vecsey
(a) Fantasie Moise, for the G string .....Paganini
(b) Caprice, No. 24 .....Paganini

Walter Meyer-Radon will serve Vecsey as accompanist. The violinist, it is promised, will use his famous Berthier Stradivarius, once owned by Marshal Berthier, one of Napoleon's Generals.

221 ST. LOUIS CHILDREN BEING CARED FOR IN OPEN AIR SCHOOLS

Night and Day Camp of Tuberculosis Society Discharged Ten in October as Cured.

Two hundred and twenty-one St. Louis children are now being cared for in the three open-air schools of the city, according to a recent report of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis. Of these 21 are at the residential open-air school maintained by the society in connection with its night and day camp at 9500 South Broadway, 175 are in the Taussig open-air day school, and 75 in the Natural Bridge open-air day school.

During Oct. 10 patients were discharged from the night and day camp as cured and seven admitted. The average stay in the camp is about two and one-half months.

The free employment bureau maintained by the society reported 14 persons placed in positions in October, a considerable increase over the preceding month. The service of this bureau is free to those who have attended night and day camp or the open-air schools, their families, members of families in which there is a tuberculosis history, and those who have arrested cases of tuberculosis.

Does Much Meat Cause Appendicitis?

Undigested Meat May Cause Rapid Growth of Poisonous Germs

Many people overfill the intestinal tract with more than they can digest. They eat hastily and do not chew the food properly. Thus solid lumps, especially of tough meat, are apt to pass through the stomach before the digestive fluids can act on them. These lumps then escape intestinal digestion by reason of their not being properly prepared in the stomach, and furnish a good breeding place for poisonous bacilli. These bacilli set up inflammation which may spread and bring on an attack of appendicitis.

A Treacherous Disease.

Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by so-called stomach trouble, constipation or similar disturbances. Often when there is a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against in exactly the same manner in which one guards against the spread of throat infection, because that is just what appendicitis is—an infection in the intestines spreading to the appendix. When one has sore throat, one can often prevent further trouble and the development of influenza or grippe, by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. Just exactly the same procedure is necessary to fight the intestinal germs and guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Prof. L. Hicks.

"I have found nothing in my 30 years practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. R. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

NEW EXHIBIT PORTRAYS LIFE OF JEANNE D'ARC

Series of Five Decorative Panels by J. W Fosdick on Display at City Art Museum.

An interesting new exhibit at the City Art Museum is a series of five decorative panels of large size portraying the life of Jeanne d'Arc, designed and executed by J. William Fosdick, a prominent decorator of New York City. The size of the panels, each being about 4 by 9 feet, has necessitated their installation in the large gallery at the right of sculpture court, where the richly carved, gilded and painted scenes, with their absorbing story interest, form a striking display.

Fosdick's work is already known to St. Louisans through the pretentious burnt wood panel representing Queen Elizabeth of England which he made some years ago for a French Renaissance mantel of carved wood owned by the St. Louis Museum. This panel is of simple technique, the outlines of the figure being formed of incised lines burnt into the surface of the wood, which has been left its natural color. But in the case of the five Jeanne d'Arc panels now on view, Fosdick has employed practically every device known to the decorator to enhance the richness of effect, the various details being carved, tooled or burnt, gilded, painted, and, in some instances, modeled in low relief.

Represented as Shepherdess.

The first panel of the series represents Jeanne d'Arc, the shepherdess, listening to the heavenly voices which bid her become the savior of France. Enraptured, she visualizes herself as an angel of deliverance clad in gleaming golden armor. The background of this, and of the other panels, is of antique gold, richly tooled and stained, a treatment which adds greatly to the decorative brilliance of the composition. The golden armor of Jeanne's vision, and certain other details, are modeled in slight relief so that they catch the glint of light from above.

The second panel depicts Charles VII, King of France, surrounded by his courtiers, soldiers and men-at-arms, triumphantly marching toward the royal coronation in the cathedral at Rheims (1429), a coronation made possible by the brilliant victory of Jeanne d'Arc at Orleans. Above the gorgeous procession waves the ancient oriflamme of France, on which is emblazoned the King's heraldic device, representing the invincible St. Michael in celestial glory.

On the third and central panel, Jeanne d'Arc is shown kneeling before King Charles VII during the coronation ceremony in the magnificent old cathedral of Rheims. About them is a colorful assemblage of Cardinals, Princes and high prelates of the church, the pomp and pageantry of royalty mingling with ecclesiastical symbols of ornate design. The rich medieval embroideries and brocades and the architectural accessories have been impressively rendered by the artist in terms of modern decorative art. Fosdick's peculiar treatment of these details, incising outlines and modeling portions in slight relief, catches and reflects the light in a most effective manner.

Entrance Into Orleans Shown.

The fourth panel shows the triumphant entry of the French troops, led by Jeanne d'Arc upon a richly caparisoned horse, into the beleaguered city of Orleans. The composition is so designed that it balances admirably the entry of Charles VII into Rheims, on the opposite side of the central panel.

The fifth and last panel depicts the glorification of Jeanne d'Arc. Here the Maid of Orleans is shown as a glorified vision at the center of a brilliant radiating halo. This magnificent halo, with its gleaming central figure, is one of the most masterly bits of design and color in the entire series. Beneath the vision of the martyred maiden kneel Bishops and Princes of the church, Kings and men-at-arms, in richly brocaded medieval garments, the patterns of which are incised and touched with gold so that they gleam with all the radiance of cloth-of-gold. A feature of the five panels is the band of rhythmically disposed scrolls which occupies the top portion of each composition. These scrolls form a background for the brilliantly emblazoned arms of the characters pictured in the stirring pageant below.

Other special attractions at the museum during the current month are a collection of 17 portraits by Colonial and early American painters, a group of 85 enlarged photographs of European and American cathedrals and two galleries of paintings from the private collection of William K. Bixby.

SINN FEIN REPRESENTATIVE TO SPEAK AT ODEON FRIDAY

Harry Boland, Who Was Here With De Valera Two Years Ago, to Address Irish Sympathizers.

Harry Boland, a representative of the Sinn Fein organization, will speak at a meeting to be held in the Odeon, Friday night, Nov. 25, under the auspices of 20 councils of the American Association for Recognition of the Irish Republic. Boland was here with Eamon de Valera two years ago, and spoke at the meeting held in the Coliseum at that time.

The Odeon meeting is to commemorate the deaths of the Manchester martyrs, and veterans of the Fenian uprising of 1867, living in St. Louis, are being invited to attend. Dr. R. Emmet Kane will be chairman and the Rev. Father P. J. O'Rourke will be temporary chairman. Miss Alice Brannigan is chairman of the Entertainment Committee, and John A. Burke is in charge of the Speakers' Committee, with M. J. Cullinane as director of arrangements.

Men Say CREMEOIL Is a Man's Soap

For the quick toilet before breakfast, in hot or cold water—for the refreshing shower or early plunge—for the hurried wash-up downtown—for the tired body after the day's work. CREMEOIL answers every need of personal cleanliness.

CREMEOIL is not only a man's soap, it is for every member of the family. Its quick forming, soluble lather cleanses thoroughly and gently, leaving the pores free and open. It is soothing and refreshing to the tenderest skin.

Made of Nature's most valuable cleansers—olive oil and cocoanut oil; pure, highly refined and fragrant with the blending of more than thirty perfumes. CREMEOIL is de-hydrated—it is all soap—no moisture. CREMEOIL wears to the thinness of a wafer without breaking or crumbling.

Castings are the Sinews Of a Furnace

CASTINGS are the part of a furnace that come in contact with the fiercest heat—that crack and wear out first in most furnaces. Cahill Furnaces excel because the castings in them excel. They are unusually heavy, thick and carefully fitted and finished. They will retain heat longer than most furnaces, thereby saving fuel, requiring less attention, and giving more uniform heating. The heavy Cahill castings are also more durable than castings less sturdily made. Examine the castings in a Cahill Furnace and you will agree that it is "built for long service and constant saving."

Cahill Pipeless Furnaces

The Cahill Furnace is the result of 40 years manufacturing experience, and embodies the same manufacturing ideals which have given to Cahill Grates and Fireplace Fixtures an enviable reputation for quality and dependability.

BIG SISTERS TO MAKE PLANS FOR PROTECTION OF GIRLS

Organization Befriended 189 in Last Year—160 Cases Now Booked.

Plans for protection of girls this winter will be made at the annual meeting of the Big Sisters of St. Louis at the Statler Hotel tomorrow afternoon. Suggestions on the 1922 program will be given by experts.

The Big Sisters, organized in 1917, safeguards young girls. In the past year 189 girls have been befriended.

There are now on the books of the organization 160 cases. All will be disposed of as individual needs dictate. Of more than 500 cases that have come to the attention of the organization in the five years of its existence, only those who have died have been stricken off. Mrs. Mary Ferris, executive secretary, says only a few of the girls have fallen into wrongdoing.

The meeting will be open to all who are interested. Addresses are to be delivered by Mayor Kiel, Judge Garesche of the Juvenile Court, Judge Hartman of the Circuit Court and Judge Calhoun of the Court of Domestic Relations. Miss Annie C. Gallagher, St. Louis policewoman, also will speak on the need of the work among the unprotected girls of St. Louis. Officers of the organization are: Mrs. G. V. R. Mechin, president; Mrs. H. Borders, first vice president; Mrs. J. P. Dubail, treasurer. Directors are: Mmes. F. C. Bielock, S. S. Pingree, F. A. Clifford and J. Scott Porter, A. W. Thias, C. H. Taylor and A. D. Nortoni.

SOLDIERS' APPEALS FOR RED CROSS AID INCREASING HERE

Mrs. Hammar, Explaining Needs, Says St. Louis Chapter Spent $140,000 in Relief Work Last Year.

HOSPITAL TOLL FROM GAS GROWING LARGER

Families of Disabled Men Taken Care of by Organization — Roll Call Will Begin Wednesday.

An explanation of the needs of the St. Louis Chapter of the Red Cross, with the reasons for the fifth roll call, was given yesterday by Mrs. Frank V. Hammar, chairman of the chapter. The national roll call began in many cities yesterday, but in St. Louis will start on Wednesday morning and continue until the evening of Nov. 23. The needs of the disabled ex-service man are to be especially emphasized here, and Mrs. Hammar states that the national Red Cross spent $10,000,000 during the past year for the disabled and wounded men, and in St. Louis alone $140,000 was spent.

"So many people ask why the Red Cross still needs money for the ex-service man, when the war is over," said Mrs. Hammar, "but the Red Cross is having more appeals every day as time goes on for the wounded and disabled veterans of the World War. In 1919 there were 3300 in the hospitals throughout the country; in 1920, 17,500, and last year there were 26,300 men; what the total will be for 1922 we cannot foresee. So many men who were gassed, and others whose hearts were affected by shocks, wounds, etc., did not show the full extent of their disability until some time after the close of the war. In addition, there are many who have developed tuberculosis."

Aids Soldier's Family Also.

"The Red Cross not only watches out for the welfare of the disabled man, but for his family as well. It is absolutely necessary at times for the Red Cross to provide for a family in order that they may have something to eat, or coal, or money for other immediate needs. Many a young mother whose husband is in a Government hospital, is cared for, and her baby clothes, doctor and nurse supplied by the Red Cross.

"Here in St. Louis, as in other cities, the Red Cross serves as a clearing house for the problems of the ex-service man, and his claims, his needs, his ills, his struggles are the main object of our appeal just now. Thousands of dollars in loans are made to the men who are waiting the arrival of compensation checks, and this is done in such a way that no man feels he is an object of charity. In the hospitals the Red Cross workers are giving the same Red Cross aid that was given during the war to men in active service."

Expect to Reach Peak in 1925.

"We are asked why the new Government Bureau, the Veterans' Bureau, does not immediately assume all this work. I was told just the other day by Surgeon-General Cumings of the United States Public Health Bureau, and Col. Forbes, national director of the Veterans' Bureau, that probably the peak of hospitalization of the veterans will not be reached until 1925. The new bureau is going to be a tremendously effective organization, and will combine all the present Government agencies dealing with the wounded and disabled veterans' relief, but it will probably be fully a year before it is able to function completely.

"In addition to the fifth roll call, with 'all you need is a heart and a dollar,' the St. Louis chapter will also have a finance campaign," said Mrs. Hammar, "the needs of the St. Louis chapter are so great that we feared it would not be possible to raise enough money to carry on the work for the coming year unless additional and larger subscriptions were also given. In addition the work of the chapter for the serviceman, of course the relief for disaster and accident victims goes on as in every chapter of the Red Cross, throughout the country. In the St. Louis district last year we aided the victims of 52 disasters."

All industries will be covered by R. Fullerton Place and Warren Flynn, with hundreds of captains and teams. The downtown district will be in charge of E. J. Burkley and Max H. McClure, and Mrs. George H. Capen has charge of the Woman's Division, assisted by hundreds of women of the various civic and relief organizations who will have booths in the department stores every day beginning Wednesday morning.

Memorial Tablet to Be Unveiled.

A memorial tablet bearing the names of the 325 men and women from the parish who served in the war will be unveiled at St. Rose's Church, Goodfellow and Maple avenues by the Young Men's Lyceum, assisted by the American Legion, at 3 p. m. today. Mayor Kiel and others will speak. The ceremonies will be preceded by a parade.

Mrs. Hale to Address Jewish Women

Mrs. Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale will address the St. Louis Section, Council of Jewish Women, at Temple Israel tomorrow afternoon, on "Women of the Future."

Real Raisin Bread

Add raisins to "the staff of life" and you have a perfect food

Stewed Raisins

Serve for breakfast every morning and get your daily iron this way

Cover Sun-Maid Raisins with cold water and add a slice of lemon or orange. Place on fire, bring to a boil and allow to simmer for one hour. Sugar may be added but is not necessary, as Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins contain 75 per cent natural fruit sugar.

Raisin Pie

Men are quickly refreshed at night by a dessert like this

2 cups Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins
2 cups water
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon corn starch
1 teaspoon sugar

Wash the raisins, put in saucepan with 1 cup cold water and bring slowly to a boil. Add sugar, salt and corn starch, which has been mixed with 1 cup cold water. Boil 2 minutes, add lemon juice. Pour in pie tin which has been lined with crust, while hot cover; brush top with cold milk and bake in moderate oven until brown.

Let Children Vote

Offer them plain bread or raisin bread. See which they select and why

Some day, soon, do this:

Offer raisin bread and plain bread—side by side—to your boy or girl.

Note how the little hand at once selects the bread with raisins.

The flavor first attracts them — they know the deliciousness of raisins.

Unconsciously they know too that those raisins are good for them.

Every normal child craves sweets naturally and should have them. Here are Nature's own sweets — the kind they should have—practically pre-digested and rich in vital iron.

The iron builds up healthy blood—lasting vitality for play or study.

Children need but a small lot of iron daily, yet that need is vital.

Other healthful foods sometimes must be forced on children.

Not so raisin bread. Children choose it for themselves. Just try and see.

SUN-MAID RAISINS

Use Sun-Maid Raisins, made from California's finest table grapes — American raisins, processed and packed immaculately in a great modern California plant:

Seeded (seeds removed); Seedless (grown without seeds); Clusters (on the stem). Also a fine ever-ready dessert.

Raisins are cheaper by 30 per cent than formerly — see that you get plenty in your foods.

How I Keep My Complexion Beautiful

By BESSIE LOVE
The Well-Known Actress

New York.—Any girl or woman can have a beautiful rosy-white complexion if they will follow this simple recipe: Get from any toilet counter a package of Derwillo and a tube of Liska cold cream, then before retiring cleanse the face, neck, hands and arms with Liska cold cream. Massage it well into the skin, then wipe off with a soft cloth. In the morning bathe the face with warm water, then rinse with cold water, dry thoroughly, and apply Derwillo to the face, neck, hands and arms. Use white Derwillo on the neck, chest, hands and arms, and flesh or brunette Derwillo on the face.

The moment Derwillo is applied you will have a complexion as beautiful as a rose and you will look ten years younger. A single trial will convince you of this fact. You cannot find anything better for dark, sallow skin, freckles, tan, sunburn, windburn, wrinkles, roughness, blackheads or discolorations of any kind. It leaves the skin soft, velvety and radiantly beautiful.

Bessie Love, that beautiful actress, says: "I have used Derwillo and Liska cold cream and find them very delightful preparations for the skin and complexion. They leave the skin in a condition highly satisfactory to beauty-loving women." Leading actresses and discriminating girls and women everywhere use and recommend this combination to their personal friends. Derwillo takes the place of face powder, is more life-like in appearance, and it "stays on." Perspiration does not affect, nor will it rub off on clothing. It is beneficial to any skin, and its use cannot be detected. Try it today before you forget it.

WARNING—Look out for substitutes. Since Derwillo has made such a phenomenal success it has many imitators, but you know counterfeits are never as good as the genuine article. Some even go so far as to offer double the quantity at the same or cheaper price. We could do this too if we used an inferior, cheap product. When you use DERWILLO you are assured of a safe, reliable beautifier that contains only the very best of pure, harmless ingredients. Remember, there is nothing "better," "just as good" or "just like Derwillo."

NOTE—After the very first application of Derwillo and Liska cold cream is sure to please you. They are on sale at toilet counters of department stores and druggists everywhere. If you give them a trial and you are not pleased, take them back and get your money. Thus you really get a free trial. Nothing could be fairer than this. You can get Derwillo and Liska cold cream in this city under these terms at the toilet counters of all department stores and druggists, including Wolf-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Johnson Bros. and the Ederle Drug Co.

"Why do so many doctors recommend Pluto Water?"

"Because of its prompt, reliable action—that's what my doctor told me the other day. He says that constipation is the forerunner of most sickness, and should always be relieved with the least possible delay. I find that Pluto invariably brings relief within an hour."

Bottled at French Lick Springs, Ind. Your physician prescribes it.

Santa Claus O K's The Free LIONEL Offer

Requests that we withhold Honor Roll publication, in some instances, of the names of boys to whom LIONEL Outfits have been awarded, betray the fact that Santa Claus was quick to see the value of the LIONEL as a source of Christmas joy, and demonstrates, too, that the jolly old St. Nick does his Christmas planning early.

Of course, such requests will be complied with, and the far-sighted parent, brother or sister whose enrollment of a potential "engineer" is in conspiracy with Santa need only make that fact known to insure the helpful co-operation of the POST-DISPATCH. 'Tis not too early to plan the joyful Christmas morning surprise this wonderful toy railroad will bring to the happy boy recipient. Nor is it difficult to understand that this juvenile railroad set—including locomotive, two cars, track and transformer, with an established retail value of $52.25—will be rated among the most highly-prized gifts that may come to any boy.

The name LIONEL stands for the best in juvenile railroad outfits. And the special LIONEL outfit offered free by the POST-DISPATCH is the best that bears that name. It is truly a

The outfit includes Locomotive, Pullman Car, Observation Car, 16 feet of track in 12 sections—straight and curved—and a transformer that supplies the electric current from an ordinary electric light socket, in just the right voltage for safe, low cost operation. The locomotive has two sets of drive wheels, each 2½ inches in diameter, connected in pairs and DRIVEN BY SEPARATE MOTORS.

The train length is 48½ inches. It is 4 inches wide and 6 inches high. The entire outfit weighs 21½ pounds. Unusually attractive in finish and sturdy in construction, it is truly a masterpiece among electric toy railroads.

Sample outfits are on display in the window of the Cunard Line offices, 1135 Olive St., and in the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Toy Dept. Actual Retail Value Is $52.25!

FOR A CONSTIPATED CHILD

A small dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will bring quick relief.

MOTHER, when one of the children is constipated are you going to give the first laxative within reach? It is dangerous to do so. Some have been known to rupture the intestines of little children. Don't be beguiled by the outside sugary appearance. Look into the formula. Calomel is seldom necessary; salts, minerals, coal tar, never!

Unlike these, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is admirable for children, as it is for grown people, too. Mothers have been giving it to children for 30 years. They know it does not gripe, and is free from narcotics. The formula is on every package, and you can see it is vegetable, just a combination of Egyptian Senna and other laxative herbs with pepsin. Use it yourself and you will find it is not necessary to take it every day, nor to increase the dose, and that it is pleasant to the taste. Bottles can be had at all drug stores, and the cost is only about a cent a dose. Have no hesitancy giving it to a baby in arms. It is absolutely safe.

Half-Ounce Bottle Free

Few escape constipation, so even if you do not require a laxative at this moment let me send you a Half-ounce Trial Bottle of my Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE so that you will have it handy when needed. Simply send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Write me today.

CAREFULNESS CONTEST BY SAFETY COUNCIL

Prizes to Be Awarded for Best Cartoons and Stories on How to Prevent Auto Accidents.

Because of the increase here in the number of automobile deaths during the last three months, during which 41 persons have been killed in motor vehicle accidents, the St. Louis Safety Council will conduct a poster-cartoon and "story" contest to begin tomorrow to stimulate carefulness in the streets. Seven cash prizes for the best posters, cartoons and editorials dealing with the general subject, "The Cause of Automobile Accidents and How to Eliminate Them," will be given.

The contest will continue for 10 days, closing Nov. 22. The council announces that all posters, cartoons or "stories" should be mailed to the St. Louis Safety Council, 511 Locust street. A prize of $20 will be given for the best cartoon or poster depicting the cause of an automobile accident; $5 for the second best cartoon or poster; $10 for the best "story" which editorializes the cause of an automobile accident, and $5 for the second best story on the same subject; $5 for the best "story" detailing an actual experience on "My Closest Call to Death in An Automobile Accident;" $3 for the second best letter on the same subject and $2 for the third best.

Reason for Competition.

The announcement made by the council, says in part:

"Through carelessness the number of automobile accidents, which often result in broken limbs and sometimes death, causing an economic as well as humanitarian loss to the city, in recent months have mounted steadily. For the month of October alone there were more than 1000 automobile accidents with 12 deaths. The property damage through these automobile accidents for October, not to mention the loss of lives, loss of time to those injured seriously or only slightly and the sorrow in many homes, amounted to approximately $50,000.

"Because of the record the city made last year in the number of automobile deaths St. Louis has gained prominence as the 'safest large city in the United States.' With the number of deaths mounting swiftly during the last three months this reputation is at stake.

"The council does not believe the average motorist is careless, or that the average pedestrian is heedless of danger. But the council does believe that cautiousness is not practiced by many motorists at all times or there would not be the casualty and accident record there is. There have been 83 auto deaths so far this year and if the ratio of increase in automobile deaths for the last three months were maintained the total number for this year on Dec. 31 would be greater than last year. There were a total of 102 persons killed in automobile smashups last year. The council has claimed for a long time that the majority of these deaths were avoidable, if someone would be more careful at the right time."

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN TO SEND EXPEDITION TO BRAZIL

Party Will Make Study of Wild Life Near Headquarters of the Amazon.

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 12.—A University of Michigan expedition into the jungles of Brazil to permit study of animal life in its relation to the theory of evolution, will leave for the South American country some time this month, it is announced by Dr. Alexander G. Ruthven, director of the University of Michigan museum. The expedition is to be financed by E. B. Williamson, bank president of Bluffton, Ind., and a naturalist of note.

The expedition will be headed by Prof. Jesse Williamson of Bluffton, cousin of the banker, who has accompanied several University of Michigan expeditions into the tropics. Both E. B. Williamson and his cousin are graduates of the University of Indiana.

This year's expedition will be the seventh that Michigan has sent into the South American tropics in recent years, and each of them has been dispatched in furtherance of the study of evolution. This year's expedition will seek to study distribution of various forms of animal life and the bearing of this distribution upon the evolution theory. Incidentally a large number of specimens are expected to be obtained for the university museums.

The Government of Brazil is cooperating with the university and has agreed to permit shipment of equipment for the expedition into the country without payment of duty. Facilities for members of the expedition to carry on their work also have been promised by the Brazilian Government.

The expedition will penetrate into Northwestern Brazil between the Rio Negro and the headwaters of the Amazon.

Aged, Wrinkled Faces Easily Rejuvenated

An aged face is often only a mask to a comparatively youthful person. Beneath is a countenance young and fair to look upon. It's a simple matter to remove the mask. Ordinary mercolized wax, to be had at any druggists, gradually absorbs the worn-out surface skin; in a week or two the user has the loveliest pinky white complexion imaginable. An ounce of the wax usually is sufficient to complete the transformation. It is put on at night like cold cream and taken off in the morning with warm water.

This remarkable treatment is invariably effective, no matter how muddy, sallow or disfigured the complexion. Chaps, freckles, moth-patches, liver spots, pimples and other cutaneous blemishes, naturally vanish with the disgraded skin.

To remove wrinkles, here is a recipe that cannot be too highly recommended: Powdered gaxolin, one ounce, dissolved in one-half pint of witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion. It acts immediately and is wonderfully effective.

SHAW PLAY AT ARTISTS' GUILD

"Pygmalion" to Be Presented Four Nights, Beginning Nov. 22.

Bernard Shaw's satirical drama, "Pygmalion," will be presented by the St. Louis Artists' Guild Players at the Guild Theater for four nights beginning Nov. 22, under the direction of Joseph Solari. There are five acts in which is depicted the transformation of a little Cockney flower girl to a great lady, the efforts of a modern scientist in his Pygmalion task of awaking the finer instincts of the girl making a most interesting five-act play.

Gertrude Walther will have the role of the flower girl, and Montgomery Anderson will play her rescuer, Col. Pickering. Others in the cast include Hazel Ewald, Mrs. William Hammond, Mildred Carpenter, Amy Isaacs, Frank Sumerville, Gordon B. Sommers, Max Muench and Felix C. Rozier. Laurence Ewald is stage manager, and Mrs. Emily Phelps has charge of the stage decorations. The sale of seats will open tomorrow at the Baldwin Piano Co., 1111 Olive street.

Mississippi Barge Line Earns $257,000 More Than Operating Expenses in Five Month Period

First of Government Business Ventures Started During the War That Has Made Money.

By CLARK McADAMS,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff—Written for the Manufacturers' Record and Reprinted by Special Arrangement.

IN five months of this year, from April to October, the Government barge line on the Lower Mississippi River earned $257,000 more than its operating expenses. It has the distinction of being the only business enterprise in which the Government engaged during the war that made money. In 1852, when the Mississippi was at the height of its golden age, 3149 steamboats docked at St. Louis. Their average carrying capacity was 26 tons. The Government barge line, moving fleets of 10,000 tons capacity each, has handled more freight in and out of St. Louis on the river this year than was handled by all the 3149 steamboats of 1852. Of grain alone more than a million bushels went down the river for export in August. Had the barges and towboats been available, there might have been a sailing every day for the 60 days through which the grain movement was at its greatest volue. Wheat is worth three cents a bushel more to farmers in the Middle Mississippi Valley by reason of the barge line saving in transport to Liverpool.

There has been some debate as to who lost the late war, but to the people in the Mississippi Valley it was clearly a defeat for statistics. Except for the war, statistics had always been able to establish the impracticability of reviving traffic upon these rivers. For 50 years their reign was absolute. Congress believed in them. In contemplation of them private capital was terrified. Before this mighty enemy of the inland waterways the business men of Chicago, the Twin Cities, St. Louis, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Louisville, Kansas City, Omaha, Memphis and New Orleans, all needing the rivers, capitulated without firing a shot.

Killing Statistics.

It took a world war to kill statistics, but thank heaven they are dead. Out of their long reign of terror emerges the Government barge line on the Lower Mississippi River, which is actually making money. This belies statistics. It is against everything that everybody has been led to believe. When the Government barge line began operating as an aid to railroad congestion during the war it encountered widespread disbelief. People somehow thought that what the Goernment was trying to do was to revive old times upon the Mississippi. They thought of river traffic in terms of picturesque paddle-wheel boats peopled by singing darkies, hand-tailored pilots and immaculate gamblers in shining silk hats. They associated it in their minds with the celebrated race between the Natchez and the Robert E. Lee. These memories of the river were much too definite to give way to a conception of twin-screw towboats, steel barges and docks equipped with mechanical carriers and gantries. No such things had ever been seen upon the river, and, thanks to Mark Twain, the old picture prevailed. When anybody wrote about reviving river traffic the editors, who knew this picture well, illustrated the story picturesquely with these old steamboats surmounted by quaint, ringed stacks and good group drawings of musical roust-abouts.

Lost Money but Gained.

This powerful tradition the Government barge line had to combat. It had also to combat a current of four miles an hour over 1150 miles of river between New Orleans and St. Louis. It had to build its equipment. Fortunately, statistics had gone away to the war, never to return. Except for that, service on the Lower Mississippi would have been short-lived. As things turned out, it had time to prove itself. It had time to build up a rate structure covering the watershed of the Mississippi and its tributaries. It had time to begin the construction of modern dock facilities. It lost money, but it was gaining, and when the war was over the statistics did not come home, the Mississippi Valley awoke to a realization that the thing could be done.

The Government barge line enjoys a differential of 20 per cent under railroad rates. It has joint rail and water rates to and from points remote from the river. A transportation line is like a tree. It cannot stand without far-reaching roots. No prior attempt to revive traffic upon the Mississippi had enjoyed this facility. That is the chief reason why all such attempts have failed. Another reason was that the railroads were permitted to make rates upon lines paralleling the river which drove the steamboats out. The Esch-Cummins law gives the Interstate Commerce Commission power to forbid this. Thus for the first time in 50 years river transportation is related to rail

Yes, children's clothes, too, are smarter and less expensive with the Deltor
GAY little frocks to dance around the Christmas tree! School clothes that combine practicality with just the proper air of youthful swagger! Clothes as dainty and light as snow-flakes, for the winter-baby!—the clothes you think of when you think of children—and all of them obtainable for less money than was ever possible before!
Because of the wonderful Deltor accompanying every Butterick pattern and especially planned for each individual pattern, you can make even the tiniest garments of less material than ever before. You save the price of the pattern always—and on just one frock for yourself, you can effect a saving of 50c to $10!
Yet economy is but one of the Deltor's purposes. This invaluable picture-guide shows you, also, how to make little clothes such as the exclusive children's shops display. It enables you to embody in every little frock or coat the smartness that gives even children a sense of well-being.

Butterick Designs 3377-3380
Go to the Butterick pattern counter. And whether you select a child's style or one for yourself, remember that the Deltor specifies ⅛ to 1⅛ yards less than would otherwise be possible—a saving of 50c to $10 on every frock for yourself.
The DELTOR
Saves 50c to $10 on materials for a gown for yourself
First, the Deltor gives you an individual layout chart (yes, an individual chart—not just a general chart, but one for your exact size and for each suitable width of material). You lay out your pattern—the expert's way. You buy ⅛ to 1⅛ yards less material on every garment, a saving that amounts to 50c to $10 on a gown for yourself!
Then, the Deltor gives you picture-and-word illustrations of just how the professional would put together the garment on which you are working. You sew swiftly and accurately and whether you are making a pair of bloomers or a frock, the Deltor for that particular garment guides every stitch.
Finally, as the little garment nears completion, precious secrets of finish are revealed to you—how to finish the neck, how to work the scallops, how to bind the buttonholes—important touches evolved for the garment you are making. The little garment reveals all the artlessness of childhood.

BARGE LINE EARNS $257,000 OVER EXPENSE IN FIVE-MONTH PERIOD

transportation upon a lower cost basis.

This is the secret of the excess above operating expenses made this year by the Government barge line operating between St. Louis and New Orleans. It explains the expectation that what is true of the Lower Mississippi is soon to be true of the Upper Mississippi, the Missouri, the Ohio and the Illinois Rivers. Water transportation is cheaper than rail transportation. The Mississippi barge line saved shippers, from April to October, $175,000. It is an economic necessity, want of which all the cities in the Mississippi Valley have suffered in competition with the cities which have cheaper transportation of bulk freights by water. That is why the Mississippi Valley wants to use its inland waterways. It has had its lesson, and the war has given it an opportunity to prove its case. The Government barge line on the Lower Mississippi went over the top in April of this year, when it made an operating profit of $50,000, with only one of its modern 1800-horsepower towboats in commission. Since then it has steadily made money. Four of the towboats are in commission, and the remaining two will be delivered this winter. The total river tonnage at St. Louis in 1852 was 844,951. The capacity of the new barge line fleet next year will be 1,500,000 tons.

Illinois Spending $30,000,000.

Shippers in the Mississippi Valley have been watching the Government experiment with growing appreciation of what it means. They no longer doubt its benefits to them. They are discovering that it removes the disadvantage which they are under in competition with coast cities. St. Louis and Chicago can compete with the Eastern seaboard for trade on the Pacific Coast when they can ship by water; they cannot do it when the seaboard is shipping by water and these inland cities are shipping by rail. Most of the freight going downstream from St. Louis comes from points north of St. Louis, just as most of that coming upstream goes to points beyond St. Louis. Chicago is the heaviest patron of the barge line. The shipper saves money, and when he saves money he is not hard to find. When the Government was induced to establish this service the representation was made that freights upstream would not be less than 50 per cent of those downstream. Experience has shown them about equal. Grain is the largest item of south-bound freight; molasses, oil, sugar and sisal are the principal freights northbound. There are two sailings a week out of St. Louis and New Orleans. As confidence in the regularity of these grows the volume of freight increases.

This has been a revelation to the valley, where statistics had left the rivers unused; where industry and commerce had long fought an unequal fight, and where cities which had been made by the rivers had seen themselves outstripped by cities on used water. This is why we want to use the inland waterways. It is why Illinois is spending $30,000,000 to connect the Illinois and Chicago Rivers. It is why St. Louis is building modern docks equipped with freight-handling machinery. It is why New Orleans, once the second American port, is building facilities with which to retrieve her former place. It is why Memphis has voted a bond issue for river terminals. It is why the Mississippi Valley Association has been organized to fight the battles of the valley in Congress. It is why everybody from Pittsburg to Denver, and from the Twin Cities to New Orleans, is glad that statistics are dead.

Nobody in the Mississippi Valley believes that the Government is going to continue this operation. It is only proving that the thing can be done. When that is proved the Government will doubtless dispose of its fleet to private interests, which will extend the service to the Upper Mississippi, the Ohio, the Missouri and the Illinois. There was a foundation to be laid, and only the Government could lay this foundation. Private interest scould not establish the rate structure which the river enjoys. They could not compel the railroads to grant joint rail and river rates. The Government could do these things, and it has done them. It has opened the way to private investment, to the construction of boats and barges and to the operation of fleets upon all these great inland waterways.

Statistics made a plain case against all this. They postulated the innumerable failures of private enterprise to revive river traffic at a time when there was no rate structure to feed the river, no relation of river traffic to rail traffic and no way in which to keep the railroads from making cut-throat rates destructive to boat lines. They advanced the fallacy that there is not enough depth in the rivers for the operation of boats, and they intimidated the valley with warnings of ice and fogs. Even storms were conjured up before the Inland Waterways Commission as a reason for disallowing the petitions of the valley to put the rivers to work during the war. Then statistics went to the war, themselves, and in the war were slain.

No indemnities are being asked by the people who live in the Mississippi Valley. When a bugaboo falls there is only relief and gladness, and the usual dickering over damages is happily avoided. The damage statistics did along the Mississippi and its tributaries is incalculable. Not even statistics themselves could do it justice. It is not merely that boats had virtually all disappeared from these streams, but that their disappearance had come to be accepted as proof that the usefulness of the rivers had ended. Twenty-five years ago there were many barges and boats still in use on the Mississippi, but the business was then stricken. The railroads were everywhere meeting water rates, regardless of the cost of rail service, and public belief that the railroads could be expanded to meet any emergency encouraged the railroads to fight for the business of the barges and boats. No one felt any particular anxiety about the future of these rivers. The railroad men laughed at the wheezing old boats and their choral crews. They said they could give a better service for less money, and as they proceeded to haul the freight at barge rates no shipper was concerned to find out whether the railroads lost or gained by it.

Railroad Rates Trouble.

The waterways were gradually abandoned and the railroads tried to keep up with the growth of the country and provide for the great increase in traffic which came to them year by year. It was hard. It seemed to some of the great railroad men to be impossible, and these few singularly tried to use the waterways to help out. Ten years ago the late James J. Hill said the railroads had reached the limit in their economics and seriously discussed making the standard gauge of the railways six feet. He made some startling figures of the capital the railroads must expend from year to year to keep abreast of the traffic. People did not believe him then. Statistics held the field. They even went to the length of trying to prove at one time that the Soo Conal was an economic loss, but no transportation expert carries prominently in his library now the book in which that fearful equation was worked out.

It was hard for the railroads to keep their rates lo wwhere there was a waterway capable of use and make them high where there was none. But they had to do this to make revenue enough to exist. It was clear to those who knew the facts that the interior must pay high rates if the railroads were to carry freight between river communities at the rates at which the barges would take it, so they charged high for short hauls and low for long hauls between the cities which were on

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

NOW AS NEVER BEFORE YOU NEED THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA

The Britannica Goes Hand in Hand With the Awakened World

WHAT has been the lasting heritage of the war? In brief, a nation of keener thinking, knowledge-demanding people. The war had a profound effect on the 100,000,000 inhabitants of this country. It carried their interests from the town or city in which they live across the water into foreign countries, to every part of the world. They became no longer content to know only their neighbor across the street, but they wanted to learn of their neighbors in all nations of the earth. The war created in the people a thirst for knowledge, world wide in compass. The war instilled in the people the habit of thinking broadly in world wide terms, of wanting information on subjects they never dreamed of before, of thinking more deeply on the problems of the day. Over the two and a half years since the war, during the political, social, economic adjustment in this country, this habit of the people has grown stronger and stronger until today there has never been manifest such eagerness among the people for knowledge—knowledge on every conceivable subject under the sun.

Where can people find the means to satisfy this demand for knowledge? The greatest reservoir of knowledge in existence—authoritative and comprehensive—is the Encyclopaedia Britannica, the most widely known, the most reverenced—the resource of thousands of men and women, seekers of knowledge in every generation for a century and a half. It is the book of the hour to satisfy the increased demand for knowledge by the awakened people of today.

Are You Keeping Abreast of the Times?

Today as never before the man and woman needs every ounce of knowledge he or she can obtain in order to cope with the present business, political, social and economic readjustment. Business particularly has been facing new and strange conditions, endeavoring to get back to a normal basis. In this tremendous readjustment it has been the men with the broad foundation of knowledge who, as executives and workers in our industries, have been able to take the responsibility and have risen speedily to positions of greater power and greater remuneration. To the business man, manufacturer, the worker in the industries, the Britannica will furnish information of practical, helpful and comprehensive character, and furnish a knowledge which will give to the man broader insight into his work and the problems of today.

The Britannica the Best Investment

The man who holds his job today during this readjustment period is he who is particularly fitted for his work, the man who knows more than his fellows. Knowledge is always above par in the market and the easiest commodity in the world to sell, as an employer will gladly pay your price if you have the knowledge to deliver. An investment in the Britannica will pay you many times over in dividends of knowledge, pleasure and satisfaction.

The Most Authoritative Work in the World

The Britannica has had a long and enviable career, and has grown in authority and esteem from generation to generation until it occupies the position today as the great reference book, ahead of any other in any country or any language. It has had as its contributors a host of the greatest experts in the entire world throughout the 150 years of its existence. When you read an article in the Britannica, therefore, you feel confident that the information is reliable and authoritative, for the Britannica is the product of the wisest minds of the day, each a great specialist in the particular subject on which he is furnishing an article in the Britannica.

The Britannica discusses in a way that you can understand every branch of science, industry, literature, art, religion, inventions and engineering, history and race development, war and peace, architecture, astronomy, chemistry, sociology, education, steam, electricity, geology and geography, biography, law and physics. You and your family will find in the Britannica a liberal education. You will be surprised how interesting and fascinating are the articles in the Britannica and you will have many hours of recreation and pleasure from a set of this great work.

What Is to Come?

How shall America readjust her industrial conditions? Is the present League of Nations likely to succeed? Will the cost of living fall abruptly? Will wages continue high? Is the fall of the Bolshevist regime in Russia imminent? Will Germany fulfill its treaty obligations?

By means of the extraordinary articles in the Encyclopaedia Britannica on economics, industries, politics, government, labor and capital you will be able to obtain a clear insight into the problems of today. The Britannica will aid you to understand such timely topics as prohibition, suffrage, tariffs, currency, waterways, transportation and government ownership.

A Means of Self Development—A Home University

In placing the Eleventh Edition before the public, the Press of the University of Cambridge announced: "The Eleventh Edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica is now offered to the public by the University of Cambridge in the hope and belief that it will be found to be a trustworthy guide to sound learning, and an instrument of culture of world wide influence." Seldom has a hope been so quickly and completely realized. Thousands of owners have already found the Britannica an indispensable means of self education. An instructor at Princeton has written that the Britannica has become the "collection of books" which Carlyle might term "the true university;" a teacher in a business college that "by its purchase I have secured access to a university education;" the president of an insurance company that "universally possessed it ought to educate the race. It is the people's university."

What the Britannica Will Do for You

The Britannica will stimulate you to improve your education whether or not you've had a college education. It will furnish you with a teacher of any subject you wish to study—a teacher who is master of his subject and tells what he knows in clear, simple language—a teacher who is always at your command.

It will give you the answers to the thousand and one questions that the morning paper, sermons and books prompt in every active mind. It will make everything you see, read and hear more interesting.

It will enable you to lay out a plan of education for your children and keep abreast with their studies.

It will insure you against loneliness and isolation, even if you live on a remote ranch, by giving you the companionship of congenial minds.

It will give you the history of every country in the world, every race, every city and the lives of all the men and women who have left their mark upon the world.

It will tell you more about every city, town, mountain range, lake, sea, desert, river, and every other place of interest than you would learn by visiting them.

It will serve as a guide to the literature of every country; it will cultivate your appreciation of music and fine arts; it will explain the sciences to you. It will increase the efficiency with which you perform your duties—whatever they are.

FAMOUS OLD RECIPE FOR COUGH SYRUP

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap, but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, unsually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c.

DANDRUFF SURELY DESTROYS THE HAIR

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

BARGE LINE EARNS $257,000 OVER EXPENSE IN FIVE-MONTH PERIOD

the waterways. This was troublesome, for it was against the law. The interior communities were angered, and they invoked the law. There was something in the law about "similar circumstances and conditions." The railroad men convinced the courts that the presence of a navigable stream set up a condition of competition which was not similar and gave them the right to charge as low as the cost on the rivers. But the interior of the country is the biggest part of it, after all. The people there disagreed with the courts. They had the law changed so the railroad men could not any longer act as judges of what circumstances justified them in charging high rates where there was no waterway and low rate where there was. They changed the law so as to make the Interstate Commerce Commission the judge. Then the railroads were told by the commission to show it all the places where their rates violated the law. The railroads brought nearly all their tariffs to the commission, and the thing was so huge that after 10 years it is not yet nearly straightened out.

Roads Feared Boats.

The commission had, of course, to try and fix up the mess so the people of the interior and those living on waterways would all be satisfied, and it seemed to feel that it could not do anything which would cause any of the railroads to carry less freight. It is true that Congress had not in a long time passed any laws, which made the commission feel that the country was interested in seeing that boats and barges on the rivers had an opportunity to live and grow. At any rate, the commission said it could not regulate the water rates. The boats had cut their own throats, and anyway, it was none of the commission's business. It had enough work to keep the railroads straight.

"But you can't haul freight at the low rates you are making to these river towns," the commission said to the railroads. "You must be charging very high rates between these interior points—higher than the service warrants."

"We know it; but if we raise our low rates the boats will take the business, and then we will have to charge higher rates between the interior points to make up the same amount of revenue," said the railroads.

"But there are no boats to carry the business; they are all gone," the commission protested.

"True," answered the railroads, "but they used to run 10 years ago and make these rates. The rivers are still there. If we raise these rates the boats will come back, and we don't want them to come back."

"How very perplexing," said the commission. "What is to be done about it?"

Thus appealed to, the railroads bestirred themselves in their own behalf. They invoked statistics—the cold, the unassailable. They evolved a theory. It had the form of logic, and it was logical. It defied argument. Only time and the war could prove how vulnerable it was. They said:

"We have plenty of railroads to handle all the business.

"We can run more engines and cars over our roads than the business now requires. (Mind, they never said there were plenty of engines and cars. That was left to inference.)

"Whether we handle much or little, the railroad is built. It has got to pay interest and other carrying charges, and we have to keep it in good repair or we cannot safely handle passengers.

"The rates at which the boats and barges handled freight on the rivers will not pay all these costs; but we believe they will pay the cost of running the trains, with a little left to keep up the tracks.

"If we do not carry the freight at the barge line rates we will not have this little more to keep up the tracks. We will have to get it by raising rates in the interior, which you say are already too high.

"So no matter how low we have to go to take this business from the barges, if it pays the out-of-pocket cost we should be permitted to make the rates and not compare them with rates we must make in the interior to maintain our equipment and pay out interest and overhead. There can be no fixed relation between the two transactions."

Statistics Again Win.

Statistics won. That was nearly 10 years ago. War found this rule of reason still the main tenet of our system of railroad rates. This picture covers the storm center of railroad rate history over a period of 30 years. During all this time there was continued what seemed a hopeless fight to revive water transportation. It was led by those who knew the economies of such service when properly equipped. The best these efforts secured was a halting policy of channel improvement on some important rivers which finally got itself styled "pork." This euphemism was coined by the railroads, who also adroitly coupled up reasonable expenditures for channel improvements promising a return with postoffice buildings in isolated communities where there was no gain to be derived beyond the gratification of local pride. However, in this period a good nine-foot channel between St. Louis and New Orleans on the Lower Mississippi was dredged and well protected and marked.

Then the war came and the railroads broke down. They proved that they were not equipped even for normal business. To save them from bankruptcy and utter collapse the Government took them over and began their unified operation. In rapid succession two horizontal increases in freight rates were made—first 15 per cent and after the commencement of Federal control another 25 per cent on top of that. Beyond this, it was apparent that the railroad plant was not nearly large enough to handle the nation's business. It was equally true that it could not be quickly expanded. Those who had framed the logic of past railroad policy found their logic suddenly overthrown by facts. There probably were railroads enough, but there the argument broke down. There were not enough engines and cars, not enough passing tracks, yards, roundhouses, coal and watering stations. Terminals were lacking, and the yards were not big enough to classify the trains. There was not enough of any single thing except main lines, and traffic was unevenly distributed over those.

It was then that the Mississippi River, which DeSoto was thought to have discovered forever, was rediscovered. The railroads had broken down. But the river was still there, and thanks to the people who had remained undismayed by the cries of "Pork," the channel was in better condition than when the river was abandoned 25 years ago. Some $8,000,000 was expended for equipment to put the Mississippi River in use between St. Louis and New Orleans. There was the usual criticism of ex-

SPECTACULAR CLAIMS MADE FOR A NEW AUTOMOBILE INSTRUMENT

At the Automobile Show in St. Louis, Oct. 15 to 22, 1921, thousands of people witnessed demonstrations of the TEL-AUTO-SPARK. Professors, scientists, electrical engineers, ignition experts, garage men and 18-to-25-year know-it-alls questioned its ability. One hundred per cent of these mentioned, including the general public, claim it is the biggest money and time saver, claim it is out of the ordinary, simple to understand, and claim it is the most beautiful instrument designed for the automobile.

As you read the following claims—

DON'T SAY IT WON'T DO IT—IT WILL.
DON'T SAY IT CAN'T DO IT—IT HAS.

The predominant features of the TEL-AUTO-SPARK are:

The TEL-AUTO-SPARK will teach a person who has never owned an automobile in five minutes more than the average man knows who has driven a car for several years.

It will enable the same person to spot any trouble at a glance without leaving the wheel and will tell when a cylinder misfires and the exact cause of the misfiring—whether it is spark plug, spark plug points set too far apart, short or open circuit in high tension or primary wires, bad coils, bad timer, or what-not in any particular cylinder circuit.

It will tell whether the wires from the battery or magneto are connected properly—whether there is trouble in the switch on the instrument board and also tell the compression of the cylinder according to the strongest—next, next and last the weaker.

It will enable you to make minor repairs without any expense whatsoever.

Through a newly discovered wireless resistance principle—something new and unheard of in automotive engineering—the carburetor can be adjusted scientifically by the ordinary motorist according to the temperature of the weather, and yet the instrument in no way is connected to the carburetor.

This satisfaction alone is one of the greatest feelings of contentment a man could have. Even the mechanic who knows the car from A to Z would like to know that the motor is consuming a minimum amount of gasoline over the miles of road traveled day in and day out.

It does all of this in such a simple manner that it will take but five minutes to understand it. Let us prove it to you. Sole distributors wanted.

STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION TO MEET

Sessions Will Begin Tuesday at Third Baptist Church and Continue Through Friday.

The Missouri Sunday-School Association will convene in the Third Baptist Church, Grand and Washington avenues, Tuesday, and its sessions will continue through Friday. A large attendance from various parts of the State and from churches of different denominations is expected. Plans have been made for an automobile tour from counties near St. Louis to bring delegates to the city.

Gov. Hyde, who formerly taught large Bible classes in Princeton and Trenton, Mo., is one of the speakers scheduled.

Prof. Augustine Smith of Boston is to direct the singing at the convention. Prof. Smith has directed large choruses in Chicago and at Chautauqua, N. Y., and he was director of music at the World's Sunday-School Convention in Tokio, Japan, last year. He will speak on Sunday-school music, and Thursday night he will present a pageant, "The Light of the World," which was produced in the Tokio gathering, and in which many Oriental costumes are used.

Miss Jessie Burrall, teacher in the Bible school of Stephens College, Columbia, and leader of a large Bible class there, will be one of the speakers. She formerly had, in Washington, a class which was known as the largest Bible class of young women in the world.

The arrangements for the convention are in the hands of a local committee, of which William H. Danforth is chairman. W. S. Campbell, president of the St. Louis Sunday-School Association, and superintendent of the Hamilton Avenue Christian Church Sunday school, is chairman of the Registration Committee. The Board of Religious Organizations is co-operating with the organization in obtaining lodgings for delegates, and families who have spare rooms are asked to send their addresses to room 417 Victoria Building.

pending public money in a field where private capital should be left to function, but at a time when the Government was expending a billion and a half dollars upon the plants of the railroads nobody paid much attention to it. The barge line on the Lower Mississippi, operating through the first years with inadequate equipment, lost money; but the railroads in the same years lost $600,000,000. The barge line in its first year, with a small temporary fleet, supplied 75,000,000 ton miles of transportation service. When its fleet is complete it will furnish 1,000,000,000 ton miles of service annually. That fleet will be complete within the current year. It needs another $5,000,000 worth of boats and barges to handle its fast-growing business. A second Government fleet to operate under private lease on the Upper Mississippi River, will be available by spring. A third Government fleet under Government operation is carrying coal down the Black Warrior River to shipside at New Orleans. The cost of carrying freight on the Lower Mississippi is from 3.8 to 4 mills per ton mile. Upon an equal valuation the cost of carrying freight upon the Western railroads is from 11¼ to 13 mills per ton mile.

No Lack of Freight.

All this has resulted from the death of statistics, which fell in the war. There has been no lack of freight at the river docks. This, too, at a time when freight upon the railroads was slack. The cost of transportation has become more important than it was, and carrying freight by water is proving cheaper than carrying freight on land. This has emboldened shippers to use the Government barges. Contrary to all they have been taught to believe, they have still found it a fact. The Government, too, is going ahead upon the assumption that Congress is going to accept this fact. It is building and equipping docks on the Mississippi where the river cities have been unwilling or unable to do this for themselves. The State of Louisiana continues to build docks at New Orleans. It is equipping them with mechanical carriers to handle freight between the ships and the barges. A correspondent who came to St. Louis was surprised to find that freight coming in for reshipment down the river was consigned to ports all over the world. This, too, was against statistics. He had not been taught to believe that this could be true. Nevertheless, it is true; and it is true as well that freight coming up the river comes from ports all over the world. He, too, had thought of the river revival in terms of the picturesque old boats, hand-tailored pilots and immaculate gamblers in shining silk hats. He had not thought of it as related to all other traffic, the world around, without gangs of roustabouts singing chanteys and a nigger on the safety valve. The new towboat Natchez, which did not race with the Robert E. Lee, goes down to New Orleans with a tow in six days and brings another tow back to St. Louis in 12. That, too, is against statistics.

But statistics are a dead cock in the pit in the Mississippi Valley. We will never believe in them again.

BUICK AWARDED FIRST CHOICE AT SHOW SPACE

Buick has again been awarded first choice of space at the national automobile shows for 1922. This honor, which has been held by Buick for a number of years, is conferred upon it by all other automobile manufacturers who are members of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, in recognition of the fact that Buick has done the greatest volume of business during the previous year.

According to the announcement, the figures on which the award for the 1922 shows were made comprised only the sales of six-cylinder cars, indicating that Buick is still the largest builder of six-cylinder cars in the United States.

ESSEX BUILDS NEW TYPE CLOSED CAR

An inclosed car that is in many ways distinct from any body type yet produced is announced by the builders of the Essex. It is called "The Coach."

There are many points in this new Essex that will appeal, but to the prospective purchaser probably the most significant and one that is thoroughly in keeping with the spirit of the times is the price, for the Essex coach sells for but a little more than cars of the open type.

At the showroom of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., where the coach is being shown for the first time in St. Louis, one can understand just why this new closed car will attract attention. Aside from its price, it is really different.

"It marks," says R. C. Frampton, "a new step forward in automobile body construction. The factory has produced a real quality inclosed car by a new recipe."

The new model is not a coupe and it is not a sedan, yet it has the advantages of both.

Particular emphasis is placed on the way the Essex coach has been built. One is attracted by its sturdiness. The lines are different than any preceding car of its type, but nevertheless they are pleasing to the eye.

The coach has seating capacity for five, and wide doors are held solid by four hinges. There is a dash control ventilator, a sun visor and a wind and rainproof windshield. The upholstery and floor rugs are of a fine texture of long wearing material, and the seats are low and deep cushioned.

Radiator shutters and motometer give efficient motor control. Cord tires are standard. The coach is mounted on the new and improved Essex chassis.

THREE MILLION MORE AUTOS NEEDED IN U. S.

Statistics Show Cars Replaced Every Year Equal Number Built Five Years Before.

According to a recent bulletin issued by John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Co., to the Willys-Overland organization, there should be approximately 3,000,000 cars replaced under normal conditions next year.

This number, which would by far exceed the total number of cars manufactured any one year in the history of the industry, is based upon the number of automobiles that passes out of existence annually and the cars held over and not replaced in 1920 and 1921.

"Prior to last year the number of automobiles that passed out of existence amounted to approximately the number that were built during the fifth year preceding.

"Up to Jan. 1, 1921, 11,839,483 motor vehicles had been built in the United States since 1899. Of this number, 613,695 had been exported. Registrations during 1920 amounted to 9,211,295. This leaves 2,014,483 cars worn out or discarded.

"Of this number, 596,969 were discarded in 1919. This is very close to the actual number of cars built in 1914, the actual figure being 569,045.

"During 1915, 892,000 cars were built, but during 1920 only 517,556 cars were discarded. It is evident that the financial stringency and the holding back of the public on account of falling prices resulted in 374,444 cars being carried over.

"In 1916 the first big volume production in the United States was reached. That year 1,583,617 cars were built. It now seems probable that not more than 1,000,000 of these cars will be replaced this year on account of the same conditions which delayed replacements in 1920. In other words, it is reasonable to expect that at least another half million cars which normally would be replaced this year will be carried over.

"In 1917 there were built 1,368,947 cars. This figure, added to the normal total of cars held over and not replaced in 1920 and 1921 gives a total of almost 3,000,000 cars which, according to past figures, would normally come in for replacement under normal conditions in 1922.

"Even allowing that subnormal conditions continue during next year and allowing that cars may with the present great increase of good roads last longer than before, the industry unquestionably is facing the probability of the greatest replacement market in 1922 than we have ever experienced."

USE OF ONE-TON TRUCK INCREASING

The growing popularity of the one-ton truck for a very wide range of hauling is becoming more and more apparent with the accumulated experience of truck users. Figured in dollars and cents on a ton-mile basis, the one-ton truck is making a better case for itself every day.

Each succeeding year manufacturers are arranging for a bigger proportion of trucks of that capacity. In fact, more than half of all trucks being made and sold are of one-ton capacity.

The experience of Hartman Brothers, fruit and produce dealers, of St. Louis, strikingly illustrates the status of the one-ton truck, as compared with other sizes, says C. E. Pagett, manager of the St. Louis branch of the General Motors Truck Co.

"Getting perishable goods out of the freight yards requires a fast truck, easy to handle and big enough to carry a good load. The Hartman Brothers therefore, after many years' experience with other size trucks, have adopted the one-ton truck practically exclusively for their freight hauling.

COLE ANNOUNCES NEW 890 MODEL

The Cole Motor Car Co. of Indianapolis announces the development of mode 890 Cole Aero-Eight with 42 refinements.

All fundamental engineering features have been retained in the new model, and the changes incorporated are purely in the nature of refinement and superficial improvements.

The braking system has been revised. The clutch is extremely flexible and soft-actioned, at the same time it is said to be extremely efficient and free from ordinary clutch troubles.

The frame has been strengthened to give longevity to the car and to protect it against squeaks and rattles. The eight-cylinder, "V" aviation type engine has been retained bodily. Acceleration, speed and economy tests show, it is claimed, remarkable comparative value.

The new model will be exhibited by the Cole Motor Co. of St. Louis, local distributors.

WEST END MOTORS TO RETAIL HUDSON-ESSEX

Roster Wickard and M. O. Sorrells, recently connected with the sales force of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., are also affiliated with the new company in capacity of sales representatives.

CHAMBERLAIN MADE SALES MANAGER

R. E. Chamberlain, who has been connected with the automobile industry for many years, has been advanced to the position of general sales manager of the Packard Motor Car Co. Chamberlain joined the Packard organization in 1916 as truck sales manager of the New York City branch, after being Philadelphia manager for the Garford Motor Truck Co. Shortly after his New York appointment, he was brought to the Packard factory as truck sales manager. His recent advancement marks a rise from the position of assistant general sales manager, which position he has occupied since Dec. 4, 1920.

The automobile does not promote waste; it reduces it.

One hundred and fifty-four thousand and seven hundred automobiles enter and leave New York every day.

Buick Drives Through the Third Member—Not the Springs

A Buick rear spring accidentally broken, can't mis-align the axle and tie you up on the road. Buicks drive through the torque tube third member on the axle—Buick springs only support the body and insure easy riding. This design is found elsewhere only on the highest priced cars.

Why These Astonishing New Federal Prices?

The Federal Motor Truck Company can manufacture and sell Federals at these astonishing prices for a number of very definite reasons.

Federal has no financial overhead burdens. It has no bonded indebtedness, no preferred stocks, no bank obligations of any kind.

Therefore, there are no heavy interest charges which must be passed on to Federal customers in the form of higher truck prices.

And, too, Federal's facilities and methods have grown with Federal's experience. Federal knows how to get the best results most economically. Federal is buying the highest types of labor and materials at today's prices. Federal has no excessive inventory purchased at high prices.

That is why Federal can manufacture better trucks at lower prices than any company in business; trucks which in every element of their construction offer the highest standard of quality and serviceability.

And that is why Federal can sell at the astonishing prices that its truck is now being offered.

MOTOR CARS OF TODAY LOADED WITH EXTRAS

But Next Year They May Have Less Trimmings Than a Pair of Bathing Trunks.

Nowadays a Ford that doesn't have a Rolls-Royce radiator, Fiat fenders, four or five spotlights, a mirror or two and some bumpers doesn't even place or show on the boulevards when it runs up against a brother thoroughly disguised.

The radiator cap is one of the favored points of decoration. Every day are seen Mercuries, Dianas, kewpie dolls, arrows, electric fans, bears, wings and other shapes that defy description. At night strangely placed spotlights strike the driver in the eye, multi-form and multi-colored headlights blink on the country roads and mirrors placed from stem to stern reflect all manner of lights.

The smart motor is heavily loaded with luxurious extras. On the running board is the golf bag carrier and the door mat, and on some cars there sits stiffly at attention a small dog that never barks—because he is stuffed. Inside are electric cigar lighter, the flask compartment, the flower vases and the telephone.

There are windshields all over the darn things. They hang out over the doors, stand up in front and protect the passengers in the rear. Traffic signals are usually tacked on the back, and when the car stops colored lights begin to flash off and on.

Nickel and silver are used with abandon. Lamps and bumpers are coated with it, and, according to pedestrians, the contact of a nickel or silver bumper is much pleasanter than that of a plain steel or iron one. Radiators, heretofore painted, gleam everywhere.

In the matter of covering the motorist has a wide choice. Tops come and size, shape and color nowadays. There is the button-down, all-around kind, the half-open, the permanent and the little dab that hangs over the back seat called the Victoria. It seems a foolish name, for it never would have covered the Queen.

Motors go in periods like architecture, and now they seem to be at the height of their baroque. The gingerbread knick-knacks are strongly in vogue, but fashions wax and wane and next year our automobiles may have less trimmings than a pair of bathing trunks.

USED CAR BECOMING MENACE TO DEALER

Declaring that the used car problem is the most serious that confronts the automobile industry, and that there is a real menace in the unscientific handling of the problem, Alfred Reeves, manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in an address recently before the New York Automobile Dealers' Association, appealed to the manufacturers to co-operate in solving the difficulty.

"During the stress of the competition of the past six months," he said, "the ridiculous allowances for second-hand cars were a form of price cutting. However, it was the same when there was an over-demand for cars. Even in those days, dealers allowed more than cars were worth, so that car selling became largely a matter of trading with the owner of an old car.

"The used car situation may not be better until human nature is better. Everyone has his own right to judge car values and it will take a lot of educating to prove to dealers the real value of used motor cars and trucks.

"The used car problem should be studied by the best brains of manufacturers and their dealers. Unfair allowances and inefficient selling plans, with the resultant money loss, are a blot on the escutcheon of one of America's greatest industries.

"Some car manufacturers have not been blameless in this for under the stress of recent conditions they have sometimes pressed the dealer to take new cars in greater quantities than he has been able to handle. They have also overtraded through their branches.

"I look to see the car and truck sales promotion work, help to move their own makes that their dealers have on hand, and thus broaden the market for new cars. Sales managers must appreciate the need to help dealers in the greatest of all obstructions to increased new car sales."

NEW DODGE COUPE HAS MANY REFINEMENTS

Some of the features of the new Dodge Coupe, now on display in the showrooms of the Tate Motors Inc., local distributor, are the details which cater to the comfort and convenience of the motorist.

The new model is equipped with a body heater placed flush with the floor directly in front of the passenger seat. This heater is adjustable for summer or winter weather, so that by means of a convenient lift control the heat can be regulated. In summer the lever is dropped back to normal and the heat passes out through the exhaust pipe.

Disc wheels, done in black enamel with cream stripe, enhance the appearance of the coupe.

Other refinements are anti-rattlers which hold the windows firmly in place and prevent vibration, and weather strips in the doors, affording extra protection in unpleasant weather.

With the adjustable steering wheel the driver of the coupe may enter it with ease from either side, and by means of a latch the wheel can be thrown up out of the way while getting in the car and then thrown back into normal position when ready for driving.

The interior is of mohair velvet upholstery with natural black walnut garnished mouldings and richly nickeled handles for raising and lowering the windows.

ELECTRIC AUTO SAID TO BE ECONOMICAL

Everybody can't afford the initial investment necessary for the purchase of an electric automobile, says H. Archer of the MacCarthy-Archer Auto Co. But it is a matter of common knowledge among electric car users that it is conservative to figure depreciation at no more than 10 per cent a year, and total operating costs at $5-$12 per month. One of the great advantages this type of car seems to have is that it provides the same comfort and luxury found only in high-priced cars, and still may be operated at a figure less than the cost of maintaining a flivver.

NEW 30x3½ ROYAL CORD TIRE ANNOUNCED

As fully half the automobiles in the country use 30x3½ tires, there is much interest for motorists in the announcement by the United States Tire Co. that it has placed on the market a royal cord tire of this size. It is of the clincher tye.

"For three years our developing and manufacturing organizations have been working steadily on this problem," says the company's announcement. "Hundreds of tires have been tested and every feature of design has been tried and proven. The new tire is a Royal Cord in every particular. It is made of the same materials and compounds and it has the standard royal cord tread design."

The product of the automobile industry in 1919 was worth over two and a half billion dollars.

SALE OF DOWNTOWN CHESTNUT ST. SITE AROUSES INTEREST

Auction of Ninth Street Corner Next Tuesday May Reveal Plans for Improvement of Property.

INQUIRIES MADE BY HOTEL PROMOTERS

Increased Building Activity on Thoroughfare Expected if Material Costs Are Lowered.

By Berry Moore.

Keen interest is shown in the property at the southwest corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets, to be sold at auction at the east front door of the Courthouse next Tuesday noon, by order of the Probate Court. The sale is fostered by John Dockery & Son, agents for John F. Sullivan, executor of the estate of Nellie T. Sullivan.

Located in the heart of the downtown district, this corner is notably distinguished by virtue of its excellent proportions. The lot has 135 feet on Chestnut street and 112 feet 9 inches on Ninth street. Old three-story buildings occupy the corner and a two-story garage is on the inside part of the site fronting on Chestnut street.

The site is considered one of the most available south of Olive street, between Twelfth street and Broadway, for a big automobile or commercial establishment—it is on one of the most important automobile thoroughfares—or for a hotel or any other large concern wherein prominence of location is an essential factor.

The location is one block west of the 16-story International Life building which pays a rental for the ground on which it stands (114 feet on Chestnut street) of $20,000 per annum net to the Liggett estate owner of the fee. One block north is the Maryland hotel, the ground rental of the site of which (115 feet on Pine street) is $20,000 per annum.

Many Inquiries Reported.

John Dockery & Sons report many inquiries from prospective buyers. These have been forthcoming from both representatives of large business establishments having plans for larger quarters and from promoters, including several with large hotel projects, as well as investors and speculators. Accordingly, the sale doubtless will reveal plans for the improvement of this corner on a notable scale. Considering its commanding position, the upbuilding of this corner with a representative structure would have a wholesome effect on downtown Chestnut street, according to real estate men.

James D. Dockery said:

"Downtown real estate is just about due for wonderful activity. There could be no more auspicious time for an investment in this kind of real estate. An era of building is just dawning and the adjustment between builders and capital practically completed. Friday's Post-Dispatch announced the readiness of one of our largest Trust companies to make building loans at reduced commissions."

There have been a number of transactions recently for sites on Chestnut street east of Eighteenth street, which show that the street is attracting the attention of operators. These include the purchase by Paul Brown, vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co., of the 12-story Title Guaranty Building at the southwest corner of Seventh and Chestnut street, and the acquisition by Frank and Jack Dubinsky of the three-story Lafayette Hotel building and site, 50 x125 feet, at the northwest corner of Eighth and Chestnut streets for $200,000, the first transaction being handled by Isaac T. Cook.

Cook, in connection with Ralph Coale of Cornet & Zeibig Trust, and the second by the Cornet & Zeibig Trust.

Cook Buys Half Block.

Isaac T. Cook recently purchased the entire half block on the north side of Chestnut street, between Tenth and Eleventh street, for a 12-story building for the Bell Telephone Co., construction of which is to be started as soon as building costs have been reduced to reasonable levels. The vacant block at Eighteenth and Chestnut streets, owned by the Eighteenth Street Realty Co., has been under consideration for several improvements, but the promoters have not been able to proceed with the execution of their plans, owing to the high cost of everything entering into construction.

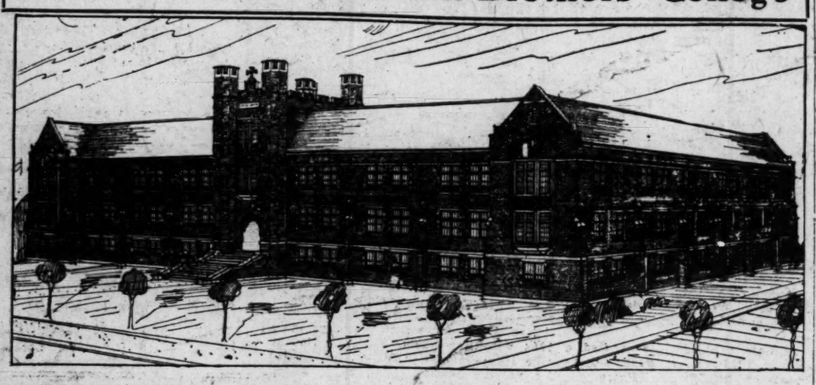
From all surface indications, a reduction in building costs would be the signal for a building boom of broad proportions, with Chestnut street the center of many leading building projects, real estate men declare.

TWO CHESTNUT ST. SITES ARE SOLD TO GEORGE T. BURDEAU

George T. Burdeau yesterday concluded the purchase of two pieces of property on Chestnut street. One was the six-story and basement building at 1918-20-24 Chestnut street, occupying a lot 107x73 feet 6 inches. The price paid was not announced. The building is leased for a long term of years to Butler Bros. who occupy it as a warehouse.

The other piece at 1618 and 1622 Chestnut street, comprises a two-story store and flat building, occupying lot 52x73 feet.

Architect's Drawing of New Building for the Christian Brothers' College



EXCAVATION BEGINS ON NEW C. B. C. SITE

Building at Clayton Avenue and University Lane Expected to Be Completed by August.

Excavation work was begun a few days ago on the site of the new building for Christian Brothers' College at Clayton avenue and University Lane, Hi-Pointe, and it is expected the building will be completed by August, in time for the next scholastic year. The building will cost about $225,000.

The building will virtually have three stories, by reason of the extremely high basement, which will be finished for use. The main frontage will be 230 feet, facing south, towards Clayton avenue, with a central tower over an arched entrance giving an extra story at that part. A wing will extend 100 feet north on each side from the archway. Construction will be of reinforced concrete, with walls of matt brick, s ark, mottled material, and trimmings of white Bedford stone. Henry P. Hess is the architect.

The building will include an auditorium to seat 600 persons, about 20 classrooms and about five science laboratories, and sleeping quarters for the Christian Brothers who will conduct the school. There will also be a diningroom for the Brothers and a lunchroom for the students. The building will be on a nine-acre tract, west of the city limits car line, and a gymnasium and stadium are to be built later, the whole plant to cost about $500,000 eventually.

Christian Brothers' College at King's highway and Easton avenue was destroyed by fire on Oct. 5, 1916.

APARTMENT BUILDING SOLD BY FRANCISCUS & KUNZ

The Franciscus and Kunz Realty Co. reports having closed the sale of a four-family apartment building, 5901-03 Enright avenue and a five-room residence at 757 Hamilton avenue for A. A. and W. H. Osterkamp to Dr. Len H. and Estelle Mohr, who purchased for an investment.

The company also sold a two-story garage building at 1552-4-6 South Seventh street for a client to A. O. AKRON RUBBER FIRM LEASES BUILDING FOR LOCAL BRANCH

One of the important leases made last week was negotiated by the Mercantile Trust Co., which leased to the Miller Rubber Co. of Akron, O., the building at 3328-32 Lindell boulevard, running through to Locust street and having a frontage at 3320 Locust street.

The Miller Rubber Co. heretofore did business through a local tire company. Owing to the general expansion of business the management found it necessary to locate a direct branch in St. Louis, through which they will distribute to the entire Southwest. Upon investigation they found St. Louis afforded more facilities than any other city for their direct distribution to the South and Southwest.

The Miller Rubber Co. is one of the largest rubber companies in the country, having its factory and general offices at Akron, O.

The building leased by the Miller Rubber Co. is a portion of the building situated at the intersection of the Lindell-Locust street cut-off. The building was built a few years ago and leased to the Chevrolet Motor Car Co.

The lease was negotiated by Eugene Christy of the Mercantile Trust Co. for the Pickel Real Estate Co., owners of the building, and by E. L. Schmock, district sales manager of Akron, O., for the Miller Rubber Co.

Shows to Consist of Vaudeville and Photoplays With 50 Cents as Highest Charge for Tickets.

Plans for a new "junior" theater of the Orpheum Circuit, to be named the Mississippi, to cost $1,500,000, and to be opened next fall, were announced yesterday by E. J. Sullivan, manager of the Orpheum Theater, after a long-distance telephone conversation with Martin Beck, president of the Orpheum Circuit, in New York.

Sullivan said the location, in the downtown district, had been selected, and that the theater would stand on a lot 190 by 140 feet. He said Beck did not intend to make the location known until demolition of the building now occupying the site should begin.

The architectural plans will be drawn, it was announced, by Rapp & Rapp, architects of the new State-Lake Theater in Chicago, and the theater will be modeled after the new Mainstreet Theater, recently opened in Kansas City.

It is intended to provide seats for 4000 persons, and to have a scale of prices with 50 cents as the highest charge for tickets. The shows are to consist of vaudeville and photoplays. A children's playroom, a nursery, elevators to the balcony, and a smoking room for women, as well as a men's smoking room, with card tables in both, are mentioned in the outline of plans.

THOUSANDS VISIT MISSOURI U. ON ANNUAL HOMECOMING DAY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 12.—Thousands of students, former students and Columbians tonight celebrated the victory of the Missouri University football team over the Oklahoma University team, which featured the annual Homecoming day at the University. The business section and hotel lobbies were filled with yelling men and women. Headed by the University band, hundreds of students marched through the street yelling and blowing horns. Late the students held a "night-shirt" paraue, which was supplemented by three hundred students and a band from the Kemper Military School, at Boonville, who came to join the celebration.

At 10 o'clock this morning ground was broken for the $500,000 Memorial Building which will be erected by students and alumni as a tribute to the 63 students and former students who lost their lives in the war. The speakers were General Peter Traub, who commanded the 35th Division in France, Colonel John H. Parker, commandant at Jefferson Barracks, Lieutenant - Governor Hiram Lloyd and Forrest Donnell, president of Missouri Alumni Association, Acting President J. C. Jones of the University, Col. Jack Rieger of Kirksville and Frank B. Rollins of Columbia.

Preceding the exercises a parade was staged by the students with floats from each of the seven schools of the university, representing some historical period of the institution. The clubs of more than 20 counties had floats exploiting the principal products of their counties.

The university cadet corps, composed of 1200 men, and led by Miss Catherine Ware, honorary Colonel of the corps, also took part in the parade. The spirit of the student dead was symbolized by a flag-draped casket mounted on a caisson and drawn by eight black horses.

Nearly 3000 out-of-town visitors, the largest crowd that ever attended a Missouri University homecoming, were here today.

CARBON MONOXIDE GAS DANGEROUS IN COLD WEATHER

Policemen were instructed by Chief O'Brien yesterday to notify automobile owners or those having garages on their beats of the dangers of carbon monoxide gas, which is found in a motor vehicle.

The notification is in the nature of a lesson on the danger of leaving a motor running while in a closed garage or other closed space where fresh air cannot penetrate, and is in response to a communication to the Chief from the Health and Sanitation Committee of the St. Louis Safety Council of which Dr. Rudolph S. Vitt, former Coroner, is chairman.

A copy of the letter was sent to each police district with the order, and reads:

"On a cold morning, if a man shuts himself up in a small garage, one 10 by 15 feet, starts the engine of his automobile and awaits results he may calculate on needing a doctor in about five minutes.

"The agent that does the harm is carbon monoxide, burned gasoline fumes. Unburned gasoline does some harm, but not much. If a man could live long enough despite the carbon monoxide to get the effects of the benzine and other poisons in impure gasoline, he might get a headache or maybe convulsions as the result of a benzine jag. However, in most cases of garage fatalities, carbon monoxide so completely fills the sponge-like hemoglobin that no oxygen can be picked up out of the air and carried to the tissues.

"The result is that a great many people are killed every fall and winter because of the practice of starting their cars in closed garages or working around the garage doing repairs while the motor is running and the doors closed."

COAT PRESSERS EARNING $105 A WEEK, TAILOR TESTIFIES

Jacob W. Silverstein, proprietor of a shop for the making of coats for custom tailors at 203 North Seventh street, testifying yesterday before Federal Judge Faris in his suit to enjoin members of Local No. 280 of the Journeymen Tailors' Union of America from picketing his shop to force recognition of their organization, said he was paying pressers as high as $105 a week at the rate of $1.30 a coat.

Judge Faris frankly showed his amazement at the testimony and hastily took up a pencil to figure that at this rate of compensation the income of a coat presser is more than $5000 a year.

Silverstein, the only witness examined at the hearing, which was continued until Nov. 22, said his shop is a single room, 50 feet square, and that when operating at full capacity he employes 55 persons. He has four pressers and five machine operators.

In his petition Silverstein alleges members of the Tailors' Union threatened to picket his place unless he signed an agreement to employ only members of their organization. He employs members of Local No. 281, United Garment Workers of America, of which he is a member, and which was organized in St. Louis only recently. He states in his petition he does more than $100,000 worth of business annually.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

E. McG.—A silver half-dime of 1857 is worth 5c to 10c.

MRS. C. A. B.—You can get the information wanted from any dealer in poultry.

C. W.—Get in touch with some of the undertaking establishments here, through which you may be able to learn embalming.

NEWSBOY.—Since the news dealer is not allowed credit for unsold copies of the papers, the boys should take only the number of papers they can sell.

S. O.—We would advise you to attend classes in short story writing, which are held at the public night schools of this city, for assistance in such work as you wish to do.

H. Z.—"The Star Spangled Banner" is recognized by the Army and Navy as the national hymn of the United States, although it is not so proclaimed by statute. It was written by Francis Scott Key on board the frigate Surprise during the bombardment of Fort McHenry, by the British, in 1814. He directed that the words should be sung to the tune of "Anacreon in Heaven," which was composed in 1770 and 1775. "The Star Spangled Banner" was first sung in a tavern near the Holiday Street Theater, Baltimore, by Ferdinand Durang. A waterfowl is any bird that lives on or about fresh or salt water, the term often being used collectively.

O. B. L.—The best way to clean a chamois skin is to wash and rinse it out in clean water immediately after it has been used, as by this time has not been done the skin becomes saturated with dirt and grime. However, if this has not been done, first thoroughly soak the skin in clean, soft water, then wring out and roll it into a compact wad, and beat it with a small round stick, turning the wad over repeatedly. This should suffice to loosen the dirt. Then rinse in clean water until the skin is clean. It is advisable to use a small clothes wringer, as wringing by hand may injure the chamois. Before using the skin for polishing put it in clear water to which a little pulverized alum has been added. Tepid water should be used in this process, as cold water has a tendency to shrink and harden skins.

P.-D. CONSTANT READER.—In mixing cements for filling teeth, dentists use a fluid, such as glacial phosphoric acid, also incorporating an essential oil, such as oil of cloves, in case the nerve is involved. To dry oils for varnishes, paintings, etc., the most economical way is to boil the oils with shot, to leave them for some time in contact with shot, or else to boil them with litharge. Another method consists in boiling the oils with equal parts of lead, tin and sulphate of zinc in the ratio of 1-10 part (weight) of the united metals to 1 part of oil to be treated. These metals must be granulated, which is easily accomplished by melting them separately and putting them in cold water. The metals will be found at the bottom of the water in the shape of small balls. Incidentally, we might mention that shot is produced in this manner.

C. C.—The proposed manner of settlement would not hold in a court of law. "M" has no interest in the $29.50 which was owed by "A" to "J," hence that sum must either be refunded to "A" or be paid by the latter directly to "J" to whom it belongs. The indebtedness of "A" to "J," in the $29.50 is not added to the partnership of "A." "M" and "J" are separate and distinct matters. "A" has no right to protect the partnership by paying into it the sum which is the partnership's debtor, namely, "J." The latter could bring suit. Th

Tomb Found of the Last Man on Earth Who Saw Jesus Alive

Jesus calling James and John to leave their fishing boat and follow him.

A RECENT message from Athens will thrill all Christendom. A party of archeologists who have been making excavations at Ephesus report the discovery of considerable portions of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, a famous structure among early Christians.

What gives the announcement its peculiar interest is the further statement that the discovery includes the crypt of the church, which, according to tradition, is the tomb of St. John himself.

That St. John spent the last years of his life at Ephesus and died there, after a period of exile on the Isle of Patmos, is a historical fact, although there are different versions of some of the lesser legends about his old age.

But the discovery of his tomb stirs the imagination, heightens the reality of a prominent figure in the most tremendous drama in all history. For John was one of the three disciples of Jesus admitted to the closest intimacy with Him, and always has been known as "the disciple whom Jesus loved."

It was John who leaned on the bosom of Jesus at the Last Supper, and to whose special care Jesus committed his mother, at the time of the crucifixion, at which John was present. Supposed to have been the youngest of the Twelve Apostles, John survived them all, and is said to have died at the age of 100 years.

John is generally believed to have been the author of the gospel and the three epistles which bear his name, and also of the Apocalypse, or Revelation, although the question of authorship of all of these has been more or less a matter of discussion.

In addition, John is believed to have been the last man on earth who saw Jesus alive, having outlasted all the others, friends and enemies of the Savior alike.

During John's declining years at Ephesus, because of his great age and the fact that he was "the dearly beloved of Jesus," a report spread among the primitive Christians that he was never to die. Many flocked to the city that they might gaze upon this wonderful man and listen to his teachings. For John preached a doctrine of gentleness and love, although both he and his brother James had been designated by Jesus "Boanerges," or Sons of Thunder, because of their fiery devotion to Him and His cause. One of the beautiful stories about John is related by St. Jerome, who says that toward the end of John's life, when the venerable apostle was no longer able to walk, his disciples carried him into the church and begged him to preach to them.

Because of physical weakness, John was unable to deliver any long discourse, but raising himself up and looking about at the assembled Christians, he said:

"My dear little children, love one another."

This had been a favorite admonition of John's, and St. Jerome further says that on one occasion, when some of the younger persons about him began to complain of the reiteration and ask John why he did not tell them something different, John replied:

"It is the Lord's precept: keep that and it shall be enough."

John was one of the fishermen on the Sea of Galilee who became "fishers of men." His parents were Zebedee and Salome, the latter possibly a sister of Mary,

> Excavations at Ephesus, Asia Minor, reveal crypt of ancient church which, according to tradition, was burial place of St. John the Evangelist, "the disciple whom Jesus loved"—He witnessed the crucifixion, became the subject of many interesting legends and is said to have died at the age of 100 years :: ::

the mother of Jesus. Zebedee, a fisherman of Bethsaida, evidently had some means, as he possessed boats, nets and hired servants. Salome was among those who contributed to Jesus' support during His ministry.

Thus John and his brother James did not come from the poorest class, but probably had the ordinary education of Jewish children. It is believed that they knew something of Greek as well as their native Aramaic and the Old Testament Hebrew.

When John the Baptist made his appearance and began preaching, John and James went down from Galilee to hear him, and subsequently attached themselves to him as disciples. Later, at the suggestion of John the Baptist, John and Andrew, brother of Simon Peter, left him and made the acquaintance of Jesus. Then they sought out their brothers and became the companions of Jesus, remaining with Him during His early ministry in Judea.

Afterwrds they returned to their homes and ordinary occupations, from which Jesus summoned them when He opened His ministry in Galilee. Obeying, they remained with Jesus to the end.

John, James and Peter were the three disciples with whom Jesus was most intimate. With Andrew they make up the group of four which heads each of the three lists of the Twelve Apostles as given in the gospels of Matthew, Mark and Luke.

It was John, James and Peter who, alone of the disciples, witnessed the raising of Jairus' daughter, the Transfiguration and the agony of Gethsemane. At the Last Supper, John had the seat nearest Jesus, and to him Jesus indicated privately which of those at table was the traitor. He followed Jesus to the scene of the trial, and as he stood near the cross Jesus committed His mother to John's care.

He stayed at the crucifixion until he saw the piercing of Jesus' side. At the news of the resurrection, John visited the tomb with Peter, entered in, saw how the grave clothes were arranged and "believed." A few days later he returned to Galilee, where he and other disciples had a vision of the risen Jesus and were given anew the commission to carry on His work.

John's writings, or those commonly attributed to him, were composed at Patmos and at Ephesus, in the latter portion of his long life. To fill in the gap between them and the last mention of John by St. Paul, it is supposed that at some time between A. D. 50 and 70 John left Jerusalem to labor elsewhere, and finally came to the Province of Asia.

He is said to have been banished to Patmos by Domitian (A. D. 81-96), and after Domitian's death to have removed to Ephesus by permission of Nerva (A. D. 96-98), and to have lived on until some time in Trajan's reign (A. D. 98-117). According to tradition, the gospel according to John was written at Ephesus, in conjunction with fellow disciples, all contributing their reminiscences, but John doing the actual writing.

Ancient tradition says that as long as Mary lived, John also dwelt at Jerusalem and provided her with a home. After her death, and following the fall of Jerusalem, John and numerous other leading Christians sought refuge in Asia Minor, and Ephesus became his usual residence.

During Domitian's persecution of members of the hated new faith, say the ancient writings, John was arrested and taken prisoner to Rome and there sentenced to death. The traditional scene appointed for his execution is the Latin Gate, or rather the open space which was later occupied by this entrance to Rome. The torture began with the flogging which invariably was meted out to such offenders. After this mournful prelude came the real torment: the victim was plunged into boiling oil.

To the amazement of the onlookers, John came forth from the fiery bath unharmed.

"Was it due to their emotion, or to pity, or mere prudence on the judges' part?" asks the Abbe Constant Fouard, in his volume on "St. John and the Close

To Keeping One Secret—$2,500,000

Former St. Louis woman demands half of fortune inherited by scion of Arbuckle coffee dynasty, alleging that she did not betray to defendant's mother the fact of his clandestine marriage — William E. Smith admits signing contract to that effect, but says he did not understand its meaning — The matriarchal authority of old Mrs. Roxie Smith, and a legal battle between two pretty young women :-:

IT HAS been imagined that the authority of parents is to be sought in China and in heaven, but now there comes into the courts of New York an instance of it suitable for the analects of Confucius. The phenomenon rises in a contention between the heirs to a Brooklyn fortune, stands solemn in a lively complexity of love, courtship and marriage, and ascends into splendor and laughter as a duel between two pretty women. The beginning is seen in a drab title: "Nugent versus Smith." Mrs. Beatrice Provost Nugent appears before Supreme Court Justice Lydon and displays a document in which her uncle, William E. Smith, engaged to bestow upon her one-half of his inheritance —this, she relates, for having kept from Mrs. Roxie Smith, his mother and her grandmother, the knowledge of his secret marriage. The sum of the inheritance is five millions, and the fortune towers as one that is scarcely less than historical. It stands a landmark in the career of coffee. You have heard of Arbuckle's coffee? That's the fortune.

The suit is of peculiar interest to St. Louisans, because Mrs. Nugent is the former wife of Julian L. Nugent, son of the late Byron Nugent, wealthy St. Louis merchant. The wedding occurred in March, 1913, at Wilmington, Del., and was a surprise to the families of both bride and bridegroom. In December, 1917, Mrs. Nugent was granted a divorce here by Circuit Judge Garesche, and also was given the custody of their two children, William Brainard and Julian Lake Jr.

And now for the story. Back in 1863, William Van Rensselaer Smith, a young man of Duanesburg, N. Y., packed his bag and went west to Pittsburg, and there began a wholesale grocery business in partnership with two other young men, John and Charles Arbuckle. The firm, bearing the brothers' name, specialized in coffee, and grew to power and wealth. Presently, across the broad belt of the country, Arbuckle meant coffee. In 1882 William Van Rensselaer Smith returned eastward, and made his home in Brooklyn. He retired from magnateship in coffee during 1906, and died in 1912 at an age approaching 80. He left his wealth to his wife, Mrs. Roxie Smith.

Mrs. Beatrice Provost Nugent, who declares that she kept a secret, and wants $2,500,000 for the feat.

Now, this matron was one of purpose and determination. She made some name as a donor of great sums to religious institutions, and in every manner she held to the ways of times that were older and better—especially to the conception that children should obey their parents. She maintained that the authority of a parent ascended even to such transcendental matters as romance and the nuptial rite, and kept a sharp glance upon the nubial excursions of her son, William E. Smith. There had been some public evidence of that even before the case of "Nugent versus Smith."

In June of 1916, though the Great War was flaring on the front pages, the New York newspapers found space to thrill over the largest breach of promise suit in the history of the city. It was for a million dollars and was against William E. Smith. He had broken, it was stated, an engagement to marry the daughter of a cousin of his father's. His reply embraced the excuse that his mother, Mrs. Roxie Smith, objected to his marrying the plaintiff. The case was settled out of court.

Now, he had made a marriage unknown to his mother. Mrs. Nugent made the assertion with great emphasis, and amplified it with the detail that the bride in the ceremony, Mrs. Claire Smith, nee Staley, was a person of whom Mrs. Roxie Smith disapproved completely. The hint got out that Mrs. Claire Staley Smith had been an actress, but this was disputed vigorously. The undenied facts are sufficiently interesting.

Mrs. Claire Staley Smith was the wife of the brother of her present husband's father. Thus she was the aunt of William E. Smith before she married him. She was 18 when she stood at her first wedding, 12 years ago. Her aged husband soon died, and a friendship grew up between her and her nephew-in-law, himself approaching his sixtieth year. Last summer they were married.

Had Mrs. Roxie Smith known of the ceremony, avers Mrs. Nugent, she would have disinherited William E. Smith in favor of Mrs. Nugent. As it was, though, she died on Aug. 8 last, leaving the income on $600,000 to her granddaughter, and an untrammeled five millions to the son. Thus, the reasoning proceeds, there was much equity in the document according to which William E. Smith promised Mrs. Nugent one-half of the inheritance in return for her having kept the secret of the marriage.

Nevertheless, complains Mrs. Nugent, William E. Smith refuses to honor the contract and convey to her the required two million and a half. Instead, he is transferring the properties of the inheritance to his young wife, Mrs. Claire Staley Smith, who is pretty, with a pale face and expressive dark eyes. Therefore, the Court is prayed to establish a receivership over the Smith estate.

The attack is powerful, but the defense is powerful, too. William E. Smith admits that he signed the document brought by Mrs. Nugent, but holds that he did not know its contents when he signed it. He lays the scene in a room adjoining the dying bed of his mother. In that time of agitation his niece presented the paper to him, saying that it would clarify the estate. It was in legal terminology and he did not understand it. He asked time to consult his attorneys, but the girl and her lawyers, who were present, pressed him so eagerly that he trustfully placed his signature upon the instrument.

He denies that his mother was ignorant of his marriage. She knew of it and gave it her blessing. She had always been friendly with his bride, and her last words were: "Claire, take care of William." Witnesses were brought forward to sustain these things.

Following this a counter attack is made, and again the parental authority exercised by Mrs. Roxie Smith enters the complication. It was Mrs. Nugent, in this version, whose marriage displeased her grandmother. She had eloped when little more than a girl, against the desire of all her relatives. Mrs. Roxie Smith was angry. She grew angrier still when, after several years, the granddaughter, with two children, divorced her husband.

And the climax of Mrs. Roxie Smith's indignation was reached when Mrs. Nugent engaged herself to make a second marriage of which Mrs. Roxie Smith disapproved. This engagement still stands. The blithesome Mrs. Nugent, now 26, will soon step down the nuptial aisle with Frederick Trenckman, a prominent citizen of Brooklyn, and once a noted football player at Princeton.

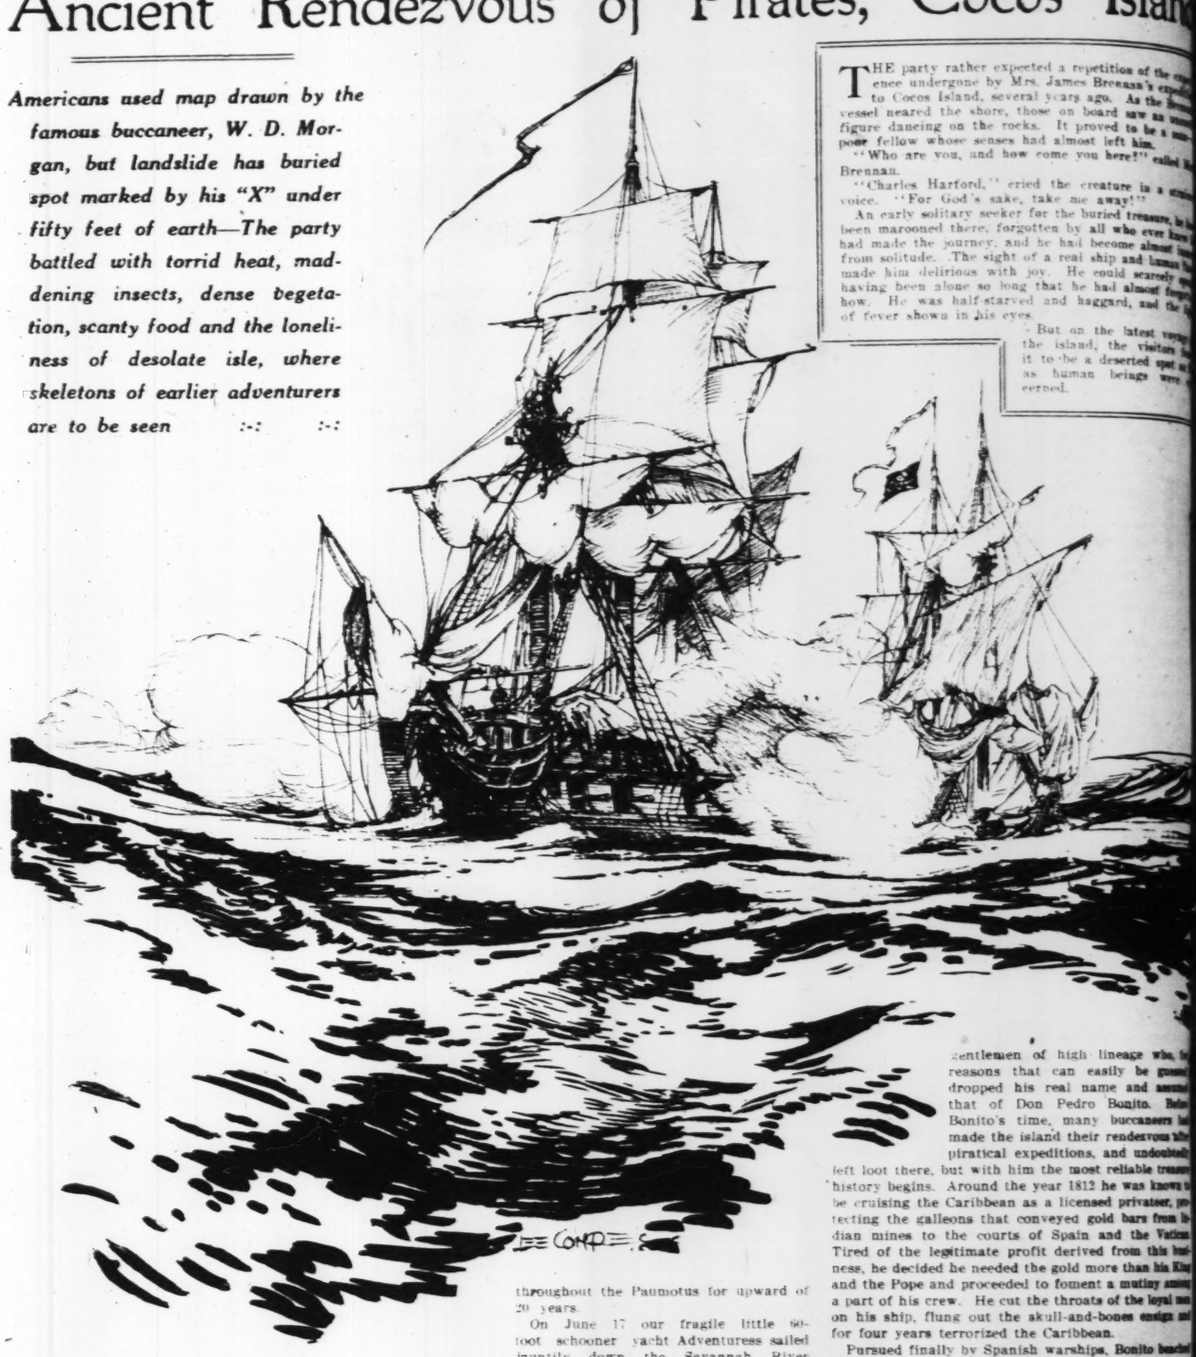
Thus, in tangled perplexity, stands the contest for millions. It is a very celebrated case, especially in Brooklyn. Only one rock of certainty seems to stand out of the waters of doubt, and that is the matrimonial authority of Mrs. Roxie Smith.

In her bill filed in the present contest, Mrs. Nugent declares that it was the original desire of her grandfather that she should share generously in his estate. She charges the defendant with exerting undue influence, to her own detriment, in the disposal of the Smith fortune. Affidavits were submitted by both sides, setting forth on one hand that Mrs. Smith was ignorant of her son's marriage to Miss Staley, and again that she had approved the match. Mrs. Nugent sought the aid of the courts to prevent William E. Smith from disposing of his mother's securities.

Mrs. Claire Staley Smith, who maintains there was no secret to keep.

Ancient Rendezvous of Pirates, Cocos Islan

Americans used map drawn by the famous buccaneer, W. D. Morgan, but landslide has buried spot marked by his "X" under fifty feet of earth—The party battled with torrid heat, maddening insects, dense vegetation, scanty food and the loneliness of desolate isle, where skeletons of earlier adventurers are to be seen :-: :-:



THE party rather expected a repetition of the ex to Cocos Island, several years ago. As the vessel neared the shore, those on board saw an

poor fellow whose senses had almost left him.

"Who are you, and how come you here?" called Brennan.

"Charles Harford," cried the creature in a voice. "For God's sake, take me away!"

An early solitary seeker for the buried treasure, he

By ROYALE V. ROTHERMEL.

LONELY Cocos Island, peopled with ghosts of many a pirate and buccaneer, has yielded another story of enterprise and adventure. Thus is added another buried treasure yarn in the endless chain of thrilling tales and lurid legends that deal with the fabulous wealth to be found there. If dead men could tell tales, millions in gold would long ago have been dug out. For, buried somewhere under the tropical foliage of that tiny speck far out in the Pacific lies many a rotting sea chest crammed with Spanish bullion, diamonds, precious jewels and aged golden church ornaments.

The latest party that set out to recover all this treasure was headed and financed by G. L. Seabury, an efficiency expert and accountant of New York City, who foresaw the enormous profits to be realized from the search if it should prove successful.

He took with him his wife, who cooked for the party under all conditions, even when she was sick, and showed an amazing amount of nerve.

To me fell the management of the motion picture interests of the expedition, for which I was qualified by my connection with the Film Craft Corporation, of which I was president, and by my recent filming and production of the Walt Mason comedies.

Our little ship was navigated by Capt. McGrath, a native Canadian, and an old, experienced sailor. He knew the Pacific and South Seas as well as any living man, for he had been a pearl trader with stations throughout the Paumotus for upward of 20 years.

On June 17 our fragile little 60-foot schooner yacht Adventuress sailed jauntily down the Savannah River and turned its nose bravely out into the open sea, headed for the favorite haunt of husky black-bearded sea rovers. On that sunny morning when we made our start, every one of our crew of five seafaring men and one woman believed that the huge pirates' loot that once inspired Robert Louis Stevenson to write his famous "Treasure Island" was at last to see the light of day.

Never had an expedition started out with greater assurances of success, for in the hands of our navigator, Capt. McGrath, was an authentic map, drawn by the notorious pirate, W. D. Morgan, himself, over 100 years ago, showing all the topographical features of the island, and clearly indicating with an "X" the position of the buried treasure.

The bloodthirsty Capt. Morgan, who fittingly ended his life on the gallows, was one of the last persons known without a doubt to have seen and handled the great cache, the ultimate goal of our search. Perhaps he even changed its original position. And so his map, which fell into our hands by a remarkable concatenation of lucky chances, really commands enormous interest and transcendent value. Its authenticity has been vouched for by the Canadian Government Laboratories at Ottawa, which, in a written report, set forth the opinion that it was drawn some time between the years 1815 and 1830. Actually the date on the map showed it to have been drawn by Morgan in May, 1820.

The oldest position of the hoard indicated on Morgan's map was that left there by a one-time Spanish gentlemen of high lineage who, for reasons that can easily be guessed, dropped his real name and assumed that of Don Pedro Bonito. Before Bonito's time, many buccaneers had made the island their rendezvous between piratical expeditions, and undoubtedly left loot there, but with him the most reliable treasure history begins. Around the year 1812 he was known to be cruising the Caribbean as a licensed privateer, protecting the galleons that conveyed gold bars from Indian mines to the courts of Spain and the Vatican. Tired of the legitimate profit derived from this business, he decided he needed the gold more than his King and the Pope and proceeded to foment a mutiny among a part of his crew. He cut the throats of the loyal men on his ship, flung out the skull-and-bones ensign and for four years terrorized the Caribbean.

Pursued finally by Spanish warships, Bonito beached his ship along the Gulf of Darien and burned it. Gathering his loot, he marched his men across the swamps to the Pacific, where he captured another vessel. Then he sailed up and down the west coast, overhauling treasure ships and murdering all on board, landing at cities and sacking churches, treasuries and palaces. He even dared to invade Mexico during the reign of Emperor Iturbide. His ill-gotten wealth was now becoming so cumbersome that he was forced to look for a suitable place of concealment. He even had to throw cannon overboard at times to make room for more spoil.

Cocos Island was chosen as the likeliest hiding place for his wealth, probably the greatest of any pirate in the world, and the band proceeded to that spot. On their arrival there, they killed wild hogs, with which the place is overrun, and tanned the skins to make bags for storing the heaps of treasure. Having stored these in a cave and marked the spot, Bonito sailed off again, but never to return, for his ship was shortly after captured by a Spanish gunboat. Rather than submit to being taken prisoner, Bonito blew out his brains.

The tale now centers around one "Bug" Thompson, the only member of Bonito's crew that escaped execution, and thus the only living man who knew of the whereabouts of the hoard. Twenty years passed during which time very little is known of Thompson's doings, except that he was probably associated with the terrible Morgan for a time and divulged to him the secret hiding place, and then we find him in command of the British brig Mary Deer and entangled in the Peruvian revolt of 1835. Thompson and his crew captured the richest treasure ship of the Peruvians, murdered its entire personnel and sailed to Cocos Island, where he added his treasure to that of Bonito.

The scene of the story now shifts to Canada, where Thompson, a hunted fugitive, fell in with a man named Keating, with whom he planned to return to Cocos for the wealth that was there. But before this plan could be carried into effect the grizzled old pirate heard that he was going to be arrested, whereupon he called his friend Keating, gave him a chart like the one in the possession of Morgan and fled. Several days later he was found frozen in a snowdrift.

Keating is said to have located the treasure, but was able to carry off only a small portion of it before he died, and no one knows what happened to his map. From all available descriptions, including the accounts given by Mrs. Keating to August Gissler, for a long time the Governor of Cocos, Keating's map was probably identical with that of Morgan, in the possession of the Adventuress party.

The way in which the present owners got hold of this presumably valuable document makes a fascinating tale. Many years ago a poor cabin boy bought himself a second-hand musket in New Orleans. For some reason or other the gun failed to function properly when he tried to use it, and he took it apart to repair it. In the cavity where the spring actuating the firing pin should have been, he found a tightly rolled parchment. Much later this proved to be Morgan's map, now in our hands. But the young sailor did not realize its value, for he kept it in an old Bible for more than 57 years, while he sailed up and down the high seas. Shipwrecked on the shore of Hudson Bay, and being the only survivor of his crew, he finally married an Indian girl and settled in the North.

In 1918, however, he read a magazine article about Cocos Island, and suddenly realized that he was in possession of a secret key to the treasure hoard. He thereupon made many attempts to interest people of means in the possibility of a successful expedition, but met only with ridicule. To most persons whom he approached the old sailor appeared as a well meaning and honest enough fellow but inclined to be a bit slack in his rigging up aloft.

Finally, discouraged and disheartened after all his efforts, he traded the map to a Swede who ran a general store in Cochrane in return for sufficient provisions and equipment to make his way back to his Indian home. The new owner of the map was not particularly impressed with the possibilities of the bit of old faded paper as a means to sudden wealth till one day he talked to another seafaring man he knew who proved to be our Capt. McGrath. The latter had been there on a trip with Robert Louis Stevenson.

McGrath knew that at one time or another upward of 20 expeditions had searched Cocos Island for treasure, but that they all had been led to search close to the beach for it, whereas actually the directions and the cross on the map indicated a spot accessible enough to a band of efficient and energetic pirates, but at the same time one unlikely to be disturbed by any roaming band of treasure seekers not having a map to guide them.

So again the map changed hands, this time passing into the possession of Capt. McGrath, who agreed to organize an expedition.

Once in the Pacific our troubles began. The weather was awful. Rain, rain and then more rain, day in and day out, morning, noon and night. Added to that we had to buck a continual head wind and head sea that forced us to sail for days along the northwest coast of South America rather than head direct for the island. For days at a time we were unable to take a sight and had to guess our position by dead reckoning.

After chasing clouds and rainbows all over the bosom of the Pacific we were knocked breathless one afternoon when a sure enough, unmistakable island broke through the clouds on the horizon. Fearful that it might drop out of sight, we glued our eyes to it till darkness shut it from our view, but we had really spotted it, and at 2:55 a. m. of the following day we dropped our mud hook in Chatham Bay, Cocos Island.

It was a ghostly, weird entrance we made that night in the dark of the moon, and on the hillsides shrouded in mist my fancy painted gibbering ghosts of murdered pirates who mocked at us for credulous fools. Certainly the pirates guarding their treasure were wiser than we seeking it.

For several days we rested up, replenished our supply of fresh water, wood and cocoanuts and incidentally did a little unofficial exploring on the first uninhabited island that any of us outside of the captain had ever set foot on. The island is rocky and mountainous, rising sheer from the sea on all sides except for two small patches of sandy beach, one in Chatham, the other in Wafer Bay. Along the rock shores are many beautiful waterfalls, fed abundantly by the constant rains, and some of them, indeed, hurl themselves off the jagged cliffs clear out into the sea.

With the exception of the tiny cottage of August Gissler, who had for many years ruled the place as the uncrowned "King of Cocos Island," deriving his authority from the Government of Costa Rica, we found no trace of human habitation there. We were completely isolated from the world and civilization and had no witnesses to our search except the droves of wild hogs which still overrun the plateaus and roam through the jungle thickets.

The deserted hut of August Gissler, "King of Cocos" —the only human habitation on the island.

A few scattered skeletons here and there near the shore were all that reminded us of the grimness of the past events that had transpired there.

Dismissing these from mind as quickly as possible, we immediately pitched our camp and set to work in earnest, as our provisions were already beginning to run low. We existed mainly on the wild pigs we were lucky enough to kill, which provided excellent food; on the fish with which the inlet abounds and on cocoanuts.

The rocky and hilly nature of the volcanic isle made our work in locating the "X" on our map extremely difficult. There are practically no level spots on Cocos and the whole is covered with tropical undergrowth of unbelievable density. We were forced to hew our way through the solid forest by vigorous use of machetes and it was impossible to see our way ahead for more than 50 feet at a time.

We took our compass bearings from the pointed ledge of Cascar Island, which projected its black bulk above the water line a quarter of a mile out into the ocean, in a direction southeast-by-south from our starting point. We then hammered stakes in the ground at intervals of 50 feet or so and in two converging lines which, if our calculations were correct, should bring us directly over the desired spot. Surveying and mapping out the topography of Cocos Island is no novice's task, but our excitement, increasing in intensity day by day, kept us at our heart-breaking job through all the heat, filth and insects that continually harassed us and set our nerves on edge. Toward the end our activity became fairly feverish.

While chopping our way through the dense growth we were forced to wear our oilskins and souwester hats to protect ourselves from the hordes of red ants that fell from the trees, ferns and creepers as we hacked them out of our path. Those oilskins were regular furnaces, but it was far pleasanter to roast alive than to be eaten to death by insects bit by bit.

After about 10 days' hard labor our two lines were coming close together and we could see ahead of us a long, high mound about 100 feet long by 100 feet wide that would probably contain the intersection of our pickets. Hurrying through the last few hundred feet of our work, we placed the last picket at the foot of a guava tree and almost in the center of the mound. Here was the spot where the treasure was buried.

And then a strange thing happened. Our excitement, which had been increasing in intensity every day, and growing by leaps and bounds, suddenly took a drop to absolute zero. It was weird, to say the least, this instinctive feeling of cold disappointment that fell upon all of us at the moment when we should have been thrilled to the marrow over the crucial point of the whole enterprise. The topography of the land coincided exactly with the features marked on our copy of Morgan's map, with but one exception. And yet our enthusiasm had strangely evaporated. Was this another trick of the dead pirates' ghosts?

Something was certainly wrong somewhere, of that we were convinced—so we held a council of war on the spot. We sat down in a semicircle on the top of that high mound, which was covered with trees and vegetation that seemed remarkably young and sparse compared to that on the rest of the island. Perhaps it was this that first undermined our confidence in our success. We calmly began to analyze every possible aspect of the situation. And then we found our instinctive feeling remarkably substantiated by the logical conclusions we reached.

In the first place, it seemed unlikely that 17 boatloads of heavy booty would be laboriously lugged up to the top of that mound when it could be buried just as safely at the foot of it. Also, the one point on which we were at variance with our map was too important to be ignored. The map showed the river to be on the right of the "X," whereas we were well to the left of it. This was a puzzler and stumped us for several days for a solution, but when we had solved it we knew our game was over, absolutely.

A careful survey of the mound brought still more forcibly to our attention the marked difference of the adjacent land in the amount and thickness of the vegetation. In fact, it was not at all difficult, in comparison, to make one's way about. That, in itself, was strange, but when we found at the base of the mound on the right hand slope unmistakable evidence of the banks of a stream that formerly flowed there, we knew the answer to this particular problem. At some fairly recent time there must have occurred a landslide from the steep, almost perpendicular sides of the mountain that formed the western ridge of the valley.

A little exploration of the mountainside confirmed this theory beyond question. This sideslip, which occurred probably 25 or 30 years before, had crashed down from the mountainside, blocked up and changed the course of the river and dumped rock and earth over the ill-gotten treasure to a depth of from 40 to 50 feet.

Months would be required for a large gang of men to excavate down to it. We were only six in all, and our provisions were nearly exhausted. Resignedly we gathered up our tools, shook the last red ants off our oilskins and slowly made our way back to the beach, following our picket lines and pulling up the stakes that we had gone to so much back-breaking labor to plant so hopefully only a few days before. We were a bowed and disappointed line of marchers. Little more was said thereafter, for profound disgust had killed our erstwhile spirited conversation.

For three days we made our preparations to sail,

What Woman Novelist, Disguised as Worke

In four years she held 25 jobs, including those of chambermaid, waitress, saleswoman, factory hand and humane officer — Underwent the privation and temptation of a friendless and penniless girl—Saw how the rich waste food while those who serve it go hungry—Finds that the health of dogs is more carefully safeguarded than that of children — Heard workers say: "They did it in Russia and we'll do it here"

"If I could make sure that my four children would be took care of, I'd p self to sleep and never wake up."

A VERY intimate chronicle of the things she saw while working as a maid in the homes and resorts of the rich, and of her startling experiences with girls' homes in New York, is given in a book just published by a woman novelist, who disguised herself as an unskilled working girl and started out on an adventure that lasted for four years. "Four Years in the Underbrush" is the fit title of this graphic narrative.

The name of the writer is withheld, but Scribners', the publishers, vouch for her as an author of note. In the book she makes passing reference to the fact of having published four novels.

During the four years of her experiment, which was originally begun as a brief search for "color" for a story, but prolonged because of the author's curiosity about the conditions she encountered—during this extended "slumming tour," she worked as a waitress, saleswoman in department stores, head chambermaid in the home of a millionaire, clerk in a bank, packer in a cracker factory, inspector for the Humane Society, addressed envelopes and, in short, held 25 positions in almost as many different lines of work.

She lived in a mansion, in a cheap rooming house, in a famous resort hotel, in several "working girls' homes," in Greenwich Village and in a tenement on the East Side. She found out what it means for a girl to be ill and friendless in New York; she endured the conditions existing in great establishments whose owners are noted for their philanthropy; she encountered men whom she calls "slimy things that walk on legs;" and she learned, for the first time, of the terrible resentment which is simmering and seething in the breasts of those who feel "the gall of the yoke."

Contrary to what might be expected, she did not hold "advanced" views. She was not a social worker. Her economic and political beliefs, as indicated in the book, are those held by the average American. Theodore Roosevelt was her beau ideal; apparently she was an active churchgoer; she hated the Kaiser dutifully.

She emerged from her experience somewhat bewildered, and vastly disillusioned. She came out of the "underbrush" with the sullen words ringing in her ears: "They did it in Russia, and we'll do it here." She came out without ever having seen a Protestant minister of the gospel in a tenement home. She came out with the knowledge that insanitary conditions which endangered the lives of children could be remedied if it could be shown that they also menaced the health of dogs.

The adventure began in 1916, before this country entered the war; it was concluded in 1920, more than a year after the armistice was signed. The writer's first job was that of addressing envelopes for a mail-order house, at the rate of $1.25 a thousand. She writes:

"The following day, by writing steadily from 8 in the morning to 6 at night, I managed to address 1500. Six other women were working with me. During the lunch hour the sixth woman continued to write, nibbling from time to time at an apple, and what appeared to be a slice of dry bread. Finally she inquired if I were married.

"'You're lucky,' she congratulated me. 'If I could make sure my four children would be took care of I'd put myself to sleep and never wake up.'

"'How about your husband?' was my horrified rejoinder.

"'He's gone,' she replied, with a quivering little chuckle. 'When our fifth baby came he left.' After a pause she added: 'Maybe he wouldn't have gone if he'd a-knowed it was goin' to die so soon.' Another pause. Then, wistfully: 'Maybe he would—never no countin' on a man.'"

Meantime, the author was searching for a room that she could afford. She applied to the woman in charge of the Y. W. C. A. Rooming Bureau, explaining that her maximum capacity to pay was $2.50 a week.

She had not had a room as low as that in two years. Impossible! When I reminded her of newspaper and magazine articles advising working women on the economic division of their wages, her face crinkled into a smile.

"Those people find out the wage of the average working girl—some don't even take that trouble—then they sit at their desks and divide it up for her. Sometimes they make real touching stories. I've often wondered how much they are paid." She looked me over. "Perhaps you can tell me? You are a writer."

The attack was so unexpected that I actually stuttered. When I asked why she had made such a guess she replied, indifferently:

"Only a professional social investigator or a writer could be so ignorant and at the same time so cocksure. You are not a social investigator. At least I never saw one whose shoes were so clean this late in the week."

As a companion in the adventure, the novelist had her friend, Alice. For Alice, however, it was a very serious matter. She had come to New York to make her way. It was a question of work or go hungry with her—or write home for money, which she was determined not to do. Eventually the two women did get rooms at $2.50 a week each. Also, Alice got a job. A week passed.

"You haven't asked me about my salary," she said. "This was payday."

"How much did you get?" My eagerness was not assumed. "You will remember my telling you that you'd get a good salary. How much?"

"Eight dollars."

"What!" The next instant it dawned on me that she was jesting. "Oh, I see! Eight dollars a day. Do they pay you $48 or $56 a week?"

There was a pause, then she glanced up at me with a little twisted smile.

"Eight dollars a week." Answering my continued speechless stare she added: "All the other girls got seven—I saw their envelopes. Some of them have been working there more than a year. Evidently," she said bitterly, "that $1 is a concession to my college degree."

Taking my seat on the foot of the bed I stared through the window at the torch flaming on the top of the Metropolitan tower. Eight hours a day, six days a week—they did not even give Saturday afternoon. Eight dollars a week minus 60 cents carfare—12 cents the hour. And in a publishing house of international reputation!

The author's next job was in a large department store. It was behind a bargain counter—and there were no stools. At noon she tried the store employes' lunchroom, where "wholesome meals were served at cost." Referring to the thinness of the butter on the bread, she declares that she later learned that it was put on with a small brush dipped in melted margarine.

Shortly after 3 o'clock the aisle manager ordered me to report to the superintendent. That dignitary pompously ordered me to report the following morning and take charge of the counter at which Mrs. McDavit and I were stationed.

"We've decided to keep you on regular," he informed me.

"How much am I to be paid?" I asked.

"Six a week," was his complacent reply.

"No wonder your advertisement is always in the papers."

He came down in his chair with a bang.

"We have girls who have worked here months, years," he retorted angrily. "They are content to get a week, glad to get it. You are only a greenhorn."

"But not green enough to work for $6 a week," and turning I left his office.

Back at her counter, to finish out the day, she was approached by an elderly man, apparently prosperous and refined. He fingered the coarse undergarments on her counter, and remarked: "These are not very good quality."

"They are an unusually good value—good for the price."

"Not such as a lady like yourself would prefer!"

"One cannot always choose," I answered, recalling my one change of undergarments.

"You would like those better," he said, indicating a display of silk underwear at the regular counter.

"Any woman would," I admitted indifferently, as I turned to wait on a customer. The next time my eye of the counter was free of customers the elderly man approached and thrust a parcel into my hands.

"What is this for?" I asked, recognizing it as a parcel he had just got at the regular underwear counter.

"For you," he leered. "I want you to meet me tonight in the Times Square drug store, at 8—sharp."

In another instant I would have done my best to wring his flabby neck, but he was gone.

"Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. McDavit (adjoining saleswomen) received my indignant explanation more calmly than I expected.

"They usually come around about this time," Mrs. Johnson said. "They wait until a girl is all tired out, willing for most anything. Then they flash their money before her eyes. It's a cruel shame!"

"I'm going to tell the aisle manager," I declared. Mrs. McDavit grabbed my arm. "Hush! Don't do that," she warned. "My daughter had a friend who was fired for doing that. They wouldn't even give her a reference—she'd worked for 'em more'n two years."

After this experience she tried addressing envelopes again, getting such employment at the publishing office of a magazine devoted to women's interests.

Drawing a card from the file I stared at it in astonishment. Instead of a distinctly written name and address in black ink on a white card this thing was in two shades of purple, the name and address stamped in purple on a thin glazed purple paper which was stretched on a purple cardboard frame. across the table, noticing my surprise, explained that it was stencil work.

Becoming thoroughly engrossed by my effort to make out the cards, I was startled when someone announced that it was past 11 o'clock. Two hours and a half had passed and I had addressed 27 envelopes. With a pang of horror I realized that I could not distinguish the features of women less than 10 feet away.

"Is this Blank's Magazine?" I demanded of the assistant manager. When she replied in the affirmative my indignation, goaded by fear of having permanently injured my eyes, frothed over. "All of my life—before I was born—Blank's Magazine has been proclaiming its interest in women—its efforts to help working women. Here you not only underpay them, but give work to destroy their eyes. Take your file."

After this she got work in the chief premium station of a well-known concern that distributes coupons as a "profit-sharing feature." Our author had always regarded this as a species of faking, but it was there that she found her first decent job, and encountered her first employer to insist that his girls take care of themselves.

For years I had heard persons, men and women, declaim against the incomprehensible devotion of "shop girls" to chocolate eclairs and gumdrops. Indeed, only a few days before quitting the National Arts Club I overhead a high-priced music teacher declare that she lost all patience with "shop girls" when she saw them lunching on a chocolate eclair instead of a bowl of oatmeal and milk, or of "good, nourishing soup." My five weeks behind the counter furnished me with a proved solution to the problem.

The first time I tried lunching on a bowl of oatmeal and milk I began to experience a most uncomfortable sensation under my apron before 3 o'clock. By 5 that sensation had become a sharp, griping pain. The day following I tried soup. In the middle of the afternoon, when Nora learned how I was suffering, she went scurrying around among the girls in various departments and returned with three gumdrops, which she made me eat.

After that, when I had 10 cents or less to spend for lunch I invested in a chocolate eclair and gumdrops. Without a doubt such a diet does produce pale faces and a predisposition to tuberculosis. Experience taught me that it staves off the griping agony produced by hunger and standing on one's feet longer than any other food to be had in New York City for the same money. When a girl's wage is $7 a week, or less, 10 cents a day is all she can spend for lunch.

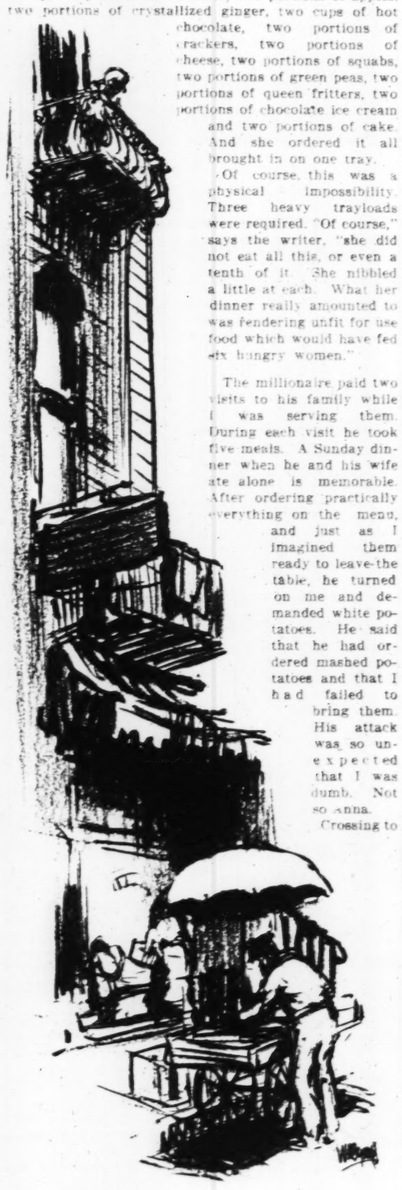
It was not long after this that she decided to take a turn at waiting on table. To this end she went to a seaside resort which might, from the description, be Atlantic City, and obtained work as waitress at a large hotel, which she calls the Sea Foam. The salary was $16 a month and board.

At dinner she was stationed at a table of six covers. Her guests were the family of a multimillionaire—his wife, three small children, French governess and a trained nurse. For the first few days she worked under the supervision of Anna, an experienced waitress.

"Don't pay no attention to her," said Anna, indicating the wife. She'll work your head off, and won't give you so much as a thank-you."

This woman's first dinner order is worth recording. It was: Two portions of oysters on the half-shell, two portions of olives, two portions of asparagus, two portions of the heart of lettuce without dressing, two portions of fried oysters, eight portions of the heart of celery, six portions of radishes, two portions of apples, two portions of crystallized ginger, two cups of hot chocolate, two portions of crackers, two portions of cheese, two portions of squabs, two portions of green peas, two portions of queen fritters, two portions of chocolate ice cream and two portions of cake. And she ordered it all brought in on one tray.

Of course, this was a physical impossibility. Three heavy trayloads were required. "Of course," says the writer, "she did not eat all this, or even a tenth of it. She nibbled a little at each. What her dinner really amounted to was fendering unfit for use food which would have fed six hungry women."



The millionaire paid two visits to his family while I was serving them. During each visit he took five meals. A Sunday dinner when he and his wife ate alone is memorable. After ordering practically everything on the menu, and just as I imagined them ready to leave the table, he turned on me and demanded white potatoes. He said that he had ordered mashed potatoes and that I had failed to bring them. His attack was so unexpected that I was dumb. Not so Anna.

Crossing to the table she pulled a platter from among the pile of soiled dishes surrounding his plate and held it out to him.

"There's your white potatoes," she told him. "You done eat 'em."

Several days before Easter this family departed. I had served them 379 elaborate meals, been found fault with, rudely ordered about, grumbled at, and might have been reprimanded by the head waiter had he not, having learned that no tips were to be expected, studiously kept away from their table. My tip was a soiled $1 bill, ungraciously given. It was 100 cents more than any of their former waitresses had received, and they had been stooping in the hotel for more than four months.

Her next position was that of chambermaid in the country home of a wealthy family. Here the work was light, the food good and the surroundings pleasant. Being eager to move on in search of new experiences, the writer soon found an excuse. One evening the mistress of the house, a pretty woman of 35, went for an automobile ride. The chauffeur is described as a "good-looking young Italian, with straight legs." The chambermaid was taken along as the third member of the party.

The mistress and the chauffeur went into a roadside inn; the maid remained outside in the car. After a while she peeped through the window, and saw the chauffeur dancing with his employer, and saw them eating and drinking together. In resigning the following day the writer gave this scene as her reason, whereupon her employer excitedly accused her of being a spy in the employ of her husband.

After that she held many jobs in the city. She found packing crackers to be one of the best, because she was permitted to eat all the crackers she wanted. She lived in a "girls' home," and when she became ill one day, and was unable to unlock her door, the clerk refused to permit the elevator boy to go off duty long enough to help her. She became virtually unconscious while waiting for some friend to aid her. She worked in a home for children, where the little inmates were forced to eat everything on their plates, on pain of having it crammed down their throats by the bony finger of the matron.

Her sojourn in the tenement district, during which she served as an inspector for the Humane Society, occupies some of the most vivid pages of the book. Perhaps one incident will illustrate.

A dead horse had been lying for days on a corner in the most crowded spots in the slums. Repeated calls for the Street Department failed to bring any response. Several children in the neighborhood were ill.

"Much they care about babies," sneered a stout girl in a soda fountain, who heard the writer's telephone message to the city hall. "They're too busy sweeping Park and Fifth avenues—afraid the dust will speck the palaces of the millionaires—and them all out of town, at that!"

The writer told them that she proposed getting the carcass removed by the Humane Society, on the ground that it was a menace to the dogs in the neighborhood.

"Menace to dogs," giggled a thin girl at a table. "She thinks they'll do more for dogs than children."

"She's dead right," said the soda boy. "That animal society's got a lot of rich swells behind it."

The writer remarked that if the professions of democracy were lived up to, street cleaning would start in the tenements before it started in front of vacant houses, so that the greatest number would be benefited.

"I see 'em startin' to clean the streets in the tenements first!" jeered the thin girl.

"If they don't you'll see tenement people livin' in them palaces and the people from the palaces livin' in the tenements!" retorted the other girl passionately. "They done it in Russia, and we'll do it here. Within 10 years—I'm givin' it to you straight."

"Youse said it!" emphatically agreed a man in overalls, who was leaning against the counter. The writer describes the scene:

"The eyes of the pale soda clerk were like smoldering fires ready to flame with any powerful emotion. The square jaw of the man in overalls reminded me of a bulldog. 'They've done it in Russia; we'll do it here.' It was entirely evident that the five agreed with the stout girl's assertion."

NEW PROOF THAT THE AMERICAN INDIAN CAME FROM ASIA

WHERE did the American Indian come from originally? Was it out of the ground—as some of his own legends assert, or is he a Chinaman who has wandered far from home. Some very respectable scientists have contended, in evolutionary terms, that the Indian, like Topsy, "jes growed." It certainly is one of the most absorbing questions of origin that have been met, and a fully satisfactory answer is yet to be given.

Recently, however, new light has been thrown upon it in a unique manner by Prof. W. H. Holmes of the National Museum, one of the most distinguished anthropologists living. His evidence and conclusions are presented in the annual report of the Smithsonian Institution, just printed.

When Columbus landed on the shores of the New World he thought he had reached India, and so called the inhabitants "Indians." While he was mistaken on the first point, his naming of the natives now appears to have been much nearer the color of truth than subsequent historians supposed, although it was unwittingly so on Columbus' part. The weight of the present evidence goes far toward proving that the American Indian came originally from India, or thereabout.

Prof. Holmes' brief outline—it does not profess to be more than that—consists largely in the comparison of photographs of the faces and sculpture of American aborigines and Mongoloid races. As may be seen, the results are rather striking in some instances, while others would seem to contradict the main proposition.

Contrast between American Indian and typical Asiatic Mongol although they are believed to have sprung from same stock.

There have been a few inquirers to contend that the American Indian is native to the soil, that he developed on this continent by evolution from the anthropoid, just as the evidence indicates that the European and Asiatic man developed. But these are in a hopeless minority. By far the greater number of scientists who have studied the subject declare that the Indian is an immigrant.

The evidence for this theory is of a negative character, but impressive, and rests mainly on the fact that no authentic remains of "cavemen" have ever been found on this continent, although the relics of prehistoric animals are numerous. The oldest human remains unearthed either in North or South America are of men in a late stage of development, far removed from the ape type. These contrast sharply with such primitive remains as those of the "Heidelberg man," the "Piltsdown skull" and other relics found in the Eastern Hemisphere, which can barely be distinguished from the skeletons of chimpanzees.

It is on the pages of that "book of ages"—the geological strata — that the inquirer finds the record of prehistoric life. In the Western Hemisphere this record is bare of any reference to man. Beside the buried bones of the mammoth and the ichthyosaurus scientists have looked for the remains of contemporary man and his works, but in vain. And at length the majority of them have concluded that he was not here then.

On the other hand, it is certain that the Indian was no newcomer when Columbus arrived. While his tenure may have been short as compared with the length of man's residence in Europe and Asia, it had been no short-term lease, for all that. The evidence on this point is striking and complete.

The discovery of America found the Indians in a stage of development corresponding to the Neolithic, or polished-stone, age of the Old World. From this fact it is logically argued that the country from which they emigrated was no further advanced than the polished-stone age at the time of the emigration. If it had been, the immigrants would have brought the knowledge of those higher arts with them. Fixing the date of the exodus as the polished-stone age, moreover, does not allow for any marked progress by the Indians after their arrival here, so it could not possibly have been later than that, unless there was a retrogression, which is not even considered.

It is pertinent to note, too, that the polished-stone age came to an end in Asia before it ended in Europe. It was ended in France and England by the introduction of bronze, and this occurred approximately 2000 years before Christ. In Asia, bronze had appeared much earlier, and Asia was the probable source of the Indian migration. So it is likely that the advent of the Indians to America occurred considerably prior to 2000 B. C.

It was, as one writer poetically puts it, at least before Homer wrote, and probably belongs to the time of the first city of Troy on the plains of Hissarlik. It was before Greek culture began, and not only preceded the Roman empire, but was before the rule of the Etruscans in Italy. This is the latest possible period; how much earlier the migration occurred is a matter of speculation.

Most of the reputable scholars select Southern Asia as the probable cradle of mankind. The story of evolution is a familiar one. Man's primitive ancestor is believed to have been a denizen of the forest who used all four feet for climbing. Finally, he left the tree country and went out onto the plains. He learned to walk on two feet. With his forefeet, now freed from the necessity of climbing or locomotion, he began to wield implements for meeting his foes, for preparing food, and, finally, to manufacture tools. "Thus," says Prof. Holmes, "the hands, aided by the feet, directed by the rapidly developing brain, conquered the world."

Belief that first men on this continent came from Siberia by way of Bering Strait, is supported by a comparison of photographs—Migration probably occurred during the Polished Stone Age, and Eskimo is regarded as the "link" between the original Mongol and the present red Indian :: ::

ing point was on the shores of the Red Sea, or further east, in India or China, is not known, and there is slight hope that it ever will be known. But wherever it was, primitive man radiated out in many directions—eastward over Asia, south and west to Africa and Europe and northward to Siberia. It was a process of centuries. New groups pushed out into the wilderness, and slowly the area of population spread.

It is with the path believed to have been traveled by the ancestors of the future American Indian that we are concerned here. The simple and logical route was northward through Siberia to the tip of the continent, and thence across the narrow Bering Strait to Alaska, or else across the wider Bering Sea, using the string of islands known as the Aleutian Archipelago as a sketchy pontoon bridge.

It is possible, for that matter, that these peninsulas were once connected by land which has since disappeared, and that the prehistoric argonauts came across with dry feet. Barring ice and the frigid climate, however, the strait does not present insuperable obstacles to navigation of a primitive sort.

From Alaska the tide of migration naturally would flow southward—and so it is believed to have flowed, ever and ever southward, until it had extended virtually to Cape Horn. The photographic evidence presented by Prof. Holmes is clear. The farther north we go on our own continent the nearer does the facial type of the inhabitants approach that of Asia. In the Arctic Circle is the Eskimo, with slanting eyes, the broad, flat face and weak chin of the typical Mongol, indicating that these are the descendants of the latest immigrants.

Lower, we find the American Indian, with his bold, aquiline profile and level eyes, and, lower still, the remains of the Aztec, Toltec and Maya civilizations, the most advanced of them all, indicating that these were the oldest North American settlers and the farthest removed from Mongoloid culture. But even here are found traces of Asia, one of which is a sculptured face found on one of the ancient temples of Guatemala, and of which a photograph is presented by Prof. Holmes in support of his theory. It is strikingly suggestive of the smooth, placid faces of Buddha which abound in India and China, as may be seen from the comparison.

While the average Indian face may be said, as a general rule, to contrast strongly with the weaker Mongol face, there are exceptions, as may be seen in the similarity of an Indian face to that of a native Formosan—countenances which could very well belong to brothers. Moreover, even the boldest Indian head has features in common with that of the more degenerate Mongol.

Those of us who have, with feelings of sorrow and alarm, seen our natural thatch recede swiftly toward the backs of our necks and eventually disappear doubtless regard human hair as a melancholy example of capricious instability. But, strange to say, hair has been found to be perhaps the least variable of all our characteristics, in so far as race is concerned. As a racial characteristic, it persists long after other peculiarities have changed. So, in determining the origin of races, scientists have found hair to be an invaluable indicator.

When, therefore, it is noted that the American Indian has the straight, black hair of the Mongoloid, and that these are the only two types of human beings who invariably have that trait, the fact is considered of great significance. Their common heritage of high cheek bones is yet another evidence of a common strain.

It is not contended that there was any great mass exodus, or that the pioneers of the New World were members of any single race or tribe; rather, it is believed that the process continued for centuries, with stragglers from numerous brown or even yellow races of Southern Asia and the islands of the Indian Ocean making their way by slow stages to the shores of Bering Sea and finally getting across to Alaska.

Considering the vast extent of North and South America, it must be realized that the populating of these immense continents from that tiny inflow at the northwestern tip required a long time. Yet, when Columbus arrived, the wigwams and tepees of the red man stretched from the Arctic Circle to Patagonia, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The number of Indians in North America then has been estimated at 15,000,000.

Although there were many common peculiarities between the Indian and the Asiatic, yet the red race did not exactly duplicate any known race of Asiatics, which gave color to the belief that the Indian was an admixture of many bloods and diverse races, blended so long and so thoroughly that a new race had come into being. If this is true, the original American, like the modern, was a composite of many nationalities.

Religious bigotry is chargeable with a crime which is responsible for much of our ignorance about ancient America—a crime comparable in its enormity and consequences to the burning of the library of Alexandria.

When the Spanish priests came to Mexico and Latin America they found the temples of the Aztecs rich in evidences of culture and the hieroglyphic records of the past. Against these they displayed all the senseless fury that has marked other missionaries' conduct toward "heathen" institutions. Pictures and writings were collected and burned. Monuments were torn down, and ornamental and decorative features were ruthlessly defaced and mutilated.

As nearly as possible, every vestige of "pagan" civilization, especially of a religious aspect, was destroyed, and so perished the most fruitful field of the future investigator. These zealous vandals apparently were actuated by a similar motive to that which prompted the Mohammedan potentate of earlier days to order the destruction of all manuscripts, on the ground that those which disagreed with the Koran were untrue, and those that did agree were superfluous.

A strange and interesting feature of the Latin civilizations was the presence of certain remains which seemed to indicate a Buddhistic influence of a [illegible]

A ST. LOUIS WOMAN WHO HAS REACHED THE TOP IN GRAND OPERA

Edith Mason, newcomer at Chicago Opera, expected to duplicate triumphs in Europe and South America — Says no woman singer can be great artist without marriage and motherhood, and that wealth is severer handicap for a career than poverty—How she overcame mother's opposition to her becoming professional singer :: ::

ON NEXT Tuesday night a native St. Louisan, the most distinguished singer ever contributed by this city to the realm of music, is expected to sing the title role of "Madame Butterfly" with the Chicago Opera Company. She is Edith Barnes Mason, in private life Mrs. Giorgio Polacco, and her fame has been won mostly in Italy and France, though she was a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company during the season of 1915-16. It is predicted that the ensuing season will enable her to achieve an American celebrity equal to her European renown.

Miss Mason was born March 22, 1893, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Baron Steuben Barnes of St. Louis. She was educated at Miss Wright's school at Bryn Mawr, Pa., and at the H. Thane Miller School in Cincinnati. She studied singing in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Paris.

In 1912 she became a member of the Boston Opera Company. During 1913 and 1914 she sang at the Opera Municipal at Marseilles, the Opera Municipal at Nice and the Opera Comique in Paris. In more recent years she has appeared with great success both on the continent and in South America.

No doubt many promising careers in the arts have been blighted by poverty, says Miss Mason, but there are also numerous instances in which the possessor of a talent has been prevented from cultivating it on account of wealth.

"Comfortable circumstances sometimes make more of a demand than poverty upon a person's time and energy," stated the soprano to an interviewer at the Commodore Hotel, New York City. She was visiting a friend, Mrs. John Keith, during the interval between her arrival in this country from Europe and her departure for Chicago.

"Money and position," she continued, "have prevented more persons from achieving a career than poverty, for the reason that they hamper a person more. Somehow or other it is easier to endure hardships in reaching a goal than it is to live in affluence and reach the same goal.

"But I think neither wealth nor poverty can stop a person when he or she has a real call to do a certain thing. The girl with a genuine gift will cultivate it because with that gift is given the impulse to keep going until she attains her purpose.

"There are the calls of her social position on a wealthy girl, and there is generally the opposition of her family and friends. Instead of working hard and leading a simple life, while studying, she is called upon to attend social affairs galore. No one girl has the time and energy to study and to go out in society while doing so. She must decide which she will cultivate — society or her gift. If she decides on her gift, then she must work, using her wealth only as a means to an end.

"The poor girl is handicapped in another way, but she is left pretty much to herself. The mere matter of living is a problem with her, but once she has solved that she can devote all her time and energy to her work. If she has real talent, there is always some way of securing the means of developing it.

"My advice to the girl who is ambitious is: 'Don't despair over the obstacles you have to overcome.' Have faith in yourself and you can succeed in spite of the wishes of your family and friends and in spite of the financial difficulties in your way. It all depends on yourself—that is, if a competent critic tells you you have the foundation of a vocal or operatic career."

Maestro Polacco, who is chief conductor of the Chicago Opera Company, fell in love with Miss Mason and her voice the first time he heard her sing, at the Metropolitan Opera House a few years ago. She has coached with her husband for the roles she will sing during the coming season. He is anxious that the American public realize the quality of his wife's voice and her artistic ability. It is safe to say the public will be discerning enough to recognize the beauty of a voice which, singing the role of Micaela in "Carmen," could hold up the performance, when Caruso and Farrar were in the cast.

Miss Mason spent the summer in South America and Italy. Also, by way of diversion, she did what every American girl hopes to do some day—spent considerable time in the Paris shops. She not only outfitted herself with clothes, but also purchased costumes for her various roles.

When she was a school girl Miss Mason decided she would be a singer. Her family encouraged her, thinking she wished to develop her voice merely as a polite accomplishment. When they realized, as they speedily did, that Miss Mason was ambitious for an operatic career, objections began to pour upon her and obstacles were placed in the way of the cultivation of her gifts. The social distractions offered were enticing and frequent, and suggestions of trips she would like to make were part of the program.

Miss Mason has a will of her own and there was nothing in the world she liked do so well as to sing—so sing she did, in spite of all obstacles. She continued her studies at school and worked with singing teachers in addition.

Finally, she relates, her mother issued an ultimatum: Miss Mason must either abandon her career or have her allowance discontinued. She was studying in New York at the time, and her answer to her mother's threat was that she intended to seek a career.

So her mother cut off her allowance. Miss Mason decided that if her art was really worth while it would support her. She secured a singing engagement which not only gave her the money required for a livelihood, but also gave her the practice she needed. It gave her confidence enough in herself to appear before an audience.

Her mother, in St. Louis, awaited a telegram from day to day, saying that all thought of a career had been given up. This would have been the way most wealthy young girls would have capitulated, but Edith Mason was made of sterner stuff. She refused to send the wire. She wrote other letters to her mother, however, telling of her efforts to fit herself for a career and also how much money she was making. This was too much for her mother. She decided on a trip to New York, heard her daughter sing and told her that she would back her, if she wanted to make music her life work.

One of the important results of the visit was that the allowance was restored and the girl's studies were adjusted so that singing and music were stressed above all the others.

Miss Mason recently made a statement in Paris, just as she was about to sail with her husband for this country, which caused a great deal of discussion. It was to the effect that only women singers who have attained full womanhood and have known maternity can hope to attain the "divine quality" of voice that makes greatness.

This statement was made apropos of an address by Prof. Goldstein of the Austrian Academy of Science, who had come to the same conclusion.

Miss Mason declared that no immature girl possesses the necessary spiritual and physical equipment to become really great, which is the reason that many of the famous divas were women who married early and had children. She referred to Melba, Lilli Lehmann, Schumann-Heink and others, and made particular reference to Lina Cavalieri. Mme. Cavalieri's voice, said Miss Mason, took on new depth of feeling and beauty of tone after the birth of her son, who is now an officer in the French army.

Miss Mason's career is rather unique for an American singer in that she is far more famous, as yet, in Europe and South America than she is in her own country. Her friends declare that during her one season at the Metropolitan she did not have opportunities adequate to her gifts, and found it necessary to go abroad.

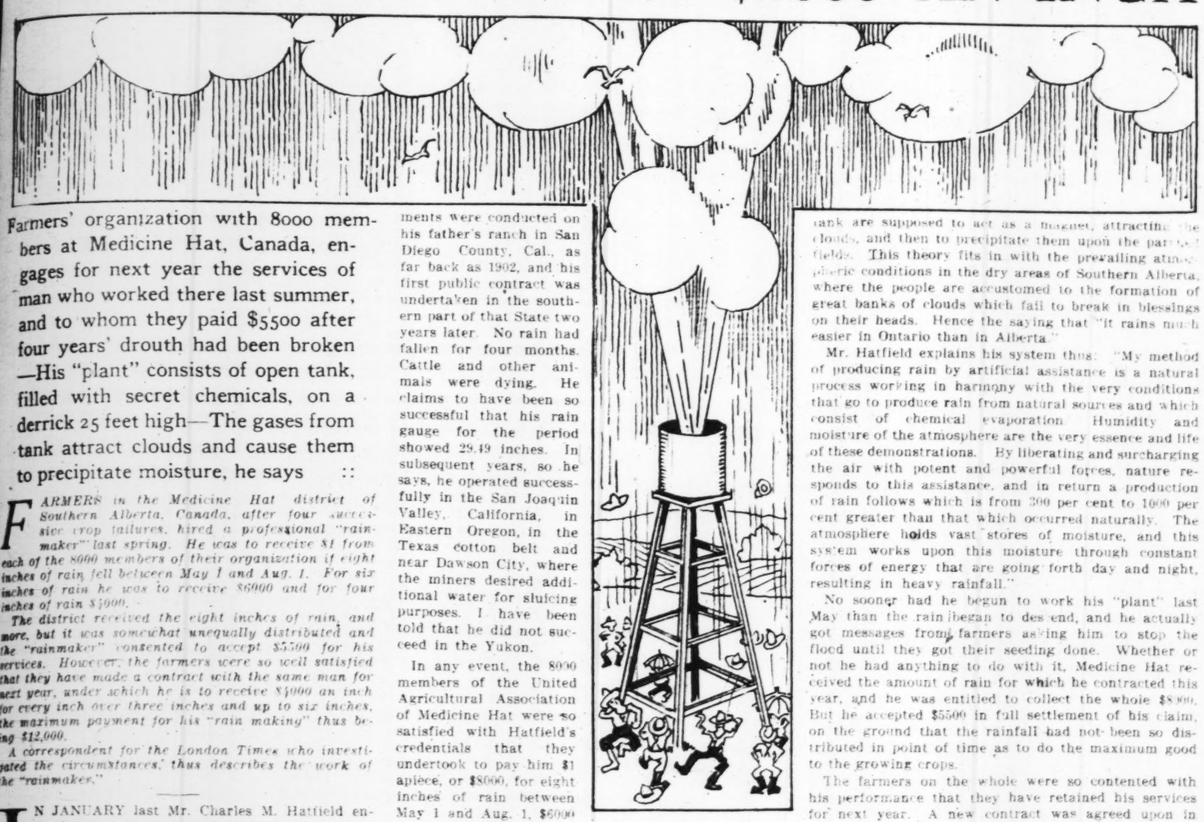
"MAKING" RAIN FOR $4000 AN INCH



Farmers' organization with 8000 members at Medicine Hat, Canada, engages for next year the services of man who worked there last summer, and to whom they paid $5500 after four years' drouth had been broken —His "plant" consists of open tank, filled with secret chemicals, on a derrick 25 feet high—The gases from tank attract clouds and cause them to precipitate moisture, he says ::

FARMERS in the Medicine Hat district of Southern Alberta, Canada, after four successive crop failures, hired a professional "rainmaker" last spring. He was to receive $1 from each of the 8000 members of their organization if eight inches of rain fell between May 1 and Aug. 1. For six inches of rain he was to receive $6000 and for four inches of rain $4000.

The district received the eight inches of rain, and more, but it was somewhat unequally distributed and the "rainmaker" consented to accept $5500 for his services. However, the farmers were so well satisfied that they have made a contract with the same man for next year, under which he is to receive $4000 an inch for every inch over three inches and up to six inches, the maximum payment for his "rain making" thus being $12,000.

A correspondent for the London Times who investigated the circumstances, thus describes the work of the "rainmaker."

IN JANUARY last Mr. Charles M. Hatfield entered into a contract to furnish the farmers of the Medicine Hat district in Southern Alberta with moisture from the sky at a specified price per inch. This particular part of the Province had suffered four successive crop failures, and the settlers were desperate. They heard of Mr. Hatfield, who was said to have worked wonders in certain states of the American Union, and sent for him. When he arrived there was some surprise that he was not dressed for the role of miracle worker. His hair, instead of being long and unkempt, was trimmed in the normal fashion, and he wore a neat suit. To all outward appearance he was just an ordinary man of business.

Mr. Hatfield states that the first successful experiments were conducted on his father's ranch in San Diego County, Cal., as far back as 1902, and his first public contract was undertaken in the southern part of that State two years later. No rain had fallen for four months. Cattle and other animals were dying. He claims to have been so successful that his rain gauge for the period showed 29.49 inches. In subsequent years, so he says, he operated successfully in the San Joaquin Valley, California, in Eastern Oregon, in the Texas cotton belt and near Dawson City, where the miners desired additional water for sluicing purposes. I have been told that he did not succeed in the Yukon.

In any event, the 8000 members of the United Agricultural Association of Medicine Hat were so satisfied with Hatfield's credentials that they undertook to pay him $1 apiece, or $8000, for eight inches of rain between May 1 and Aug. 1, $6000 for six inches and $4000 for four inches. In the view of at least one Government official the average rainfall in the district for the past 46 years made Hatfield's contract look attractive.

In the month of April, the rainmaker began his preparations by erecting his "plant" on the shore of Chappice Lake, 22 miles northeast of Medicine Hat. The site is 200 feet above the town and 2400 feet above the sea level. The "plant" consists of a derrick about 25 feet high, surmounted by an open tank filled with secret chemicals. The tower is guarded night and day.

What Mr. Hatfield claims to be able to do is to draw clouds from other parts of the country to the Medicine Hat district and then to relieve them of their moisture. The gases rising from the chemicals in the elevated tank are supposed to act as a magnet, attracting the clouds, and then to precipitate them upon the parched fields. This theory fits in with the prevailing atmospheric conditions in the dry areas of Southern Alberta, where the people are accustomed to the formation of great banks of clouds which fail to break in blessings on their heads. Hence the saying that "it rains much easier in Ontario than in Alberta."

Mr. Hatfield explains his system thus: "My method of producing rain by artificial assistance is a natural process working in harmony with the very conditions that go to produce rain from natural sources and which consist of chemical evaporation. Humidity and moisture of the atmosphere are the very essence and life of these demonstrations. By liberating and surcharging the air with potent and powerful forces, nature responds to this assistance, and in return a production of rain follows which is from 300 per cent to 1000 per cent greater than that which occurred naturally. The atmosphere holds vast stores of moisture, and this system works upon this moisture through constant forces of energy that are going forth day and night, resulting in heavy rainfall."

No sooner had he begun to work his "plant" last May than the rain began to descend, and he actually got messages from farmers asking him to stop the flood until they got their seeding done. Whether or not he had anything to do with it, Medicine Hat received the amount of rain for which he contracted this year, and he was entitled to collect the whole $8,000. But he accepted $5500 in full settlement of his claim, on the ground that the rainfall had not been so distributed in point of time as to do the maximum good to the growing crops.

The farmers on the whole were so contented with his performance that they have retained his services for next year. A new contract was agreed upon in which three inches of rain are allowed for natural precipitation during May, June and July, 1922, and Mr. Hatfield will receive $4000 an inch for every inch over three inches and up to six inches, the maximum amount to be paid being fixed at $12,000. He announces that Chappice Lake is not a good place for his "plant." He has learned the prevailing direction of the wind in the Medicine Hat area and will erect next year's tower 60 or 70 miles northwest of Medicine Hat, so as to intercept the maximum quantity of traveling clouds. In following this course Hatfield calculates that the action of his chemicals will cause the clouds to discharge their contents in the Medicine Hat district instead of drifting into Saskatchewan before unloading, as is too often their practice.

Tomb Found of Last Man Who Saw Jesus

of the Apostolic Age." Continuing, the author says: "At all events, he was spared. Some little time must have elapsed between his arrest at Ephesus and his condemnation at Rome. In that interval Domitian had become reassured as to the Christians' aims and had begun to relax his proceedings against them.

"Inspired from on high, this movement of clemency led the Magistrates to desist from further cruelties toward an aged man whom they had beheld snatched from death by a miracle; they were content with ordering his transportation to the Isle of Patmos, there to labor in the mines."

The period of St. John's life following his return to Ephesus, where he wrote the gospel bearing his name abounds with legends, most of which portray the impulsive and fiery, but affectionate, nature which the authentic records also ascribe to him.

Having converted a young man of unusual talents, John confided him to the care of the Bishop of the town where the young man lived and then departed. Despite the Bishop's care, evil companions exercised their influence on the convert. Long afterwards John returned to the same city, and inquired of the Bishop concerning the young man. The latter, weeping, replied that the youth was dead.

"What!" exclaimed John. "How did he die?"

"He is dead to God," replied the Bishop. "Lost in crimes, he has become leader of a band of brigands whose haunt is in a mountain nearby."

At these words the Apostle rent his garments. Groaning and beating his brows, he bade them bring him a horse and a guide, and at once set forth for the mountain. When halted by the outpost of the bandits, he demanded to be taken before their chief. As soon as the latter saw the Apostle coming, and recognized him, he fled in shame. Although feeble, John hastened after him, crying out:

"My son, why flee from me, your father, old and unarmed? Have pity on me, my son: fear naught. There is still hope of life and salvation for you. I will answer for you before Jesus Christ. If need be, I will die for you, as Jesus died for all of us. I will give my soul for yours. Stay; believe me; it is the Christ that sendeth me."

The entreaties were heard by the young man, who stopped, threw down his weapons and with tears begged for forgiveness. Thereafter he became a steadfast Christian, says the old tradition.

Then there is the legend of the pheasant which the Apostle was fond of petting. A huntsman, finding him thus engaged, marveled that so holy a man could take pleasure in it.

"And thou," asked St. John, "dost thou keep the bow thou hast in thy hand always strung?"

"I unbend it and let it rest," replied the hunter, "so that at the proper time the bowstring may not have lost its springiness, but shoot forth the shaft the more vigorously."

"So it is with our minds," John answered; "if we never relax them, they cannot, in case of necessity, display all their energy."

On one point the traditions are unanimous: that John's death was as gentle as sleep. And an account written some 30 years afterwards says that John, forewarned by Jesus of his approaching end, ordered a grave to be dug, spread his mantle in it and laid himself down therein.

"Be with me, O Lord," he murmured, then addressing the disciples who were standing about him: "Peace be unto you all, my brethren," whereupon he passed away.

The tomb immediately acquired great renown, not only in Asia, but throughout all parts of the world where there were Christians. The legends of what transpired after his death do not show the same unanimity. One account says that "the disciples, on returning to the grave on the morrow, found the Apostle there no longer. They discovered only his sandals and the earth boiling up over the spot" where he had laid down to die.

But that St. John, "the disciple whom Jesus loved," lived for years at Ephesus, died and was buried there, is historical fact. And the discovery of his traditional tomb is one of the most romantic announcements of a generation.

sawing up and splitting huge mahogany logs for firewood. These valuable timbers, a shipwrecked cargo that had cost somebody a heavy loss, had washed up on the beach from the wreck of a freighter whose bones, at low water, could be seen rotting in the bay. With the wood aboard we turned our attention to water and cocoanuts and by Sunday evening, Aug. 28, we had everything aboard and were again ready for sea.

As we hoisted sail and passed out beyond the headlands, we were treated to a glorious sunset, which, although the sun itself was hidden from view, was so beautiful that it seemed as though it must have been arranged for us by the pirate guardians of Cocos Island as a bit of consolation for the disappointment we had suffered at their hands.

But we also had the consolation of knowing that many and many an expedition before ours had been turned back, baffled in the quest, leaving the names of their vessels, the dates, their port of registry and generally the captain's name graven deep into the boulders that strew the beach. Some of these inscriptions were cut by the pirates themselves and others were made by the crews of French and British men-of-war scouring the seas in search of the Jolly Rogers. His Majesty's steam frigate Sampson was there in 1824 and the frigate Les Deux Amis in 1797 carved her mark so deep that it is plainly visible today.

So it was we sailed away with a steady quartering wind and a following sea that brought us to anchor off Quarantine, Balboa, just six days later to the hour. There the boat was cleaned up, scraped, painted and gold while we of the crew said our good-bys and went our different ways. The captain alone remains at Balboa with his map and instruments, recruiting a huge gang of negroes to do the actual digging, which will be a gigantic task. But fearless old McGrath is undaunted still and confident that he will raise the capital necessary to go back to the island with the men and equipment needed to uncover the loot of Callao, Peru.

Miss Lulu Bett

BY ZONA GALE

Number Seven—In Which Lulu Reads a Letter

LYING awake sometime after midnight, Lulu heard the telephone ring. She heard Dwight's concerned "Is that so?" And his cheerful "Be right there."

Grandma Gates was sick, she heard him tell Ina. In a few moments he ran down the stairs. Next day they told how Dwight had sat for hours that night, holding Grandma Gates so that her back would rest easily and she could fight for her faint breath. The kind fellow had only about two hours of sleep the whole night long.

Next day there came a message from that woman who had brought up Dwight—"made him what he was," he often complacently accused her. It was a note on a postal card—she had often written a few lines on a postal card to say that she had sent the maple sugar, or could Ina get her some samples. Now she wrote a few lines on a postal card to say that she was going to die with cancer. Could Dwight and Ina come to her while she was still able to visit? If he was not too busy. * * *

Nobody saw the pity and terror of that postal card. They stuck it up by the kitchen clock to read over from time to time, and before they left, Dwight lifted the griddle of the cooking stove and burned the postal card.

And before they left Lulu said: "Dwight—you can't tell how long you'll be gone?"

"Of course not. How should I tell?"

"No. And that letter might come while you're away."

"Conceivably. Letters do come while a man's away."

"Dwight—I thought if you wouldn't mind if I opened it"——

"Opened it?"

"Yes. You see, it'll be about me—mostly."

"I should say that it'll be about my brother, mostly."

"But you know what I mean. You wouldn't mind if I did open it?"

"But you say you know what'll be in it."

"So I did know—till you—I've got to see that letter, Dwight."

"And so you shall. But not till I show it to you. My dear Lulu, you know how I hate having my mail interfered with."

She might have said: "Small souls always make a point of that." She said nothing. She watched them set off, and kept her mind on Ina's thousand injunctions.

"Don't let Di see much of Bobby Larkin. And, Lulu"—if it occurs to her to have Mr. Cornish come up to sing, of course, you ask him. You might ask him to supper. And don't let mother overdo. And, Lulu, now do watch Monona's handkerchief—the child will never take a clean one if I'm not here to tell her." * * *

She breathed injunctions to the very step of the bus. In the bus Dwight leaned forward.

"See that you play postoffice squarely, Lulu!" he called, and threw back his head and lifted his eyebrows.

In the train he turned tragic eyes to his wife.

"Ina," he said, "it's ma. And she's going to die. It can't be."

Ina said: "But you're going to help her, Dwight, just being there with her."

It was true that the mere presence of the man would bring a kind of fresh life to that worn frame. Tact and wisdom and love would speak through him and minister.

Toward the end of their week's absence the letter from Ninian came.

Lulu took it from the postoffice when she went for the mail that evening, dressed in her dark red gown. There was no other letter, and she carried that one letter in her hand all through the streets. She passed those who were surmising what her story might be, who were telling one another what they had heard. But she knew hardly more than they. She passed Cornish in the doorway of his little music shop, and spoke to him; and there was the letter. It was so that Dwight's foster-mother's postal card might have looked on its way to be mailed.

Cornish stepped down and overtook her.

"Oh, Miss Lulu. I've got a new song or two"——

She said, abstractedly: "Do. Any night. Tomorrow night—could you"—— It was as if Lulu were too preoccupied to remember to be ill at ease.

Cornish flushed with pleasure, said that he could, indeed. "Come for supper," Lulu said.

Oh, could he! Wouldn't that be . . . Well, say! Such was his acceptance.

He came for supper. And Di was not at home. She had gone off in the country with Jenny and Bobby, and they merely did not return.

Mrs. Bett and Lulu and Cornish and Monona supped alone. All were at ease, now that they were alone. Especially Mrs. Bett was at ease. It became one of her young nights, her alive and lucid nights. She was there. She sat in Dwight's chair and Lulu sat in Ina's chair. Lulu had picked flowers for the table—a task coveted by her but usually performed by Ina. Lulu had now picked Sweet William and had filled a vase of silver gilt taken from the parlor. Also, Lulu had made ice cream.

"I don't see what Di can be thinking of," Lulu said. "It seems like asking you under false"—— She was afraid of "pretenses" and ended without it.

Cornish savored his steaming beef pie, with sage. "Oh, well!" he said, contentedly.

"Kind of relief, I think, to have her gone," said Mrs. Bett, from the fullness of something or other.

"Mother!" Lulu said, twisting her smile.

"Why, my land, I love her," Mrs. Bett explained, "but she wiggles and chitters."

Cornish never made the slightest effort, at any time, to keep a straight face. The honest fellow now laughed loudly.

"Well!" Lulu thought. "He can't be so very much in love." And again she thought: "He doesn't know anything about the letter. He thinks Ninian got tired of me." Deep in her heart there abode her certainty that this was not so.

By some etiquette of consent, Mrs. Bett cleared the table and Lulu and Cornish went into the parlor. There lay the letter on the drop-leaf table, among the shells. Lulu had carried it there, where she need not see it at her work. The letter looked no more than the advertisement of dental office furniture beneath it. Monona stood indifferently fingering both.

"Monona," Lulu said, sharply, "leave them be!"

Cornish was displaying his music. "Got up quite attractive," he said—it was his formula of praise for his music.

"But we can't try it over," Lulu said, "if Di doesn't come."

"Well, say," said Cornish, shyly, "you know I left that 'Album of Old Favorites' here. Some of them we know by heart."

Lulu looked. "I'll tell you something," she said, "there's some of these I can play with one hand—by ear. Maybe"——

"Why, sure!" said Cornish.

Lulu sat at the piano. She had on the wool chally, long sacred to the nights when she must combine her servant's estate with the quality of being Ina's sister. She wore her coral beads and her cameo crosa. In her absence she had caught the trick of dressing her hair so that it looked even more abundant—but she had not dared to try it so until tonight, when Dwight was gone. Her long wrist was curved high, her thin hand pressed and fingered awkwardly, and at her mistakes her head dipped and strove to make all right. Her foot continuously touched the loud pedal—the blurred sound seemed to accomplish more. So she played "How Can I Leave Thee," and they managed to sing it. So she played "Long, Long Ago," and "Little Nell of Narragansett Bay." Beyond open doors, Mrs. Bett listened, sang, it may be, with them; for when the singers ceased her voice might be heard still humming a loud closing bar.

"Well!" Cornish cried to Lulu; and then, in the formal village phrase: "You're quite a musician."

"Oh, no!" Lulu disclaimed it. She looked up, flushed, smiling. "I've never done this in front of anybody," she owned. "I don't know what Dwight and Ina'd say"—— She drooped.

They rested; and, miraculously, the air of the place had stirred and quickened, as if the crippled, halting melody had some power of its own, and poured this forth, even thus trampled.

"I guess you would do 'most anything you set your hand to," said Cornish.

"Oh, no," Lulu said again.

"Sing and play and cook"——

"But I can't earn anything. I'd like to earn something." But this she had not meant to say. She stopped, rather frightened.

"You would! Why, you have it fine here, I thought."

"Oh, fine, yes. Dwight gives me what I have. And I do their work."

"I see," said Cornish. "I never thought of that," he added. She caught his speculative look—he had heard a tale or two concerning her return, as who in Warbleton had not heard?

"You're wondering why I didn't stay with him!" Lulu said, recklessly. This was no less than wrung from her, but its utterance occasioned her an unspeakable relief.

"Oh, no," Cornish disclaimed, and colored and rocked.

"Yes, you are," she swept on. "The whole town's wondering. Well, I'd like 'em to know, but Dwight won't let me tell."

Cornish frowned, trying to understand.

"Won't let you!" he repeated. "I should say t' t was your own affair."

"No. Not when Dwight gives me all I have."

"Oh, that"—said Cornish. "That's not right."

"No. But there it is. It puts me—you see what it does to me. They think—they all think—my husband left me."

"Well!" Cornish cried to Lulu: and then, in the formal village phrase: "You're quite a musician."

It was curious to hear her bring out that word—tentatively, deprecatingly, like someone daring a foreign phrase without warrant.

Cornish said, feebly: "Oh, we——

Before she willed it, she was telling him:

"He didn't. He didn't leave me," she cried with passion. "He had another wife." Incredibly, it was as if she were defending both him and herself.

"Lord sakes!" said Cornish.

She poured it out, in her passion to tell someone, to share her news of her state where there would be neither hardness nor censure.

"We were in Savannah, Georgia," she said. "We were going to leave for Oregon—going to go through California. We were in the hotel, and he was going out to get the tickets. He started to go. Then he came back. I was sitting the same as there. He opened the door again—the same as here. I saw he looked different—and he said quick: 'There's something you'd ought to know before we go.' And, of course, I said, 'What!' And he said it right out—how he was married 18 years ago and in two years she ran away and she must be dead, but he wasn't sure. He hadn't the proofs. So, of course, I came home. But it wasn't him left me."

"No, no. Of course he didn't," Cornish said, earnestly. "But Lord sakes"—he said again. He rose to walk about, found it impracticable and sat down.

me to tell—he thinks it isn't true. He thinks—he didn't have any other wife. He thinks he wanted"—Lulu looked up at him. "You see," she said, "Dwight thinks he didn't want me."

"But why don't you make your—husband—I mean, why doesn't he write to Mr. Deacon here, and tell him the truth?" Cornish burst out.

Under this implied belief, she relaxed and into her face came its rare sweetness.

"He has written," she said. "The letter's there."

He followed her look, scowled at the two letters.

"What'd he say?"

"Dwight don't like me to touch his mail. I'll have to wait till he comes back."

"Lord sakes!" said Cornish.

This time he did rise and walk about. He wanted to say something, wanted it with passion. He paused beside Lulu and stammered:

"You—you—you're too nice a girl to get a deal like this. Darned if you aren't."

To her own complete surprise, Lulu's eyes filled with tears, and she could not speak. She was by no means above self-sympathy.

"And there ain't," said Cornish, sorrowfully, "there ain't a thing I can do."

And yet he was doing much. He was gentle, he was listening, and on his face a frown of concern. His face continually surprised her, it was so fine and alive and near, by comparison with Ninian's loose-lipped, ruddy, impersonal look and Dwight's thin, high-boned hardness. All the time Cornish gave her something, instead of drawing upon her. Above all, he was there, and she could talk to him.

"It's—it's funny," Lulu said. "I'd be awful glad if I just could know for sure that the other woman was alive—if I could know she's dead."

This surprising admission Cornish seemed to understand.

"Sure you would," he said, briefly.

"Cora Waters," Lulu said. "Cora Waters of San Diego, California. And she never heard of me."

"No," Cornish admitted. They stared at each other as across some abyss.

In the doorway Mrs. Bett appeared.

"I scraped up everything," she remarked, "and left the dishes set."

"That's right, mamma," Lulu said. "Come and sit down."

Mrs. Bett entered with a leisurely air of doing the thing next expected of her.

"I don't hear any more playin' and singin'," she remarked. "It sounded real nice."

"We—we sung all I knew how to play, I guess, mamma."

"I use' to play on the melodeon," Mrs. Bett volunteered, and spread and examined her right hand.

"Well!" said Cornish.

She now told them about her log house in a New England clearing, when she was a bride. All her store of drama and life came from her. She rehearsed it with far eyes. She laughed at old delights, drooped at old fears. She told about her little daughter who had died at 16—a tragedy such as once would have been renewed in a vital ballad. At the end she yawned frankly, as if, in some terrible sophistication, she had been telling the story of someone else.

"Give us one more piece," she said.

"Can we?" Cornish asked.

"I can play 'I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old,'" Lulu said.

"That's the ticket!" cried Cornish.

They sang it, to Lulu's right hand.

"That's the one you picked out when you was a little girl, Lulie," cried Mrs. Bett.

Lulu had played it now as she must have played it then.

Half after nine Di had not returned. But nobody thought of Di. Cornish rose to go.

"What's them?" Mrs. Bett demanded.

"Dwight's letters, mamma. You mustn't touch them!" Lulu's voice was sharp.

"Say!" Cornish, at the door, dropped his voice. "If there was anything I could do at any time, you'd let me know, wouldn't you?"

That past tense, those subjunctives, unconsciously called upon her to feel no intrusion.

"Oh, thank you," she said. "You don't know how good it is to feel"——

"Of course it is," said Cornish, heartily.

They stood for a moment on the porch. The night was one of low clamor from the grass, tiny voices, insisting.

"Of course," said Lulu, "of course, you won't—you wouldn't"——

"Say anything?" he divined. "Not for dollars. Not," he repeated, "for dollars."

"But I knew you wouldn't," she told him.

He took her hand. "Good-night," he said. "I've had an awful nice time, singing and listening to you talk—

"I opened it—why, of course I did. It's from Ninian."

well, of course—I mean," he cried, "the supper was just fine. And so was the music."

"Oh, no," she said.

Mrs. Bett came into the hall.

"Lulie," she said, "I guess you didn't notice—this one's from Ninian."

"Mother"——

"I opened it—why, of course I did. It's from Ninian."

Mrs. Bett held out the opened envelope, the unfolded letter, and a yellowed newspaper clipping.

"See," said the old woman. It says, 'Corie Waters, music hall singer—married last night to Ninian Deacon'—— Say, Lulie, that must be her"——

Lulu threw out her hands.

"There!" she cried, triumphantly. "He was married to her, just like he said!"

The Plows were at breakfast next morning when Lulu came in casually at the side door. Yes, she said, she had had breakfast. She merely wanted to see them about something. Then she said nothing, but sat looking with a troubled frown at Jenny. Jenny's hair was about her neck, like the hair of a little girl, a south window poured light upon her, the fruit and honey upon the table seemed her only possible food.

"You look troubled, Lulu," Mrs. Plow said. "Is it about getting work?"

"No," said Lulu. "No, I've been places to ask—quite a lot of places. I guess the bakery is going to let me make cake."

"I knew it would come to you," Mrs. Plow said, and Lulu thought that this was a strange way to speak, when she herself had gone after the cakes. But she kept on looking about the room. It was so bright and quiet. As she came in, Mr. Plow had been reading from a book. Dwight never read from a book at table.

"I wish"— said Lulu, as she looked at them. But she did not know what she wished. Certainly it was for no moral excellence, for she perceived none.

"What is it, Lulu?" Mr. Plow asked, and he was bright and quiet, too, Lulu thought.

"Well," said Lulu, "it's not much. But I wanted Jenny to tell me about last night."

"Last night?"

"Yes. Would you"—— Hesitation was her only way of apology. "Where did you go?" She turned to Jenny.

Jenny looked up in her clear and ardent fashion. "We went across the river and carried supper and then we came home."

"What time did you get home?"

"Oh, it was still light. Long before 8, it was."

Lulu hesitated and flushed, asked, how long Di and Bobby had stayed there at Jenny's, whereupon she heard that Di had to be home early on account of Mr. Cornish, so that she and Bobby had not stayed at all. To which Lulu said an "of course," but first she stared at Jenny and so impaired the strength of her assent. Almost at once she rose to go.

"Nothing else?" said Mrs. Plow, catching that look of hers.

Lulu wanted to say: "My husband was married before, just as he said he was." But she said nothing more and went home. There she put it to Di, and with her terrible bluntness reviewed to Di the testimony.

"You were not with Jenny after 8 o'clock. Where were you?" Lulu spoke formally and her rehearsals were evident.

Di said: "When mamma comes home, I'll tell her."

With this Lulu had no idea how to deal, and merely looked at her helplessly. Mrs. Bett, who was lacing her shoes, now said, casually:

"No need to wait till then. Her and Bobby were out in the side yard sitting in the hammock till all hours."

Di had no answer save her furious flush, and Mrs. Bett went on:

"Didn't I tell you? I knew it before the company left, but I didn't say a word. Thinks I, 'She's wiggles and chitters.' So I left her stay where she was."

"But, mother!" Lulu cried. "You didn't even tell me after he'd gone."

"I forgot it," Mrs. Bett said, "finding Ninian's letter and all"—— She talked of Ninian's letter.

Di was bright and alert and firm of flesh and erect before Lulu's softness and laxness.

"I don't know what your mother'll say," said Lulu, "and I don't know what people'll think."

"They won't think Bobby and I are tired of each other, anyway," said Di, and left the room.

Through the day Lulu tried to think what she must do. About Di she was anxious and felt without power. She thought of the indignation of Dwight and Ina that Di had not been more scrupulously guarded. She thought of Di's girlish folly, her irritating independence—"and there," Lulu thought, "just the other day I was teaching her to sew." Her mind dwelt, too, on Dwight's furious anger at the opening of Ninian's letter. But when all this had spent itself, what was she herself to do? She must leave this house before he ordered her to do so, when she told him that she had confided in Cornish, as she must. But what was she to do? The bakery cake making would not give her a roof.

Stepping about the kitchen in her blue cotton gown, her hair tight and flat as seemed proper when one was not dressed, she thought about these things. And it was strange: Lulu bore no physical appearance of one in distress or anxiety. Her head was erect, her movements were strong and swift, her eyes were interested. She was no drooping Lulu with dragging step. She was more intent, she was somehow more operative than she had ever been.

Mrs. Bett was working contentedly beside her, and now and then humming an air of that music of the night before. The sun surged through the kitchen door and east window, a returned oriole swung and fluted on the elm above the gable. Wagons clattered by over the rattling wooden-block pavement.

"Ain't it nice with nobody home?" Mrs. Bett remarked at intervals, like the burden of a comic song.

"Hush, mother," Lulu said, troubled, her ethical refinements conflicting with her honesty.

"Speak the truth and shame the devil," Mrs. Bett contended.

When dinner was ready at noon Di did not appear. A little earlier Lulu had heard her moving about her room, and she served her in expectation that she would join them.

"Di must be having the 'tantrim' this time," she thought, and for a time said nothing. But at length she did say: "Why doesn't Di come? I'd better put her plate in the oven."

Rising to do so, she was arrested by her mother. Mrs. Bett was eating a baked potato, holding her fork close to the tines, and presenting a profile of passionate absorption.

"Why, Di went off," she said.

"Went off!"

"Down the walk. Down the sidewalk."

"She must have gone to Jenny's," said Lulu. "I wish she wouldn't do that without telling me."

Monona laughed out and shook her straight hair. "She'll catch it!" she cried, in sisterly enjoyment.

It was when Lulu had come back from the kitchen and was seated at the table that Mrs. Bett observed:

"I didn't think Inie'd want her to take her nice new satchel."

"Her satchel?"

"Yes. Inie wouldn't take it north herself, but Di had it."

"Mother," said Lulu, "when Di went away just now, was she carrying a satchel?"

"Didn't I just tell you?" Mrs. Bett demanded, aggrieved. "I said I didn't think Inie"——

"Mother! Which way did she go?"

Monona pointed with her spoon. "She went that way," she said. "I seen her."

New Proof That American Indian Came From Asia

paratively late date, not traceable to the beliefs and legends brought over by the earliest arrivals. This fact led to the speculation that, at some comparatively recent period, Buddhist priests had made their way to America to preach their gospel. One authority has gone so far as to suggest that the divinity heroes—Quetzalcoatl of Mexico, Bohica of Bogota and Manco Capac of Peru, were Buddhist priests from Asia, who, by reason of their superior intelligence and craft, succeeded in establishing themselves.

This theory is not widely held. That men of comparatively mature age, as the fact of priesthood would indicate, could make the incredibly long and hazardous journey from India to Mexico or South America, and still have time to set themselves up as Kings, and rule for a considerable period, is too much for considered belief. The journey alone probably would have consumed a lifetime. It is more likely that these aspects of Buddhist culture, if such they were, came by slow and laborious stages, much as the original wave of immigration is believed to have progressed.

Language, for example, is regarded as a valuable index to origin. No evidence has yet come to light of a New World language whose stock can be traced to the Old World. The only language that occurs in both Asia and America is Eskimo, which is represented in Asia only by the speech of a few villages in the extreme tip of the Siberian peninsulas, a fact explainable by their nearness to Alaska.

The Mongoloid-Red strain had been described as a vast crescent, with one tip at Cape Horn, extending upward through South and North America, curving through Alaska and the Siberian tip, then downward through Asia, with the other tip resting near the Baltic or Mediterranean.

One of its striking general characteristics was a failure to develop nationalism; on both sides of the Pacific this character was apparent. Tradition and tribalism were distinguishing features of their [illegible]. In the main, they were a virile horde of hunting [illegible] fishing folk, most at home in cold, semi-arid [illegible].

But in Asia and America alike, the most complex civilization was developed in the South: in Asia, China; in America, Yucatan and Peru.

In conclusion, reference may be made to the interesting hypothesis suggested by Clark Wissler, one of the greatest authorities on this subject. It is, that the New World originally received a small detachment of settlers from Asia, at the time that stone polishing was in use, or earlier. That, later, the Arctic ice cap pushed south far enough to cut off further passage by way of the Behring Strait, and that the pioneers, thus isolated from their place of origin, developed their own civilization. Later, the ice cap may have receded, opening the route to a much later inflow of Asiatics, thus explaining not only the peculiar culture of early Americans, but traces of subsequent Asiatic influence.

MISS LULU BETT --

Lulu looked toward the clock. For Monona had pointed toward the railway station. The 12:30 train, which everyone took to the city for shopping, would be just about leaving.

"Monona," said Lulu, "don't you go out of the yard while I'm gone. Mother, you keep her"——

Lulu ran from the house and up the street. She was in her blue cotton dress, her old shoes, she was hatless and without money. When she was still two or three blocks from the station, she heard the 12:30 "pulling out."

She ran badly, her ankles in their low, loose shoes continually turning, her arms held taut at her sides. So she came down the platform, and to the ticket window. The contained ticket man, wonted to lost trains and perturbed faces, yet actually ceased counting when he saw her:

"Lenny! Did Di Deacon take that train?"

"Sure she did," said Lenny.

"And Bobby Larkin?" Lulu cared nothing for appearances now.

"He went on the local," said Lenny, and his eyes widened.

"Where?"

"See." Lenny thought it through. "Milton," he said. "Yes, sure. Milton. Both of 'em."

"How long till another train?"

"Well, sir," said the ticket man, "you're in luck, if you was goin', too. Seventeen was late this morning—she'll be along, jerk of a lamb's tail."

"Then," said Lulu, "you got to give me a ticket to Milton, without me paying till after—and you got to lend me $2."

"Sure thing," said Lenny, with the manner of laying the entire railroad system at her feet.

"Seventeen" would rather not have stopped at Warbleton, but Lenny's signal was law on the time card, and the magnificent yellow express slowed down for Lulu. Hatless and in her blue cotton gown, she climbed aboard.

Then her old inefficiency seized upon her. What was she going to do? Milton! She had been there but once, years ago—how could she ever find anybody? Why had she not stayed in Warbleton and asked the Sheriff or somebody—no, not the Sheriff. Cornish, perhaps. Oh, and Dwight and Ina were going to be angry now! And Di—little Di. As Lulu thought of her she began to cry. She said to herself that she had taught Di how to sew.

In sight of Milton, Lulu was seized with trembling and physical nausea. She had never been alone in any unfamiliar town. She put her hands to her hair and for the first time realized her rolled-up sleeves. She was pulling down these sleeves when the conductor came through the train.

"Could you tell me," she said, timidly, "the name of the principal hotel in Milton?"

Ninian had asked this as they neared Savannah, Ga.

The conductor looked curiously at her.

"Why, the Hess House," he said. "Wasn't you expecting anybody to meet you?" he asked kindly.

"No," said Lulu, "but I'm going to find my folks"—— Her voice trailed away.

"Beats all," thought the conductor, using his utility formula for the universe.

In Milton Lulu's inquiry for the Hess House produced no consternation. No body paid any attention to her. She was almost certainly taken to be a new servant there.

"You stop feeling so!" she said to herself, angrily, at the lobby entrance. "Ain't you been to that big hotel in Savannah, Georgia?"

The Oldest Man in the World

Just part of a skull, two molar teeth and a thigh bone! Pieced together they made—what? One of the most perplexing mysteries in the study of human history.

Were these the remains of an ape-like man who lived 500,000 years ago?

Scientists believe that they were; they call him the "Dawn Man," and out of the record embedded in the rocks they have reconstructed the conditions of his life. How he killed his food and tore the raw flesh from the bones; how he married and fought and died! How little by little he clawed and clubbed his way up to mastery over the beasts. It is a fascinating, gripping story, but it is only one of a thousand stories that stir your blood in this greatest book of modern times.

Imagine a book that begins 10,000,000 or 100,000,000 years ago; imagine being carried down through the ages from one dramatic scene to another—as if you sat in a motion-picture theater and saw the whole drama of the human race displayed on the screen before you—imagine the thrill of such an experience and you have some conception of

H. G. WELLS'
OUTLINE OF HISTORY
Now Offered You at ⅓ the Original Price

A history that goes back 100,000,000 years—that traces man's rude beginnings 500,000 years ago—that follows him down through the prehistoric ages to the Babylon of Nebuchadnezzar, the Athens of Pericles, the Egypt of Cleopatra, the Asia of Genghis Khan, the France of Napoleon, the England of Gladstone, the America of today, through the World War and on into the future of "The United States of the World," giving you all history in one story—THAT is Wells.

PERHAPS you think the Roman Empire existed long ago—perhaps you think of the old Greek and Roman civilization as "Ancient History."

Not a bit of it. Compared with the many centuries of life that Wells tells about, these empires flourished only yesterday. Wells begins at the real beginning, and down through the centuries he carries you, upsetting fairy stories that you have heard all your life—amazing you often; startling you in almost every chapter; but entertaining you on every page as you have never imagined that you could be entertained by history. This is Wells; and we offer him to you now—at

A Bargain You Will Never Get Again

"The man who finishes this volume will be an educated man, however much, however little he knew when he started."—Baltimore Evening Sun.

There you have it in a sentence—the reason why 250,000 men and women have paid $10.50 for Wells' Outline and felt they were getting it cheap. The Outline is more than a history—it is an education—the orderly knowledge of human progress which men go to college four years to get—and often come away without.

Volunterily Wells has slashed his royalties 85% and entered into a contract with the Review of Reviews by which one edition and only one—of the Outline can be offered to Americans—to you—at a fraction of the former price.

Think of it—the original plates and illustrations; but revised by Wells himself and printed in one handy volume instead of two.

This means we must get quantity prices on printing and paper; but it means, most important of all, that we Must Know How Many to Print

Shall the edition be 50,000? Or 100,000? Or 500,000? We must know in advance. We cannot print a second time; we cannot supply those who come too late.

As the New Republic truly says: "The Outline is too big even for publishers' superlatives." Without superlatives, therefore, let us say very earnestly: If you want the opportunity of examining Wells' Outline free in your own home for a week, do not lay this page down until you have made your reservation by clipping the coupon.

And the Review of Reviews Too

For thirty years the standard of usefulness and authority

Where Wells' story leaves off, the Review of Reviews takes up the record of human achievement. His is the history of the past; the Review of Reviews is the throbbing, thrilling history of today. It is fitting that the two should be joined together; and only by joining them can we make the remarkable offer detailed on the coupon below.

Do You Know?

How Methuselah and the other patriarchs attained such extraordinary length of life?

How many thousands of years ago men knew how to brew intoxicating drinks?

What was the real reason for the destruction of Babylon?

That primitive man did not know that children had fathers?

How men communicated with each other before they could talk?

How a simple device on Carthaginian ships changed the fate of the world?

Which of the world's evils came nearest to destroying all mankind?

Why frequent bathing was in some nations considered immoral?

What there was in the "Book of Sports" that infuriated the Puritans?

That Nero had elevators in his palace at Rome?

Conspicuous nose pores grow larger if neglected

THE pores of your face are not as fine as those on other parts of your body.

On the nose, especially, there are more fat glands, and there is more activity of the pores. If these pores are not properly stimulated and cleansed, they clog up and become enlarged.

To reduce enlarged pores, follow every night this simple treatment:

WRING a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face.

When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's.

Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive.

Finish by rubbing the nose for 30 seconds with a piece of ice.

GET a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and see what an improvement this treatment will make the first time you use it.

Do not expect to change in a week a condition resulting from long neglect. But follow the treatment persistently and you will be able to reduce the enlarged pores and make them inconspicuous.

A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's lasts for a month or six weeks of this treatment and for general cleansing use. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati. New York and Perth, Ontario.

A very common cause of constipation

Poor appetite is now known to be an important factor in this condition

A RECOGNIZED authority on the subject of constipation maintains that "a poor appetite is a very common cause of constipation, especially in women." A certain quantity of food is necessary for the intestines to function normally.

The same authority also says: "Insufficient food leads directly to emaciation and physical weakness as well as to constipation; it causes the already depressed nervous system to deteriorate still further, and this reacts again on the digestion, so that the dyspepsia and constipation become more severe."

Under such conditions Fleischmann's Yeast has remarkable value as a laxative food and conditioner. It furnishes a large amount of the water-soluble vitamine which helps all the processes of digestion, and, in addition, because of its freshness (you get it fresh daily) it helps the intestines in their elimination of poisonous waste matter. Thousands are adding Fleischmann's Yeast to their daily diet, and by eating regularly from 2 to 3 cakes a day are restoring and maintaining normal action of the bowels.

Fleischmann's Yeast is a pure, fresh food assimilated like any other familiar food. Eat it daily—have it on the table at home. Have it at your office and eat it at your desk. Get it at your lunch place. You will like its fresh, distinctive flavor, and the clean, wholesome taste it leaves in your mouth. Only one precaution: if troubled with gas dissolve the yeast first in very hot water. This does not affect the efficacy of the yeast. Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast.

Send 4 cents in stamps for the booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." So many inquiries are coming in daily for this booklet, that it is necessary to make this nominal charge to cover cost of handling and mailing. Address THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY, 701 Washington Street, New York City.

The need for scientifically tested yeast

Fresh yeast has been proved by recent scientific tests to be a valuable food for correcting run-down condition, constipation, indigestion, and certain skin disorders. These original tests were all made with Fleischmann's Yeast. Beware of untested yeast-vitamine preparations that contain drugs or other mixtures. Fleischmann's Yeast, fresh, is a pure food, rich in vitamine, in which it measures up to the high standards set by laboratories and hospitals. The familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label is the only form in which Fleischmann's Yeast for Health is sold.
